PRICE OF CONSOLS, 1840–1909.

THE following table shows the average price of Consols for the seventy years named from 1840 to 1909. The rate of interest was 3% from 1840 to 1888; it was lowered to 2¾% in March, 1888, and to 2½% in April, 1903. The Table of Equivalent Investments (p. 426) shows the relative prices at the three rates of interest, e.g., 2½% Consols return £3 2*s.* 6*d.* per cent. at the price of 80, while 2¾% Consols return £3 2*s.* 6*d.* at 88, and 3% Consols return £3 2*s.* 6*d.* at 96.

DIVIDENDS are paid :—

On Sterling Stocks transferable in the Bank Books—(1) Warrants will be sent by Post—(a) To Sole or First Stockholders without application, in the absence of any instructions to the contrary. (b) To any Stockholder, Executor, or Administrator, other than the Sole, or First, Stockholder, Executor, or Administrator, or to any Person, Firm, or Company, upon the written Request, in the prescribed form, of all the Stockholders, Executors, or Administrators. (2) Dividends will be paid to any Stockholder, Executor, or Administrator, personally attending at the Bank, on his written Request, in the case of a Sole Account, or on the written Request of all the Stockholders, Executors, or Administrators, in the case of a Joint Account. . The Request in either case must be in the prescribed form.

On Indian Railway and Thames Conservancy Debenture Stocks, Chinese 5% and 4½% Stocks, Greek 2½% Stock, Japanese 5% Stock, and Corporation of London 2½% Debenture Stock—by transmission of Warrants through the Post to the Stockholders or their Nominees.

On Indian Rupee Promissory Notes and Registered Stock—(a) On personal application at the India Office, Bank of England :—to the owner of the Notes or Stock; or, to his Attorney or Agent. (b) By Post :—to the owner of the Notes or Stock; or, to his Attorney or Agent.

Dividends on Promissory Notes and Registered Stock are paid by Bills of Exchange on India, commonly called Interest Bills. (As an Interest Bill is payable in India in Rupees, the Bill is usually sold in London, for Sterling, at the Exchange of the day, through a Banker or Agent.)

HOURS, &c.—The Dividend Office is open from 9 A.M. to 4 P.M. (1 P.M. Saturdays).

The India Office (Bank of England) is open from 9.30 A.M. to 4 P.M. (1 P.M. Saturdays).

INVESTMENT OF DIVIDENDS.—Holders of certain stocks in amounts of less than £1,000 may instruct the Bank to receive and invest their dividends by filling up forms, to be obtained at the Head Office, at any of the Branches, or at any Money Order Office. A commission is charged of 1*d.* per £, or part of a £, with 3*d.* additional for each advice of a purchase, should such advice be required.

TRANSFER DAYS, any day but Saturday; Instructions 9.30 to 1 (to 3, fee 2*s.* 6*d.*); Executions 11 to 3; Acceptances 9.30 to 4 (Saturdays to 1). Transfers made on Saturdays (between 11 and 12.30) are charged a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.*

* When the due date of the Dividends falls on a Sunday or Bank Holiday, the Dividends are payable on the business-day next ensuing.

THE list on the following two pages contains the names of all the more important British Life offices, of eight Colonial companies (marked C), and of three American offices (marked A).

DATE OF FORMATION.—This is important, as in young companies the normal rate of mortality is not experienced, whilst expenses are necessarily greater owing to the larger proportion of new business.

CLASS OF BUSINESS.—The second column shows whether the company is conducted on the Mutual system (M), whereby the whole of the surplus or profits are allotted to participating policyholders, or whether the company has proprietors by whom part of the surplus is received (P). Life offices transacting other insurance business are indicated by letters in this column. In such cases the Life funds are kept separately, and are not liable for the claims of other departments. The Share Capital is usually liable for the claims of all branches. The companies in the first part of the Table all transact "ordinary" Life business; the figures for Industrial business are stated separately where available.

FIGURES.—These are taken from the latest annual accounts available at date of going to press, and in the majority of cases refer to annual reports for the financial year ended 31 December, 1909.

LIFE FUNDS.—The amounts of these funds, though interesting, are not in themselves a sufficient indication of the financial stability of a company, which cannot be judged unless liabilities are considered as well as assets.

PREMIUM INCOME.—The annual premium income is in all cases stated after deduction of the amount paid to other companies for reassuring parts of such risks.

EXPENSES.—The expenses of a Life office include, in all cases where paid, commission to agents. The amount of expenses is less important in itself than in relation to premium income, consequently the percentage of the premium income absorbed in expenses is shown. The average percentage of British offices is about 14½%, of which about 5½% is expended on commission and 9% on other expenses. This ratio taken by itself is frequently misleading, because, if the proportion of new business is large, the percentage of the total premiums absorbed in expenses may legitimately be higher than where the new business is small.

INTEREST.—The rate of interest earned is important for comparison with the rate assumed in valuing liabilities, since the greater the margin between these rates the greater is the surplus, and, speaking generally, the larger the bonus. The rate of interest earned is generally estimated by dividing 100 times the amount of interest, less Income Tax, by the mean of the funds at beginning and end of year after deducting half a year's interest from the mean fund. In some cases, however, this does not quite accurately represent the yield, owing to the manner in which profit on reversions is dealt with by individual offices.

VALUATIONS.—The last two columns of the table are derived from the valuation returns made by the companies to the Board of Trade. A valuation indicates liability under existing policies, after making allowance for the amounts to be paid and received. It is assumed that deaths will occur in accordance with a mortality table, and that interest will be earned at a certain rate. Various mortality tables are employed, those most usual being known as the H^m and O^m, and the corresponding Tables $H^{m(5)}$ and $O^{m(5)}$ which exclude mortality in the first five years of assurance. If a company assumes that it will earn a high rate of interest in the future, the net liability will appear less than if it assumes a low rate, while the liability on account of mortality appears greater by some tables than by others. The position of an office is most satisfactory when a stringent basis of valuation is adopted, because the margin between the calculated and experienced liability is larger and the surplus available for bonuses is greater. The O^m and $O^{m(5)}$ tables in conjunction are more stringent than the O^m table alone, the H^m is more stringent than the American, and with every table the lower the rate of interest assumed the more stringent is the valuation.

The O^m Tables, which are founded on the latest and largest Life assurance experience, usually require slightly stronger reserves than the H^m.

ADVICE REGARDING LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITIES.

The selection by an intending proposer for Life assurance of the office best suited to his requirements and likely to produce the best results should be carefully made under reliable expert advice. Whilst we have above indicated some points for consideration, the study of any tables or suggestions is not sufficient to enable any person without technical knowledge to gauge accurately the respective merits and attractions of the various companies transacting Life assurance. There are many good offices, but in the very best and most select class some are better adapted than others for particular purposes, and large sums may be saved or earned by intending proposers during the continuance of a policy, which may be life-long, through the precaution having been taken of obtaining reliable advice before a proposal is made.

On receipt of an inquiry containing full particulars in regard to the matter on which advice is desired, accompanied by a remittance of a fee of 5s., addressed to the Publishers of WHITAKER'S ALMANACK, 12, Warwick Lane, Paternoster Row, E.C., and marked "Insurance," the Insurance Editor will be prepared—

(1) To advise any intending assurant as to the system and descriptions of policies best adapted to suit the special circumstances as described, and to assist inquirer in the choice of the Life office which seems from its financial strength and earning capabilities best qualified to do justice to his requirements, and most likely to yield the most satisfactory and profitable results.

(2) To give similar advice to any person contemplating the purchase of an annuity.

NNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE.

Life assurance may be effected either with or thout participation in profits. If without rticipation, both sum assured and premium nain unchanged. If with participation, a gher premium is charged, and bonuses are clared from time to time, which may usually applied either to increase sum assured or to duce premium, if not discounted for cash. is generally advantageous to select a policy rticipating in profits, but to overcome the jection of the higher premium an alternative plan is available in some offices whereby future bonuses are anticipated and used to reduce premiums from the outset. This is called the "Discounted Bonus" or "Cost Price" system. If the bonuses actually declared exceed those anticipated, the difference is credited to the policyholder; if however the anticipated bonuses exceed those declared, the balance has to be liquidated by the policyholder or remains as a debt. Policies should only be effected on this system in companies which can point to good and consistent bonus records, and whose valuation reserves are particularly strong. We give below the average annual premiums charged for the three classes of policies.

The next table shows the annual premiums yable throughout life for assurance of £100 at ath with participation in profits. Premium tes alone are not sufficient for judging the lative attractions of life offices. An office harging a high premium may give higher nuses than one charging a low premium, and erefore bonus results and prospects as well as emiums have to be considered. Some offices ly allow bonuses to be taken in reduction of premium, and on this plan the rates are usually high to commence with, but are greatly reduced after a few years. Some reserve bonuses for the older classes of policyholders, and in these cases lower premiums than the average are usually charged. Most offices grant interim bonuses between valuation periods, and it is important to ascertain if this is the case before an assurance is effected, especially in cases of endowment assurance.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the assured, however, die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death. The annual premiums payable throughout the endowment period, or till death if previous, for the assurance of £100 at various ages of entry and maturity, participating in profits, are given in this table.

THE following Table shows the amount of Annuity granted by the undermentioned Companies every £100 paid. The age last birthday is that upon which the payment is based, but many ices quote intermediate rates for every half or quarter year of age. By some Companies a portionate amount of Annuity is payable to day of death.

The Annuity is calculated as payable half-yearly; the annual payment is in nearly all cases gher if paid annually and less when paid quarterly. Some offices grant special terms in case of ured lives.

Fire Insurance Rates.

Most leading fire offices belong to the tariff association, charging identical rates of premium. There are, however, a number of non-tariff offices which claim to assess individual risks independently on merits. Tariff rates of premium per £100 insured against fire for the more common classes of risk are as follows:—

Private Dwelling Houses, built of brick or stone and tiled or slated and in no hazardous proximity, 1s. 6d.

Household goods therein, according to class, 1s. 6d. or 2s.

Shops and Warehouses, similarly built and circumstanced, in which no hazardous goods are deposited nor hazardous trades carried on, from 2s.

Stock and Utensils in trade, fixtures, and household furniture in such shops and warehouses, from 2s.

Private Dwelling Houses, brick and timber built and tiled or slated, in no hazardous proximity, from 2s. 6d.

INLAND POSTAL RATES.

To any part of the United Kingdom, including the Orkney and Shetland Islands, the Channel Islands, Isle of Man, and the Scilly Islands.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

Letters.

NATURE AND WEIGHT.—Most things may be sent by letter post (except explosive, offensive or obscene matter, eggs, fish, meat, fruit, and vegetables). The weight is unlimited. Maximum length 2 ft. ; width 1 ft. ; depth 1 ft.

BLIND, LITERATURE FOR THE. — Papers, periodicals, and books impressed in special type : 2 oz., ½*d.* ; 2 lb., 1*d.* ; 5 lb., 1½*d.* ; 6 lb., 2½*d.*

CONVEYANCE OF SINGLE LETTERS BY RAIL.—On payment of 2*d.* to a servant of the railway, in addition to postage at the ordinary rate, Inland letters not exceeding 4 oz. may be forwarded by the next available train or steamship by those companies in agreement with the Post Office, to be called for at the station to which the letter is addressed, or to be transferred thence to the nearest letter-box for postal delivery. The letter may be taken to a passenger station of the railway company or handed in at any express delivery post office (express fee of 3*d.* per mile).

EXPRESS DELIVERY SERVICE.—There are three systems by which any article (except those of a dangerous or offensive nature) may be specially delivered :—(1) By special messenger all the way, on week-days only (charge, which must be prepaid, 3*d.* per mile, or part of a mile, inclusive of all charges, but with a special weight charge of 3*d.* on each packet over 1 lb. in weight). (2) By special messenger after transmission by post (charge 3*d.* as before, exclusive of postage, with special charges as before). (3) In advance of the ordinary deliveries at the request of addressee (3*d.* per mile for one packet, and 1*d.* for every ten or less additional packets). For (1), packets must be handed over the counter with "Express Delivery" clearly marked in left-hand top corner. For (2), may be handed in or, if not to be registered, may be posted, and must be clearly marked as before. For Express Delivery on Sundays, Good Friday, and Christmas Day, see p. 365.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL and for the re-direction of letters must be given on printed forms, to be obtained from the local postmaster or from postmen, and signed by the person to whom the letters are to be addressed. Separate forms must be filled in for parcels and telegrams. The notice holds good for twelve months, and may be extended by payment of 1*s.* for second and third and 5*s.* for subsequent years.

RE-DIRECTION.—Letters may be re-posted free not later than the day after delivery (Sundays and public holidays not being counted), and must not previous to re-direction and posting be opened or tampered with.

REGISTRATION.—Registered letters and parcels must be handed to an agent of the Post Office, and a receipt taken. The registration fee is 2*d.* exclusive of postage. By payment of a further 2*d.* the sender of a registered packet may obtain an advice of its due delivery. The latest time for registering for the night mails is usually half an hour before the box closes for letters ; in the case of parcels, half an hour before the latest time for posting ordinary parcels. If an inland packet marked "Registered" be put in a letter-box it will be liable on delivery to a charge of 4*d.*, less any amount prepaid for registration. COMPENSATION for loss or damage. — The fees for compensation inclusive of registration are :—Fee 2*d.*, compensation £5 ; 3*d.*, £20 ; 4*d.*, £40 ; 5*d.*, £60 ; 6*d.*, £80 ; 7*d.*, £100 ; 8*d.*, £120 ; 9*d.*, £140 ; 10*d.*, £160 ; 11*d.*, £180 ; 1*s.*, £200 ; 1*s.* 1*d.*, £220 ; 1*s.* 2*d.*, £240, and so on, to 1*s.* 10*d.*, £400. The maximum compensation given for any one packet is £400. Compensation up to £2 is given on (a) unregistered parcels (for loss, only if certificate of posting is obtained at the time of posting), (b) unregistered packets conveyed by Express Delivery Service No. (1). Compensation in respect of money of any kind (coin, notes, orders, cheques, stamps, &c.) is only given when the money is enclosed in one of the Registered Letter envelopes sold by the Post Office and the packet is tendered for transmission by Registered Letter Post ; the maximum compensation for coin is £5. Compensation for jewellery, watches, &c., is only given on registered packets ; for glass, crockery, greases, liquids, colour-powders, fish, meat, fruit, and vegetables only when sent as parcels. Compensation is not given for damage to (1) eggs, soft fruit, liquids and semi-liquids or exceptionally fragile articles, in any case (2) registered letters, unless conspicuously marked "Fragile, with care."

DISPOSAL OF UNDELIVERED letters, packets, post cards, and parcels.—Inland letters undelivered, bearing full name and address of sender, are returned unopened ; others are opened and returned if possible to senders, a registration fee of 2*d.* being charged should anything of value be inside. If without an address, and containing nothing of value, they are at once destroyed. Undelivered foreign letters are returned, unopened, received. Postcards, newspapers, and ½*d. packets* are redelivered to sender on payment of a second postage, if his name and address, with a request for return in case of non-delivery, appear on the outside ; those without such request are disposed of. If an undelivered parcel bears on the cover the name and address of the sender, it is returned to him at once. If the name and address of the sender are not shown on the cover, the parcel is sent to the Returned Letter Office of the District, where it is opened and examined. If it is found to contain the name and address of the sender, it is returned to him. No charge is made for the return of an undelivered parcel to the sender. If the name and address of the sender cannot be ascertained from the examination of the parcel, particulars are recorded at the Returned Letter Office, where the parcel is retained for three months before being disposed of, unless contents are perishable.

Inquiries for missing letters, &c., should be made at the Secretary's office, G.P.O. (North), St. Martin's-le-Grand, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.; Saturdays between 10 a.m. and 1.30 p.m. The Returned Letter Office is at Mount Pleasant, E.C.

POSTE RESTANTE (solely for the accommodation of strangers and travellers and for three months only).—Letters and parcels may be addressed as a rule to all Post Offices except Town Sub-Offices. Letters or parcels should have the words "Poste Restante" or "to be called for" in the address. No initials, or fictitious names, or Christian name only, will be taken in, but are at once sent to the Returned Letter Office for disposal; and all persons applying for "Poste Restante" letters must furnish sufficient particulars to ensure delivery to the proper owner. Foreigners should produce their passports. Poste Restante parcels are kept three weeks before returning; letters from abroad, or at a seaport for an expected ship, are kept two months; from places in the United Kingdom, one month; from one part of London to another, one fortnight. After these intervals they are sent up to the Returned Letter Office. Poste Restante correspondence, however, which bears a request for return within a less time, if not delivered, is dealt with accordingly.

SEAMEN'S AND SOLDIERS' LETTERS.—Letters to or from H.M. ships abroad are 1d.* per oz.; to or from non-commissioned officers, private soldiers and seamen serving abroad, and enrolled pensioners in Canada, not exceeding ½ oz., are forwarded for 1d.* If posted for a place abroad unpaid, or insufficiently paid, or the description of the soldier, &c., be not given, it will be detained and returned to sender for payment of the postage.

UNPAID PACKETS (letters, newspapers, postcards) are charged double postage on delivery; UNDERPAID PACKETS, double the deficiency.

Halfpenny Packets.

Packets not exceeding 2 oz. in weight, ½*d.*; if exceeding 2 oz. they pass unconditionally at the letter rate. The limits of size are the same as for letters.

Any matter wholly printed on paper (paper sent as stationery not admissible); books and periodicals; Christmas cards, giant picture "postcards"; MS. proofs, and examination papers with corrections; receipts; invoices; deeds and agreements; circulars produced in identical terms by any mechanical process (if typewritten they must be handed in as such over the counter, and at least 20 copies must be sent at the same time); prints or photographs (when not on brittle or fragile substance); together with the legitimate binding or mounting, and anything necessary for safe transmission. The packet must be open at the ends, but may be tied with string, or in an unfastened envelope, or cover easily removed, and must contain no communication in the nature of a letter, except formulas of courtesy or of a conventional character not exceeding five words or initials.

RE-DIRECTION.—See "Letters."

Newspapers.

WEIGHT.—Newspapers registered at the G.P.O., not over 5 lb. in weight, 2 ft. in length, or 1 ft. in width or depth. Packing as for "halfpenny packets." No writing or printing is permitted, other than the words "with compliments," name and address of sender, request for return if undelivered, and a reference to any page of its contents. Newspapers not registered as such at G.P.O., and Christmas or other special issues of registered newspapers not forming part of the regular series, are treated as printed matter.

RE-DIRECTION.—See "Letters."

Parcels.

REGULATIONS.—The limit of weight is 11 lb. Maximum length 3 ft. 6 in.; greatest length and girth combined, 6 ft. It should be marked "Parcel Post" and handed across the counter or given to a rural postman; and the postage must be prepaid by stamps, affixed by the sender. The hours for Parcel Post business are the same as for general postal business. The name and address of sender should be on the outside of every parcel. More than 11 lb. must not be accepted from one person by a rural postman on foot or bicycle, without notice on the previous day, and he may refuse parcels if already loaded. A mounted postman must accept as much as he can conveniently carry.

Parcels to or from the Channel Islands or I. of Man are liable to customs duty; the sender must, in the former case, make a declaration of contents at the office of posting.

COMPENSATION AND REGISTRATION: see "Letters."

RE-DIRECTION.—Parcels may be re-directed free of charge if the original address and the corrected address are both in a delivery from the same office, otherwise they are charged again at the ordinary prepaid rate.

POSTAGE STAMPS (used also for receipts, telegrams, and certain Inland Revenue duties up to 2s.* 6d.*—for list of latter see p. 370) are sold of the respective values of ½*d., 1d., 1½*d., 2d., 2½*d., 3d., 4d., 5d., 6d., 7d., 9d., 10d., 1s., 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s.* and 20s.* Books of 18 1d.* stamps and 11 ½*d.* are issued, price 2s.* These may be purchased at most offices between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m., and at any office during the hours that attendance is given for telegraph business. Rural postmen are authorised to sell ½*d.* and 1d.* stamps and registered letter envelopes.

Embossed or impressed postage stamps cut out of envelopes, postcards, letter-cards, newspaper wrappers, or telegram forms may be used as adhesive stamps in payment of postage provided they are not imperfect, mutilated, or defaced in any way. Embossed or impressed Inland Revenue stamps cannot be used in payment of postage, and stamps indicating the payment of a registration fee may only be used for registered correspondence.

Spoiled Stamps.

Payment of postage cannot be made by means of imperfect or defaced postage stamps. Stamps are considered defaced when marked on the face with any written, printed, or stamped characters. Stamps may, however, be perforated with initials or other identifying mark.

Applications for the recovery of the value of spoiled or unused stamps, whether postage or revenue, can be made to the Postmaster at most large Post Offices in the provinces.

Envelopes.

EMBOSSED ENVELOPES.—Halfpenny Envelopes are in two sizes—Commercial, 5 × 3½ in. packets of 16 for 9d.*, and Foolscap, 8¼ × 3 .. 10 for 6*d.*; they are also sold singly. Penny Envelopes of the following sizes are kept in stock:—A. 4¼ × 3 .. 20 for ½. 10*d.*, 240 for 22*s.*; "Commercial," 16 for 1*s.* 5*d.*, and 240 for 21*s.* 3*d.*

REGISTERED LETTER ENVELOPES, for foreign and inland letters, with a 3*d.* embossed stamp for the payment of the registration 2*d.* and postage 1*d.*, are of five sizes, and are sold: F, 5¼ in. × 3¼ in., 3½*d.* each; G, 6 in. × 3 ⅜ in., 3¾*d.* each, or 12 for 3*s.* 4*d.*; H, 8 in. × 5 in., H^{2}, 9 in. × 4 in., 3¾*d.* each; K, 11½ in. × 6 in., 4*d.* each.

Letter Cards.

1 for 1½*d.*, 8 for 9*d.*, and 96 for 9*s.*

Post Cards.

POST CARDS impressed with a halfpenny stamp are sold at the rate of 11 for 6*d.*, or 10*s.* per parcel of 220; a thicker quality being 5*s.* per parcel of 110. Impressed with 1*d.* stamp, 1*d.* each. Reply Post Cards are about double the rates for single cards. The left-hand half of the address side may be used for correspondence, both inland and abroad. Private Cards (max. size 5½ × 3½, min. 4 × 2¾ in.), corresponding in thickness to official cards, may be used inland; also for abroad provided they have "Post Card" printed (or written) on them.

Wrappers.

WRAPPERS bearing a halfpenny stamp may be had at ¾*d.* each or 7 for 4*d.*; 5*s.* 8½*d.* for 120. With a penny stamp the price is, singly 1¼*d.*, or 8 for 8½*d.*; 3*s.* 6½*d.* for 40.

LONDON POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.

East Central (E.C.)	North Western (N.W.)
West Central (W.C.)	South Eastern (S.E.)
Eastern (E.)	South Western (S.W.)
Northern (N.)	Western (W.)

FOR THE COUNTRY AND ABROAD.—Letters and cards to go the same evening should be posted at chief district offices, branch offices, receiving houses, and pillar boxes before 6; in suburban places half an hour to an hour and a half earlier.

LATE FEE LETTERS.—Inland letters and post cards bearing an extra ½*d.* stamp are forwarded by the night mails if posted at the town branch offices and receiving houses before 7 p.m., and at Mount Pleasant before 7.45, or at St. Martin's-le-Grand before 7.30. At certain district offices the hour for posting with the late fee is 7.30 and 8, when the letters are to go from the railways in their immediate neighbourhoods. Letters with an extra ½*d.* stamp, or registered letters with 1*s.* late fee, may also be posted at the various railway termini up to the time of the departure of the train bearing the mails, varying from 1.30 p.m. to 8.30 a.m.

Foreign letters with an extra 1*d.* stamp may be posted in the E.C. District and at Metropolitan District Offices at times varying with the despatch of the mails; with an extra 2*d.* prepaid the time is extended.

POSTAGE, &c., ABROAD.

Letters.

The charge for letters throughout the British Empire generally, and to Egypt, the United States of America, and the British Postal Agencies in *Morocco is 1*d.* the ounce. The charge to all other places is 2½*d.* the first ounce and 1½*d.* per ounce afterwards. Limits of size 2 × 1 × 1 ft.

Post Cards.

1*d.* single, 2*d.* reply. (See under Inland Post-cards.)

Reply Coupons.

Coupons exchangeable for stamps of the value of 25 centimes (2½*d.*) each in any country participating in the arrangement can be purchased at any Money Order Office in this country at the price of 3*d.* each for the purpose of prepaying replies to letters. The coupons can be exchanged by the addressees at the Post Office of the place of destination for local postage stamps.

Books, Newspapers, Samples, &c.

NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, CATALOGUES, PHOTOGRAPHS, WHOLLY PRINTED MATTER, ½*d.* per 2 oz.

PATTERNS, SAMPLES, AND SCIENTIFIC SPECIMENS, ½*d.* per 2 oz.; minimum charge of 1*d.*

COMMERCIAL PAPERS, MSS., INVOICES, &c., partly written, ½*d.* per 2 oz.; minimum charge of 2½*d.*

The limits of size to the British Empire or non-Union countries† are—length 2 ft., width or depth 1 ft., and must not exceed 5 lb. in weight. To countries in the Postal Union the length is limited to 18 in. (samples 12 × 8 × 4 in.); weight not to exceed 4 lb. If in the form of a roll, the limits of size in either case are 30 × 4 in. (samples 12 × 6 in.). Postage must be prepaid. Wholly unpaid packets are stopped. Double the deficit is the maximum charge on underpaid packets. Regulations as to packing, writing, &c., are similar to those for inland packets.

Charges for collecting: In U.K., £5, 4*d.*; £10, 6*d.*; £15, 9*d.*; £20. 1*s.*, exclusive of poundage on P.O. or M.O. by which amount is remitted; in the above countries, according to a graduated scale—e.g., £1, 3*d.* to 1*s.* 1*d.*; £5, 1*s.* to 2*s.* 5*d.*; £10, 1*s.* 11*d.* to 4*s.* 8*d.*; £20, 3*s.* 5*d.* to 9*s.* 4*d.*, inclusive of poundage.

MONEY AND POSTAL ORDERS.

The sender of a money order (Inland or most places Abroad) may apply for an advice of payment to consignee at the office of issue at the time of issue or subsequently—fee, 2*d.* for Inland, 2½*d.* for Foreign and Colonial orders. The Chief Money Order Office is at 144A Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

Inland Ordinary Money Orders.

The highest amount granted in one order is limited to £40. The commission charged is for sums not exceeding £1, 2*d.*; £3, 3*d.*; £10, 4*d*; £20, 6*d.*; £30, 8*d.*; £40, 10*d.* No order may contain a fractional part of 1*d.*

The rules and regulations are on the forms issued.

Inland Telegraph Money Orders.

Money may be transmitted by Telegraph Money Order from any Money Order office in the United Kingdom which is also a despatching office for telegrams, and may be made payable at any Money Order office which is also an office for the delivery of telegrams.

Commission at the same rate as for Ordinary Inland Money Orders, plus supplementary fee of 2*d.*, and cost of official Telegram of Advice. If the order is to be delivered at payee's address any charge for porterage must be prepaid.

Postal Orders.

British Postal Orders are issued and paid at nearly all post offices in the United Kingdom during the ordinary hours of business on week days. They are also issued and paid in almost all parts of the Empire (except Australia and Canada), in Egypt, and at the British Agencies at Panama, in the Turkish Empire (note §, p. 364), and Morocco (p. 363, note *). They are issued, with a counterfoil to be retained by the sender, for every 6*d.* up to 20*s.* and for 21*s.*; those of 6*d.*, 1*s.*, 1*s.* 6*d.*, 2*s.* and 2*s.* 6*d.*, at a charge of ½*d.*; of 3*s.*, 3*s.* 6*d.* &c., up to 15*s.*, 1*d.*; those of 15*s.* 6*d.* &c., up to 21*s.*, 1½*d.* They must be presented for payment within 3 months from last day of the month of issue, or a fresh commission will be charged. Adhesive British Postage Stamps (not perforated and not exceeding 3 in number) to the amount of 5*d.*, but not fractions of 1*d.*, may be affixed to the face of an order.

Ordinary Money Orders Abroad.

For sums not exceeding £1, 3*d.*; £2, 6*d.*; £4, 9*d.*; £6, 1*s.*; £8, 1*s.* 3*d.*; £10, 1*s.* 6*d.*, and for countries on which orders may be issued for more than £10, 3*d.* for every additional £2 or portion of £2.

Telegraph Money Orders Abroad.

Commission at same rate as for Ordinary Money Orders abroad, plus supplementary fee of 6*d.*, and cost of official Telegram of Advice.

TELEGRAMS.

Inland.

Inland telegrams may be sent to all parts of the British Isles at the rate of 6*d.* for the first twelve words, and one halfpenny for every additional word; stamps in payment to be affixed to the form by the sender. Receipt for charges 1*d.* The address of the receiver is charged for, but not that of the sender when written on the back of the telegram form. The charge includes delivery within three miles of the nearest telegraph office, or, if this be a head office, within the town postal limits—beyond that limit the charge is 3*d.* per mile, calculated from the free delivery limit. Porterage to be paid by sender. Telegram forms are of two kinds—one issued gratis; the other (A1), embossed with a 6*d.* stamp, may be purchased singly, or in books of 20, interleaved, and with a sheet of carbonic paper, price 10*s.* 2*d.* The usual hours are 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

SUNDAY TELEGRAMS.—See p. 365.—Offices always open: London—G.P.O., Central; G.N.R., King's Cross; G.C.R., Marylebone (except 11.30 a.m. to 3.30 p.m.; G.E.R., Liverpool Street and Stratford; S.E. & C.R., London Bridge and Battersea Park Road; St. Pancras (M.R.), Waterloo and Willesden Stations, and West Strand Post Office. The Provinces—Birmingham, Brighton (except from midnight Saturday to 8 a.m. Sunday), Bristol, Cardiff Docks (no delivery to ships after dark), Derby, Devonport, Dover, Exeter, Falmouth, Holyhead, Hull, Hurst Castle, Leeds, Liverpool, Lizard (wireless), Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Newport (Mon.), Norwich, Nottingham, Penzance, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Sheffield, Southampton Docks, and Swansea (no delivery to ships on dark nights). Scotland—Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Inverness. Ireland—Belfast, Cork, Dublin, Londonderry, Queenstown. Railway Stations at Ahmouth, Bedford (M.R.), Blackburn, Bolton (L.Y.), Bradford (M.R.), Burton (M.R.), Chester, Crewe, Darlington, Fishguard Harbour, Gloucester § Beyrout, Constantinople, Salonika, Smyrna, only.

The parcel post with the United States is carried on by means of two distinct services, namely, an official service with the United States Post Office and a semi-official service maintained through the Agency of the American Express Company. The sender of a parcel forwarded by the semi-official service may, without extra charge, direct that a parcel be sent through the New York Custom House in Bond for Customs examination at any one of the "United States Ports of Entry," or Inland Custom Houses. The addresses of such parcels must, however, make arrangements for the delivery of parcels so treated after they have been cleared at the Custom House of the Inland Port of Entry.

Parcels intended to be forwarded in bond must be plainly marked by the sender, "In bond to ," naming the Inland Port of Entry chosen; and the same words must also be written by the sender in the same handwriting on the Customs declaration.

(M.R.), Heysham Harbour, Ipswich (G.E.), Kettering, Killingworth, Leicester (M.R.), Low Moor, March, Newton Abbot, Peterboro', Reading (G.W.), Rotherham, Rugby (N.W.), Shrewsbury, Skipton (M.R.), Stafford (N.W.), Stoke-on-Trent, Swindon, Wakefield (Kirkgate), Warrington (N.W.), and York.

Note.—It is usually possible to get a telegram through from an office which is open to one which may, perhaps, be closed for telegraphic business by payment of the following extra fees: 1*s.* for the telegraphist, 1*s.* for the messenger, and 6*d.* an hour for the telegraphist if he has to wait for a reply. In the same way postmasters may accept telegrams after the usual hours on payment of 1*s.* for the postmaster, 1*s.* for the telegraphist, and 1*s.* for a messenger if it be necessary to call the telegraphist.

The following count one word:—All names of towns and villages in U.K. (not of branch and sub-offices in towns); all railway stations (not in towns with public telegraph); words (not names) ordinarily written as one or with hyphen; "St." together with name following; each five figures; each initial, except London Postal Districts (p. 363)—A.M.—P.M.—H.M.S. (in address), which are one word each group.

Wireless Telegraphy.

Telegrams are accepted for transmission from any Inland Telegraph Office to certain principal Ocean Liners (and vice versâ) viâ the coast stations at Crookhaven, The Lizard, Malin Head, Niton, North Foreland, Rosslare, Seaforth, and Caister-on-Sea (all at 10½*d.* per word), and Bolt Head (8*d.*). Also to or from certain Mail Packets—e.g., G.E.R. Harwich Service, viâ Parkeston Quay (2½*d.* per word; minimum, 2*s.* 2*d.*); and Dover-Ostend Mails, via Nieuport (3*d.* per word; minimum, 2*s.* 1*d.*). Replies cannot be prepaid. In all radio-telegrams the name of the office of destination counts as one word.

POST OFFICE TELEPHONES.

London Telephone Area.—The office of the General Manager of the P.O. London Telephone System is at the G.P.O. South, Carter Lane, E.C. Annual Subscription, including one telephone, for connection to an exchange which is within 2 miles of the subscriber's house, and (a) in the county of London, £5; (b) outside the county

£4; (c) anywhere in the London Telephone area, for an unlimited number of calls, £17. The corresponding Message Fees are: (a) For each call on an exchange within the county of London, 1*d.*; outside the county, 2*d.*; (b) each call on the same exchange, 1*d.*; other exchanges, 2*d.* Minimum payable yearly for calls, 30*s.* Private subscribers may use their lines for trunk messages, or for sending telegrams, and express messages (max. 60 words), on paying £1 deposit to cover the credit given. The Call Office Fee, whether for subscribers or others, is 2*d.* each 3 minutes.

Provincial Telephone System.—Applications for terms, &c., should be made to the Sec., G.P.O.

Telephone Trunk Lines.—These connect Exchanges in different towns. Rates in day-time:—3*d.* for 25 miles, 6*d.* for 50 miles, 9*d.* for 75 miles, 1*s.* for 100 miles, and an additional 6*d.* for every 40 miles over a hundred. Extra fees are levied where submarine lines are used, or between the National Telephone Co.'s and the Portsmouth Corporation's systems. 3 minutes is allowed, on the expiry of which the option of a further 3 minutes is generally given; by prepaying a double fee the line may be engaged for the maximum of 6 minutes continuously. From 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. half the day-rate is charged (minimum 6*d.*, but a 3*d.* 3 min. day-rate becomes 3*d.* 6 min. at night).

Anglo-French and Anglo-Belgian Telephone.—Telephonic communication may be obtained through Post Office Exchanges or Call Offices from London and certain provincial towns in England to Paris, Brussels, and certain provincial towns in France and Belgium. Fee—8*s.* per conversation of three minutes (10*s.* for Bordeaux, Lyons, Marseilles and St. Etienne). Two consecutive conversations are permitted. NOTE.—Paris time is 10 minutes in advance of London time (i.e., 12 noon London = 12·10 p.m. Paris), but Greenwich time prevails in Belgium.

SUNDAY AND HOLIDAY ARRANGEMENTS.

On SUNDAY throughout the U.K. no Parcel Post, Money and Postal Order, Savings Bank, (or Express Delivery (Service No. 1, p. 359) business is transacted. In London all but forty offices are closed. These forty open in the morning (thirty-four of them, including those on p. 196, except the N.W. District office, also in the evening) to sell stamps and send telegrams. About ninety suburban stations, chiefly S.E. and S.W., send telegrams at train times (see also p. 363). There is no delivery of letters (except express letters fully prepaid, marked with one thick vertical line and the words "Express Delivery on Sunday"); nor any general collection till midnight. Letters, etc., with extra 1*d.* stamp, posted in special boxes at one of the above-mentioned thirty-four offices before times varying from 5 to 6 p.m., or at any great railway terminus before 6 p.m. (later if at the appropriate terminus), leave by the usual night mails. Letters may be registered at these offices; or with 1*s.* fee at the Sorting Carriage on the mail train at the appropriate terminus, at times varying between 8 and 10 p.m. In the Provinces all Head Offices and most Sub-offices open from 8.30–10 a.m. for stamps, telegrams (Scotland 9–10), registering letters. There is only one delivery of letters (in most Scottish towns, and the smaller English and Irish villages, none); any one may present a fee as the Sorting relates to himself. CHRISTMAS DAY AND GOOD FRIDAY.—In London there is one delivery of letters, express letters, and parcels; if Christmas Day be a Sunday, of parcels and express letters only. The G.P.O., Charing Cross, and Eversholt Street Offices open from 5–7 p.m. (stamps, registered letters); also certain Telegraph Offices (stamps, telegraph (p. 363) telephone, registered letters). Express letters are not accepted for delivery under Service 1 (p. 359), and parcels are not collected. The Provinces: In Scotland business is as on week-days; in England and Ireland as Sundays, but with one morning delivery of letters and parcels, even if Christmas be a Sunday. OTHER PUBLIC AND BANK HOLIDAYS.—London: One morning delivery of letters and parcels. Collection of letters, evening and midnight; of parcels, morning only. G.P.O. and Head District Offices (p. 196) open for all business except Savings Bank and non-telegraphic money orders. The Provinces: In England and Ireland the chief town and country offices and sub-offices, being also telegraph delivery offices, generally open as usual, closing at noon for Savings Bank, Postal, and Money Order business. The smaller offices of all kinds open either only in the morning or not at all. In Scotland the same holds good, but on New Year's Day no Money Order, etc., business is done. Throughout the U.K. there is only one letter and parcel delivery; in Scotland also on SACRAMENTAL FAST DAYS and Holidays fixed by Local Authorities.

POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANKS.

Hours are specified in a notice exhibited at the office. On presentation of book a depositor may withdraw on demand a sum not exceeding £1. Deposits can be made from 1*s.* to £50 in one year (ending 31st Dec.). When with interest the total exceeds £200, interest is allowed on £200 only. Interest is at 2½ per cent.

The Central Post Office Savings Bank is at Blythe Road, West Kensington, W.

In calculating duty the net value of an estate where the death occurred between 2nd August, 1894, and 30th June, 1896, is raised to the next complete £10; on deaths after that date until the 8th April, 1900, any fraction of £100 is ignored, such adjusted value determining both the rate and amount of duty. On deaths on and after 9th of April, 1900, the rate and amount of duty is calculated on the exact net value.

Gifts made by deceased during his life are charged, unless made more than three years before death; gifts made for public or charitable purposes, or in consideration of marriage, or as part of deceased's reasonable normal expenditure, excepted. Gifts of less than £100 in value or amount also excepted.

Payment of Estate or Succession Duties may, by agreement with the Commissioners, be made, wholly or in part, in the form of real or leasehold property comprised in the estate.

In addition to the above, where property liable to Estate Duty is settled by the will of the deceased, or having been settled by some other disposition which took effect since 1 Aug., 1894, passes under that disposition on the death of the deceased to some person not competent to dispose thereof, a further duty (Settlement Estate Duty) is payable at the rate of £2 per cent. on the Settled property (except when the only life interest is taken by the husband or wife of the deceased), but from that payment the ad valorem stamp duty charged on the settlement may be deducted.

But where the net value of the property, real and personal, does not exceed £1,000, Estate Duty only is payable, and the property is exempt from Settlement Estate Duty, and from Legacy or Succession Duties.

Small estates up to £300 and £500 gross are charged, at the option of the accounting parties, either by the preceding scale or with fixed duties of 30*s.* and 50*s.*, and are exempt from all other death duties.

Where the net value exceeds £100, but does not exceed £200, the ad valorem duty amounts to £1 only, provided that the death occurred on or after 1st July, 1896, and before 9th April, 1900.

Interest at 3 per cent. per annum is also payable on the Estate Duty on personalty from the date of the death up to that of delivery of the affidavit or account.

The Estate Duty on real property may be paid, if desired, by eight yearly or sixteen half-yearly instalments, and that on certain annuities may at option be paid in four yearly instalments, and 3 per cent. interest is charged on all unpaid portions of duty in these cases from twelve months after death.

INVENTORY DUTY, see ESTATE DUTY.

LAND TAX.—The quota payable by each Parish, as fixed in the year 1798 (less the amount redeemed), is raised by an equal pound rate, the rate of Assessment not to exceed 1*s.* in the £. Where the income of the owner of the land (when not a body of persons, corporate or incorporate) does not exceed £160 he is exempt from payment of land tax, and if the owner's income does not exceed £400 one-half of the tax is remitted, but he must claim this relief before payment of the tax.

LAND VALUES DUTIES:—

(I.) INCREMENT VALUE DUTY: payable on the occasion (a) of any transfer or sale of land or any interest therein, (b) of any lease for more than 14 years, (c) of the land, or interest in it, passing on death. (d) In the case of Corporations, in addition to (a) and (b), and in place of (c), the duty is payable in 1914 and every 15 years thereafter.

Rate of duty [payable as a stamp duty by (a) the seller, (b) the lessor, (c) the deceased's estate, or (d) the Corporation]: £1 for every £5 of "increment value," i.e., the increase in the value of the site—apart from the value of buildings, &c., thereon—since April 30, 1909, or since the last payment of duty.

Exemptions, &c.—Agricultural land, while it has no higher value than for agricultural purposes only.—Small residences occupied by the owner, or holder of lease of 50 years, where annual value does not exceed £40 in London, £26 in towns of 50,000 population, and £16 elsewhere.—Small agricultural holdings, where land and dwelling do not exceed £30 annual value, occupied and cultivated by the owner, and not exceeding 50 acres (of average value not exceeding £75 an acre).—Recreation grounds owned by corporate and other bodies, without view of profit, are not liable to the periodical charge (d).—Flats (transfer, lease, &c., of separate dwelling).—Ten per cent. of increment allowed free on first and on any subsequent occasion, but such allowances not to amount to more than 25 per cent. in any period of five years.—Allowance is made where Reversion Duty has been paid for the same benefit or increment.—Minerals which were the subject of a mining lease or were being worked on April 30, 1909.—Minerals not so exempt are subject to a special basis of charge to Increment Value Duty, as an annual duty.

(II.) REVERSION DUTY: payable by the lessor on the determination of a lease.

Rate of Duty: £1 for every £10 of the value of the benefit accruing to the lessor.

Exemptions, &c.—Reversions purchased before April 30, 1909, under leases which determine within 40 years of purchase.—Leases of agricultural land.—Leases the original term of which did not exceed 21 years.—Allowance made where fresh lease is granted before expiration of original lease, 2½ per cent. of duty for each unexpired year, up to 50 per cent. of whole duty.—Allowance is made where Increment Value Duty has been paid for the same benefit or increment.—Mining leases are not charged.

(III.) UNDEVELOPED LAND DUTY: payable by the owner (including a lessee for a term of 50 years or more) of any land which has not been developed by the erection of dwelling-houses or buildings for the purpose of any trade, &c., other than agriculture (but including glass-houses or greenhouses as trade buildings), or is not otherwise used bonâ-fide for any trade, &c., other than agriculture.

Rate of Duty: One halfpenny annually for every £1 of the "site value," i.e., the market value of the fee simple of the land if divested of buildings, timber, &c., and less the value of any minerals.

Exemptions, &c.—Land the site value of which does not exceed £50 an acre.—Agricultural land, except on such part of the site value as exceeds its agricultural value.—Parks and spaces open to the public as of right, or to which the public are allowed reasonable access.—Recreation grounds, used as such under agreements for not less than 5 years.—Land not exceeding 1 acre occupied with a dwelling-house.—Garden (with a dwelling-house) up to 5 acres, when site value of the whole does not exceed 20 times its annual value.—Agricultural land held under an existing agreement, not chargeable until agreement terminates.—Agricultural land occupied and cultivated by the owner, if all land owned by him does not exceed £300 in value.—Allowance is made where Increment Value Duty has been paid in respect of undeveloped land.

(IV.) MINERAL RIGHTS DUTY: payable in respect of the rental value of all rights to work minerals and of all mineral wayleaves.

Rate of Duty [payable by the proprietor where he works the minerals, or, in any other case, by the immediate lessor of the working lessee]: 1*s.* 0*d.* annually for each £1 of rental value.

Exemptions, &c.—Common clay, common brick clay, common brick earth, sand, chalk, limestone, and gravel are not charged.—Reversion Duty is not charged on the determination, nor Increment Duty on the grant, of a mining lease.—Minerals which were the subject of a mining lease or were being worked on April 30, 1909, are exempt from Increment Value Duty, and minerals not so exempt are charged to that Duty on a special basis in the form of an annual duty.

LEASES:—Lease or tack of any dwelling-house or part thereof for any definite term not exceeding a year at a rent not exceeding £10 per annum, nil.; for any definite term less than a year of any furnished dwelling-house or apartments where the rent for such term exceeds £25, 5*s.*; of any lands, tenements, &c., at a yearly rent:—

LEGACY AND SUCCESSION DUTIES:—Also see "Estate Duty."

If the deceased died on or after the 1st June, 1881, every pecuniary Legacy or Residue, or share of Residue, although not of the amount or value of £20, is chargeable with Duty by the 44 Vict. c. 12, s. 42.—Except in the cases of small estates, see note to Estate Duty.

No succession duty is payable where the principal value of all the successions on the same death does not amount to £100 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 51, s. 18).

Rates of duties payable on legacies, annuities, and residues, and of Succession Duties where deceased died before 1st July, 1888, or where Estate Duty, Finance Act, 1894, is payable.

To Husband or Wife or Children of the Deceased, or their Descendants, or to the Father or Mother or other Lineal Ancestor of the Deceased (see above)	£1 per cent.
To Brothers and Sisters of the Deceased, or their Descendants	£3 per cent.
To Brothers and Sisters of the Father or Mother of the Deceased, or their Descendants	£6 per cent.
To Brothers and Sisters of the Grandfather or Grandmother of the Deceased, or their Descendants	£6 per cent.
To any Person in any other degree of collateral Consanguinity, or to a Stranger in Blood to the Deceased	£10 per cent.

Where deceased died on or after 1 July, 1888, and Probate or Estate Duty is not payable, Succession Duties for the relationships above are at rates of 1½, 4½, 6½, 7½, and 11½ respectively.

Exceptions.—Estates not exceeding £15,000.—Legacies and successions of less than £1,000 (£2,000 in the case of widow or child under the age of 21 of deceased), whatever may be value of whole estate.

The Husband or Wife is chargeable with Estate Duty and Legacy and Succession Duty; and the Husband or Wife of a relation is chargeable at the rate at which the relation would be charged.

Penalties.—Persons paying or receiving any Legacy, Residue, or Share of Residue liable to Duty, without taking or signing the proper Receipt for the same; persons not giving notice of a succession, or not delivering an account, are subject to certain Penalties.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS, WILLS, AND OTHER USEFUL INFORMATION.

BIRTHS.

WHEN a birth takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons :—1. The father or mother of the child. If they fail, 2. The occupier of the house in which the birth happened ; 3. A person present at the birth ; or, 4. The person having charge of the child. The duty of attending to the registration thereof rests firstly on the parents. One of them must, within 42 days of the birth, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed to enable him to register, and must sign the register in his presence. If they fail to do this without reasonable cause, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. In case of their failure, one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register within the same period. If at the end of 42 days no one has given information and signed the register, the Registrar may write to any one of the above-mentioned persons, requiring him or her to come to him for that purpose, at a stated time and place. Any person who fails to comply with this requisition will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. Not only will liability to a penalty be avoided, but the registration of a birth will be free when it takes place within 42 days (but in Scotland the period is 21 days), unless either of the persons above named sends to the Registrar a written request to come and register at his or her residence or at the house where the child was born, when the Registrar on so attending may claim a fee of one shilling. After three months a birth cannot be registered except in the presence of the superintendent Registrar, and on payment of fees to him and the Registrar. After twelve months a birth can be registered only on the Registrar-General's express authority, and on payment of further fees. The only legal proof of age and place of birth is afforded by the civil registers, which the law now requires to be made as above described. In districts where the Notification of Births Act, 1907, has been adopted by the local authority, notice of every birth must (subject to a penalty in case of default) be given by the father, or person in attendance on the mother, to the district medical officer of health. The notice must be sent by post within 36 hours of the birth, and is to be in addition to, and not in substitution for the notices above mentioned.

DEATHS.

When a death takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons :—1. The nearest relative of the deceased present at the death, or in attendance during the last illness. If they fail, 2. Some other relative of the deceased in the same (Registrar's) sub-district. In default of any relatives, 3. A person present at the death ; or, the occupier of the house in which the death happened. If all the above-named fail, 4. An inmate of the house, or, the person causing the body to be buried. Relatives present or in attendance are first required to attend to the registration. One of them must, within five days of the death, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed, and must sign the register ; or must within the same time send him written notice of the death, accompanied by a certificate of the cause of death, signed by a registered medical practitioner, if any such attended the deceased during his last illness. The written notice will be useless without a legal medical certificate. If notice is sent, information must nevertheless be given and the register signed within fourteen days from the death. If relatives present or in attendance fail without reasonable cause to carry out these provisions, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. In case of their failure, one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register in their stead. It is important that every death should be registered and a certificate of registry be obtained from the Registrar before the funeral. This certificate should be delivered to the clergyman or other person who performs the funeral or religious service. The penalty for not delivering this certificate is forty shillings. If at the end of fourteen days one of the persons above mentioned has not attended to the registration, the Registrar may, by written application, require any one of them to come to him and do so at a stated time and place. Any person failing to attend on this application will be liable to a penalty of forty shillings. Whenever the deceased has been attended during his last illness by a registered medical practitioner, a certificate of the cause of death, signed by him, must be delivered to the Registrar. Any person receiving such a certificate from the practitioner and not so delivering it will incur a penalty of forty shillings. The registration of a death is free of charge when it takes place within the above-mentioned periods, unless on request it is effected at an informant's house, or at the house where the death happened, when a fee of one shilling will be payable to the Registrar. After twelve months a death can be registered only on the Registrar-General's express authority, and on payment of fees.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.—Sudden deaths are supposed by the law to demand inquiry, and Coroners' inquests are held in cases of violent and unnatural deaths, such as the case of a person slain or drowned, or dying suddenly, and of any person dying in prison. Coroners do not obtrude into the houses of persons for the purpose of holding inquests, but are sent for by the peace officers, to whom it is the duty of those in whose houses violent or unnatural deaths occur to make immediate communication, whilst the body remains in the same situation as when the death occurred. Inquests are not to be held on Sunday. When the Coroner receives due notice of a violent death, casualty, or misadventure, he issues his warrant or precept to summon a jury to appear at a particular time and place for the purpose of instituting the inquiry, when, how, and by what means the deceased came by his death. The jury must consist of at least twelve lawful and honest men, "probi et legales homines," and the number is immaterial provided twelve agree. The jury is usually summoned from the householders residing in the neighbourhood in which the death took place. Any person summoned as a witness is bound to attend, or renders himself liable to be fined in any sum not exceeding forty shillings, the fine for defaulting jurymen being £5. In the case of sudden or suspicious death in Scotland, the Lord Advocate may order a public inquiry to be held in the manner prescribed by the Fatal Accidents Inquiry (Scotland) Act, 1895, as altered by an amending Act passed in 1906.

VACCINATION.

The parent of every child born in England must within six months after the birth of the child, or the person having custody of a child must within six months after receiving it have the child vaccinated by a registered private medical practitioner or by the Public Vaccinator for the district. If the vaccination is performed by a private medical practitioner a certificate in the form prescribed by the Vaccination Order, 1898, of successful vaccination must be sent to the Registrar of Births within seven days. The Public Vaccinator is required on the request of the parent or guardian of a child to visit the home of the child and vaccinate it free of charge with glycerinated calf lymph or with such other lymph as may be issued by the Local Government Board at the option of the parent. If a child is not vaccinated within 4 months of its birth, the Public Vaccinator is required to give 24 hours' notice to the parent and to visit the home of the child and offer to vaccinate it. No parent or other person will be liable to any penalty under the Vaccination Acts if within four months from the birth he makes a statutory declaration before a commissioner for oaths or one justice of the peace that he conscientiously believes that vaccination would be prejudicial to the health of the child, and within seven days thereafter delivers the statutory declaration (which requires no stamp) to the Vaccination Officer for the district. A conscientious objector can thus escape all penalties, but a person who does not obtain a certificate, or make the declaration, is still liable to penalties for not having a child vaccinated, and by the Vaccination Order, 1898, issued under the Vaccination Act, 1898, by the Local Government Board, the due vaccination of every child not exempted is secured by a very complete system of registration, and in future the Vaccination Officers will be able to undertake prosecutions without directions from Boards of Guardians, and the Boards will have no power to prevent such prosecutions. [See also Vaccination Order, 1907.]

MARRIAGE BY BANNS OR LICENCE.

Banns of Marriage.—"Banns" formerly applied to any public kind of proclamation, and now refer only to marriages, so that the word signifies the public announcement in the parish church, the object being to ensure notoriety, and exclude clandestine marriages. The Marriage Act, 26 Geo. II. c. 33, prescribes audible publication according to the rubric, on three Sundays preceding the ceremony, after the Second Lesson. The law is now chiefly contained in the Marriage Act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, which repealed most of the laws then in force (see also 5 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, and 1 Vict. c. 22). Where the parties reside in different parishes, the banns must be published in both, the minister giving his certificate of the same to be handed to the minister of the parish where the marriage takes place. The law provides specially for the case where one of the parties resides in Scotland, the publication being then in the Established Church of the parish. In like manner in Scotland the publication takes place in the parish church, even where the parties are married in the Anglican or Episcopal church. The law of Scotland leaves it to the discretion of the minister in Scotland who performs the ceremony to accept a certificate of banns published in England, either in the Church of England or in a Nonconformist place of worship. It may be noted that, by Scottish law only, omission to publish the banns does not invalidate the marriage. The names by which the parties are known are sufficient for publication of banns, so that a variance from the strict baptismal name is not important. But where wrong names are designedly given, for the purpose of concealment or otherwise, the case is different, and the marriage may be null and void (Midgeley v. Wood, 4 Sw. & Tr. 267). Where a wrong and fraudulent name is given by one party only, and the other party is innocent, the validity of the marriage is not affected.

The Bishop may licence a Chapel of Ease for the celebration of marriages; but where a district has been assigned to a chapel, and it becomes a vicarage, or "ecclesiastical parish," the option ceases, and the banns must be proclaimed and marriage celebrated therein, and not in the "mother church" or that of the civil parish.

If three months be permitted to elapse, the banns become useless, and the parties must either obtain a licence, or submit to the republication of banns. The minister ought to satisfy himself that the parties are of full age, or that the consent of parents is obtained, and it is usually on the score of insufficiency of age that banns are "forbidden." By the Act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, a marriage may be performed in church on the superintendent registrar's certificate without banns.

Marriage licences are of two kinds—(1) the Common or Ordinary Licence granted by the Archbishops and Bishops for marriage in any church or chapel duly licensed for marriages; (2) the Special Licence granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury for marriage at any time or in any place on good reason being shown (see p. 380). The Act of 1823 is severe on the clergy, making it a felony for any clergyman to marry the parties in the absence of banns or licence; and every Registrar or other person who knowingly unduly solemnizes a marriage is also guilty of felony. By a subsequent alteration in the law, the hours for marriage were extended, and they are now from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The minister should be careful that there are two or more witnesses present, and that two witnesses attest the entries in the register books, which are kept in duplicate.

All civil jurisdiction over marriage was taken away from the Ecclesiastical Courts by the Divorce Act of 1857. An incumbent may under Section 56 of this Act refuse to marry a divorced person, whose marriage has been dissolved for his or her adultery, but must allow another clergyman of the diocese to perform the service.

Although the presumption of law is in favour of the validity of a marriage, great care should be taken to comply with the directions of the several statutes in every particular.

A marriage certificate is nothing more than a copy of the entry in the church register; and the customary fee is 2*s.* 6*d.*, and a stamp duty of 1*d.* Searches on the register-books may be made on payment of small fees, viz., 1*s.* for a single year, and 6*d.* additional for every other year. There are small fees, regulated by custom, on the certificate given of banns in one parish for marriage in another. Marriage fees are not uniform, and if excessive there is power with the Diocesan Chancellor to moderate them. With those who are in a position to afford it, it is usual to pay a guinea to the clergyman, and 5*s.* to the clerk; and the usual fees are paid although a stranger-clergyman be invited to perform the service.

MARRIAGE LICENCES.

MARRIAGE LICENCES can be obtained in London by application at the Faculty Office, at the Vicar-General's Office, and at the Bishop of London's Registry, all within the old area known as Doctors' Commons, by one of the parties about to be married. In the country they may be obtained at the offices of the Bishops' Registrars, but licences obtained at the Bishop's Diocesan Registry only enable the parties to be married in the diocese in which they are issued; those procured at the Faculty Office, 23 Knightrider Street, Doctors' Commons, E.C., or at the Vicar-General's Office, 3 Creed Lane, Ludgate Hill, E.C. (hours in both offices 10 to 4; Saturdays 10 to 2), are available for London and all England and Wales. No instructions, either verbal or in writing, can be received, except from one of the parties. Affidavits are prepared from the personal instructions of one of the parties about to be married, and the licence is delivered to the party upon payment of fees amounting to thirty shillings, in addition to the cost of stamp, 10*s.* 6*d.* No previous notice is required and the licence is available as soon as it is issued. The cost of licences through a clerical surrogate in the country varies, according to the diocese, from £1 15*s.* to £2 12*s.* 6*d.* By the 4th George IV. c. 76, it is enacted, in order to avoid fraud and collusion in obtaining licences for marriage, that before any such licence be granted one of the parties shall make a declaration, on oath, that there is no legal impediment to the intended marriage; and also that one of such parties hath had his or her usual place of abode for the space of fifteen days immediately preceding the issuing of the licence within the boundary of the parish church, or the district parish in the church of which the marriage is to be solemnized.

It may be added that in the country there may generally be found a parochial clergyman who is also a surrogate, before whom the above-mentioned affidavit may be taken, and whose office it is to procure the licence from the Bishop's registry, the surrogate delivering the same personally to the applicant.

SPECIAL MARRIAGE LICENCES.

SPECIAL LICENCES are granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury through the Faculty Office, Doctors' Commons, under special circumstances, for marriage at any place with or without previous residence in the district, or at any time, &c.; but the reasons assigned must be such as to meet with his Grace's approval. Fees for licence stamp, &c., average £29 5*s.* 6*d.*

PROCEEDINGS AS TO A MARRIAGE BEFORE A REGISTRAR.

NOTICE AND DECLARATION.—In case of an intended marriage by Certificate at a register office (i.e., the superintendent registrar's office), or a certified building (i.e., usually a Roman Catholic or Nonconformist church or chapel), it is necessary for one of the parties to give notice under his or her hand (in the form prescribed by the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, schedule A) to the superintendent registrar of the district within which the parties shall have dwelt for the space of seven days then next immediately preceding; or if the parties dwell in different superintendent registrars' districts, a like notice must be given to the superintendent registrar of each district; every form of notice contains solemn declarations that there is no lawful hindrance to such marriage, as to the necessary residence, the ages of the parties, and consent of parent in case of a minor; such notice and declarations must be signed before a registration officer of the district, namely, a superintendent registrar, or registrar of births and deaths or marriages or the deputy of some such registrar. If the marriage is intended to be had by licence, either party may give notice, but the notice must be given to the superintendent registrar of the district in which one or other has resided for fifteen days. The marriage may, however, take place in either district.

CERTIFICATE.—After the expiration of twenty-one days next after the day of the entry of notice of marriage which is to be had without licence, the superintendent registrar is required, provided there be no lawful impediment, to issue, upon the request of the party giving the notice, a certificate in the form prescribed by the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, schedule B. At any time within three calendar months next after the day of the entry of the notice of marriage the intended marriage may be solemnized under the authority of the certificate.

LICENCE.—In the case of marriage by licence the superintendent registrar is required, provided there be no lawful impediment, to issue his certificate and also a licence to marry; one week-day other than Good Friday or Christmas Day must intervene between date of notice and date of issue of licence. At any time within three months next after the day of the entry of the notice of marriage the intended marriage may be solemnized under the licence. The building must be stated in the notice.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY.—After the expiration of twenty-one days after the entry of the notice if the marriage is to be had without licence, or of one whole day if by licence, the marriage may be contracted at the register office and in the presence of the superintendent registrar and some registrar of the district, and in the presence of two witnesses, between the hours of eight a.m. and three in the afternoon, with open doors. Each of the parties must declare as follows:—"I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A. B., may not be joined in matrimony to C.D.:" and each of the parties shall say to the other, "I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband]." A wedding-ring is usually required. The fact that the surname of one of the parties, and her condition, was untruly stated, was held not to render such a marriage invalid (Donaldson v. Rutter, 1907, 24 T.L.R. 12). The building must be as stated in the notice. "Gretna Green weddings" are obsolete, a period of residence being now required by law. Provision is made in the Marriages and Registration Act, 1837, sect. 23, for the declaration and form of words to be used in Welsh in Wales and in places where the Welsh tongue is used. If both parties are Jews, they must give notice to the registration officer in manner before mentioned, and may marry according to their usages in a synagogue or private dwelling-house, and at any hour; the marriage must be registered by the secretary of the husband's synagogue. If both parties are members of the Society of Friends, er, if not being in membership, they have been authorised by the Society of Friends to solemnize their marriage in accordance with its usages, they must give notice to the registration officer, and may be married in a Friends' meeting-house, and the marriage must be registered as soon as conveniently may be after its solemnization by the registering officer of the Society appointed to act for the district in which the meeting-house is situated. The presence of a registrar of marriages is not requisite at such marriages of Jews or members of the Society of Friends. The provisions as to Notices and Licences given above do not apply to Ireland. [Marriages before a Registrar in that country are regulated by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81, and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 27; the Act regulating marriages in that country in places of Worship is 33 & 34 Vict. c. 110.]

Under the Marriage Act, 1898 (which does not apply to Scotland or Ireland or to marriages according to the usages of the Society of Friends or of Jews), marriages may be solemnized in registered Nonconformist places of worship, without the presence of a Registrar, provided "the authorised person" (which means a person certified as having been duly authorised for the purpose by the trustees or other governing body of the building) is present, and no notice has been given to the Superintendent Registrar that the parties require the presence of a Registrar.

Where a marriage is thus solemnized each of the parties shall in some part of the ceremony make the following Declarations:—

"I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A. B., may not be joined in matrimony to C. D."

And each of the parties shall say to the other:—

"I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband]; " or, in lieu thereof:—

"I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my wedded wife [or husband]."

The Act provides for the registration after marriage by "the authorised person."

Rules and Regulations relating to this Act were published in Oct., 1909. See Statutory Rules and Orders, 1909, No. 1332.

CERTIFICATE OF BIRTH, DEATH, OR MARRIAGE.

On giving the name and date this can be obtained at Somerset House on payment of 3*s.* 9*d.* made up as follows: 1*s.* for search, 2*s.* 6*d.* for certificate, and 1*d.* for stamp. Certificates are also obtainable at the above rate from the superintendent registrar of the district in which the birth, death, or marriage occurred.

MARRIAGES OF BRITISH SUBJECTS ABROAD.

Act passed 27th June, 1892; came into force 1st Jan., 1893. Order in Council passed 28th Oct., 1892, laying down Regulations for Marriages under the Act.

For the marriage of British subjects at an Embassy, Legation, or Consulate, notice must be given to the marriage officer within whose district the parties have resided for at least one week immediately preceding. If the parties reside in different consular districts, notice must be given by each party in his or her district. If one of the parties resides in the United Kingdom, notice must be given in like manner as if the party so resident were about to be married at that place, in England and Wales or Ireland to the superintendent registrar or registrar, in Scotland by proclamation of banns. The notice given to the consular marriage officer must be entered by him and posted in his office for fourteen consecutive days before the marriage may be solemnized, and a declaration has to be made on oath that there is no legal impediment to the intended marriage, that the party or parties has or have had their usual place of residence in the district of the consular marriage officer for three weeks immediately preceding, and that any consent required has been given. A consular officer holding a warrant for a district can only solemnize a marriage at his own official house. He cannot solemnize a marriage at the office of any subordinate consular officer, or elsewhere. No marriages performed at any other place are valid under the Foreign Marriage Act. Parties residing within a consular district who may wish to be married under the Act must go to the consular officer provided with a warrant for that district; two or more witnesses are required to be present.

The following fees for marriages under the Foreign Marriage Act are leviable under the Consular Fees Order in Council of 18th August, 1892, and are payable to His Majesty's Govt.:—

For receiving notice of an intended marriage	0	10	0
For receiving notice of a caveat	1	0	0
For every marriage solemnized by or in the presence of a Marriage Officer and registered by him	0	10	0
For certificate by a Marriage Officer of notice having been given and posted up, in case of one of the parties residing outside the consular district in which the marriage is to take place	0	5	0
For attendance by consular officer at a marriage solemnized in accordance with the local law and for registration of the same	1	0	0

Marriages may be solemnized 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The ceremony, if a marriage under the Foreign Marriage Act, may be performed by, or in the presence of, any Ambassador, Minister, Chargé d'Affaires, or any of the Secretaries authorised for that purpose, or by any Consul-general, Consul, Vice-consul, Consular agent (or any person duly authorised to discharge their duties), or Proconsul, provided that such consular officer is furnished with a warrant signed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. No religious ceremony is required, but any form according to the creed of the contracting parties may be used. The presence of the duly authorised Marriage Officer is, however, necessary to render the marriage valid. If the ceremonial be that of the Church of England, it can only be performed by a clergyman of that Church. If the service be not that of the Church of England, the contracting parties must make a declaration before the Marriage Officer to the effect that they know not of any lawful impediment why they may not be joined in matrimony, and that they call upon the persons present to witness that they take each other respectively to be lawful wedded husband and wife. In the absence of any religious ceremony, such declaration is sufficient.

Marriages solemnized under the Foreign Marriage Acts are legal by English law when both parties are British subjects, and also when only one of them is a British subject, but such marriages are not necessarily valid out of His Majesty's dominions. In cases where one of the parties is a subject of the country where the marriage is proposed to take place, or of a third country, the party in question must previously comply with the requirements of the marriage law of the country to which he or she belongs, so far as it may be possible to do so, in order to render such marriage also valid by the law of that country.

An Englishwoman married to a foreigner follows the nationality of her husband.

In Germany marriages by any foreign consular officer are, in the absence of any treaty stipulations, strictly prohibited.

A marriage which would not be valid in England would be equally invalid if solemnized in an embassy, legation, or consulate abroad. For instance, marriages within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity would not be valid.

A marriage between Christians in India may be proved in England by an India Office certificate (Braid v. Braid, 1909, 25 T.L.R. 646).

Marriages may also be solemnized under the "Foreign Marriage Act, 1892," before any governor, etc., and also before the commanding officers of any of His Majesty's ships on a foreign station.

MARRIAGES ABROAD WITH FOREIGNERS ACCORDING TO FOREIGN LAW.

Act of 1906.*—Under the Marriage with Foreigners Act, 1906, any British subject desiring to be married in a foreign country to a foreigner according to the law of the country may, after giving notice of the marriage, obtain a certificate from the registrar that there is no legal impediment to the marriage. In order to obtain the certificate, the rules set out in the schedule to the Act must be complied with. Any persons may enter an objection to a certificate, the validity of which will be decided by the Registrar-General.

A marriage by repute which is valid by the law of the domicile in a foreign country will be recognised as valid by the English courts (re Green, Noyes v. Pitkin, 1909, 25 T.L.R. 222).

MARRIAGES IN SCOTLAND.

The marriage laws of Scotland are peculiar among those of all nations for the latitude allowed the contracting parties, and, beyond requiring proof of present consent, the utter absence of direction as to celebration. No religious ceremony is obligatory, although the intervention of the Church is recognised, and has become more usual in practice. That the parties give their free and serious consent is the only requisite. Males over fourteen and females over twelve may contract marriage without consent of their parents or guardians.

Marriages are of two kinds: (1) Those solemnized by a minister after (a) banns, or (b) publication of notice by the Registrar, called Regular Marriages; and (2) those celebrated without the assistance of a clergyman, called Irregular Marriages.

On Banns.—The proclamation of banns in Scotland has been customary authentically since 1242, and is probably of greater antiquity. It is regulated chiefly by the Acts of Assembly of the Church of Scotland. One of the parties (if not already domiciled in Scotland) must have resided in that country for six weeks previous to the proclamation, and in the parish where the banns are to be proclaimed for the space of fifteen clear days immediately preceding. The banns are proclaimed in the parish church (i.e., the church in the parish of the Established Church of Scotland) on two separate Sundays during service, but it is customary to complete the publication by proclamation at two services on the same Sunday. Where the parties reside in different parishes, the proclamation is made in both. There is no provision for cases where one of the parties resides in England, but it is usual to accept an English certificate. Episcopalians, unlike other Dissenters in Scotland, have privilege of proclamation also in their chapel. Application for proclamation of banns is made to the session clerk of the parish church. A certificate of residence signed by two householders is usually required to accompany the application. The fee for banns is 2*s.* 6*d.*

The certificate of publication of banns is authority to a clergyman of any denomination to celebrate the marriage. After the lapse of three months the banns are useless. The marriage must take place in presence of at least two witnesses capable of giving evidence. It need not be celebrated in a church, but may be in a dwelling-house or elsewhere, and at any hour; the time and place is a matter of absolute indifference to the law. After the marriage a schedule, signed by the parties, the clergyman and two witnesses, must be transmitted to the registrar within three days, under penalties. Clergymen do not charge fees.

After Notice by Registrar.—This procedure is regulated by the Marriage Notice (Scotland) Act, 1878. Both parties must have resided in Scotland for at least fifteen days prior to publication of the notice. Application is made to the registrar, who publicly exhibits the notice of the intended marriage for seven days. At the expiry of this period, unless written objections have been filed, the registrar issues a certificate of publication, which is equivalent in effect to banns. The fee is 1*s.* 6*d.* Roman Catholics avail themselves of this method exclusively.

Irregular Marriages.—By declaration of acknowledgment. One of the parties must have resided in Scotland for twenty-one days immediately preceding. The parties, being capable of marriage and without legal impediment, may express either verbally or in writing, in presence of two witnesses (to whom the parties are known) capable of giving evidence, their mutual consent to take each other then and there for husband nd wife. This act constitutes marriage. Registration is not essential to the validity of the arriage. If, however, it is desired to register he marriage, application is made to the sheriff f the county where it has been contracted. It advisable to employ a solicitor to conduct the atter. The fees are £1 5s.

* This Act has not yet been brought into operation, and pending the issue of the Order in Council which will make it operative, parties interested should apply to the Registrar-General.

BRITISH NATIONALITY AND NATURALIZATION.

NATIONALITY.—The following are, by the law f England, deemed to be British subjects:—

1. All persons born in His Majesty's dominions, whether of British or of Foreign parents.
2. Children of natural-born British subjects, wherever born.
3. Grandchildren of natural-born British subjects, wherever born.
4. Persons naturalized (a) By Special Act of Parliament, (b) Under the provisions of the "Naturalization Act, 1870."

Natural-born British subjects can only deprive hemselves of British nationality, (1) If they appen to be born in the British dominions of oreign parents, in which case they may, if of full ge and if under no disability, make a declaraion of alienage; (2) If they voluntarily become naturalized in a foreign state.

British subjects born in foreign countries sometimes become, by the law of the country of their birth, subjects or citizens of that country. In uch case they may, by the law of England, when of full age, and if under no disability, make a declaration of alienage, and they then cease to be British subjects. Should they retain heir British nationality, and continue to reside n the country of their birth, their British nationality will not avail them if claimed as subjects or citizens of the country in question.

NATURALIZATION.—The ordinary way of becoming a British subject is by fulfilling the requirements of the "Naturalization Act, 1870. The pplicant must either have resided in the United Kingdom for a term of not less than five years, or have been in the service of the Crown for a similar period. He must also furnish evidence of his intention, when naturalized, either of residing in the United Kingdom, or of serving under the Crown. All applications for certificates of naturalization should be addressed to the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Privileges of naturalized British subjects:

"An alien to whom a certificate of naturalization is granted shall in the United Kingdom be entitled to all political and other rights, powers, and privileges, and be subject to all obligations, to which a natural-born British subject is entitled or subject in the United Kingdom, with this qualification, that he shall not, when within the limits of the foreign state of which he was a subject previously to obtaining his certificate of naturalization, be deemed to be a British subject unless he has ceased to be a subject of that state in pursuance of the laws thereof, or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect."

With reference to the last paragraph of the foregoing extract, it may be mentioned that the only country with which Great Britain has yet concluded a treaty on the subject of naturalization is the United States of America.

A natural-born British subject, who has become naturalized in a foreign country, may obtain a certificate of re-admission to British nationality on fulfilling the conditions required in the case of aliens applying for a certificate of naturalization.

The children of naturalized British subjects, if born in the British dominions, are by the law of England deemed to be British subjects. If born abroad, they are only deemed to be naturalized British subjects provided that their father was naturalized under the Naturalization Act, 1870, and that during infancy they became resident with their father, or mother being a widow, in any part of the United Kingdom.

A British colony may legislate on the subject of naturalization within its own limits.

On grant of certificate of naturalization	5	0	0
For registration of declaration, with or without oath of allegiance	0	10	0
For certified copy of any declaration or certificate with or without oath	0	10	0

STATUS OF ALIENS.—Property may be held by an alien in the same manner as by a natural-born British subject, but the title to such property does not confer any right on an alien to hold real property out of the United Kingdom, or qualify him for any franchise.

Aliens are not entitled to be tried by a jury de medietate linguæ, but are triable in the same manner as if they were natural-born subjects.

UNDESIRABLE ALIENS.—An undesirable alien —e.g., one who is without means, or who is a lunatic, or an idiot, or who has been guilty in another country of an extraditable offence—may be prevented landing in the United Kingdom. An alien may also be expelled from this country if he prove to be "undesirable" within the meaning of the Aliens Act, 1905.

NOTIFICATION OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

By the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, the provisions of the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act of 1889 were extended to the whole of England and Wales on the 1st January, 1899. Every case of infectious disease, as defined by the Act, is to be notified to the Medical Officer of Health of the district in which it occurs. The notice may be by letter or even verbal, and must be given by the head of the family, or by the nearest relatives present in the building or in attendance on the patient, or any other person in attendance, or by the occupier of the building. In addition to this, the medical man in attendance is required to send a certificate to the Medical Officer of Health. Failure to send the notice or certificate renders the defaulter liable to 40*s.* fine. No payment is made for the notices required to be given by persons in the house, but the medical man gets 2*s.* 6*d.* for every case in his private practice and 1*s.* for every case in a public institution of which he is officer.

The diseases to which the Act applies are small-pox, cholera, diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, scarlatina or scarlet fever, and the following fevers: typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continued, or puerperal. Plague must also be notified, in consequence of an Order issued in 1900. The local authority may order that the Act shall apply to any infectious disease other than those just mentioned, but such an order must be approved by the Local Government Board. In some districts the following have been declared infectious: measles, rötheln or German measles, whooping cough, chickenpox, mumps, and yellow fever. In the case of London the provisions of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, are similar to those now extended to the rest of the country.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

PRECAUTIONS NECESSARY TO BE OBSERVED.—By the Public Health Act, 1875 (as amended by the Public Health Act, 1907), it is provided that any person who—(1) While suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder wilfully exposes himself without proper precautions against spreading the said disorder in any street, public place, shop, inn, or public conveyance, or enters any public conveyance without previously notifying to the owner, conductor, or driver thereof that he is so suffering; or, (2) Being in charge of any person so suffering, so exposes such sufferer, or causes or permits such sufferer to be so exposed; or, (3) Gives, lends, sells, transmits, or exposes, without previous disinfection, any bedding, clothing, rags, or other things which have been exposed to infection from any such disorder, shall be liable to a penalty of £5. A person suffering from such disorder who enters a public conveyance is liable to a fine of 40s.; and if he so enters without notifying to the owner or driver that he is so suffering, shall be ordered by the Court to pay the owner and driver the amount of any loss and expense they may incur in respect of the disinfection of the conveyance. Every owner or driver of a public conveyance must provide for the disinfection of such conveyance after it has conveyed any person suffering from dangerous infection; but he cannot be required to convey any person so suffering until he has been paid a sum sufficient to cover any loss or expense incurred in disinfecting the conveyance. No person may knowingly let for hire any house, &c., in which any person has been suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder without having the same disinfected to the satisfaction of a medical practitioner, as testified by a certificate signed by him—penalty not exceeding £20, or imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding one month. By the Public Health Act, 1907, the Local Government Board has power to declare that this Act shall be in force in any specified district. Under this Act, a person suffering from an infectious disease must not engage in any trade unless he can do so without spreading the disease; nor may he take any book from a public or circulating library, or allow any such book to be returned after it has been exposed to infection.* Clothes exposed to infection must not be sent to a public laundry unless they have been disinfected. A child who has been suffering from an infectious disease must not attend school without a medical certificate. Dairymen must notify infectious diseases existing among their servants, and the owner or driver of a public vehicle which has conveyed an infectious person must notify the same to the district medical officer. No wake may be held over the body of a person who died of an infectious disease. Where the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, is in force, where any suitable hospital is provided, any person who is suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder, and is without proper lodging or accommodation, or is lodged in a room occupied by more than one family, or cannot be effectually isolated, may, on a certificate signed by a medical practitioner, and with the consent of the hospital, be removed by order of any justice to such hospital. Similar provisions apply to the Metropolis. The occupier of a house in which there has been infectious disease within six weeks before he ceases to occupy it, must have the premises disinfected and inform the owner of the disease. Where it appears to any District Council that any house is in such a condition that the health of any person is affected or endangered thereby, or that whitewashing, &c., would tend to prevent or check infectious disease, they may give notice in writing to the owner or occupier of such house to whitewash, &c., the same.

WILLS, TESTATORS AND EXECUTORS.

REASONS FOR MAKING A WILL.—Every man having a wife and family should make his will. However small his estate, it is an imperative duty in most cases, and is safer in every case, to protect the interest of the survivors by a will, and by the appointment of one or more trustworthy persons to carry his wishes into effect. When persons die intestate, having foolishly put off making a will until it is too late, their negligence may deprive those for whom they were most anxious to provide. Thus a widow may find that the estate, a life policy perhaps, is not all hers, but has to be shared with a distant cousin of her husband's. Negligence, or unreasoning dislike to making a will, becomes an irreparable crime against those who have the first claim to protection. The help of a lawyer in making a will is not in every case essential, but it is always advisable, particularly where there is a desire on a testator's part to provide for his property being "settled" as it is called—e.g., the income being paid to his widow for her life, or until remarriage, and on her death or remarriage the capital being divided among his children equally. The tying-up or postponing the enjoyment of income or capital requires the skill of a practised lawyer. Assuming that a lawyer is not employed, a person having resolved to make a will must not regard it as a light matter, to be got rid of in a few minutes, like writing a letter, but one demanding the most serious attention. It is only after a person is dead, and cannot explain his meaning, that his will can be open to dispute. It is the more necessary, therefore, to express what is meant in language of the utmost clearness, avoiding the use of any word or expression that seems to admit of another meaning than the one intended. The lawyers have a maxim that the unforeseen (i.e., the event not provided for) always happens. It is better to be prolix than to leave the smallest room for doubt or uncertainty, although the same name or word be repeated over and over again. Sounding phrases are entirely out of place. Avoid the use of "legal terms," such as "heirs" and "issue," when the same thing may be expressed in plain language. If in writing the will a mistake be made, it is better to rewrite the whole. Before a will is executed, that is, signed by the testator in presence of two witnesses, an alteration may be made by striking through the words with a pen, but opposite to such alteration the testator and witnesses should write their names or place their initials. Never scratch out a word with a knife or other instrument, and no alteration of any kind whatever must be made after the will is executed. If the testator afterwards wishes to change the disposition of his estate, it is better to make a new will, revoking the old one, or to add a codicil to the first, which must be duly executed and attested in the same manner as the original will. A will should be written in ink and very legibly on a single sheet of paper. Although, of course, forms of wills must vary to suit different cases, the following directions may be found useful to those who, in cases of emergency, are called upon to draw up wills, either for themselves or others :—

TESTATOR OR TESTATRIX.—The person who makes the will is the testator, or if the will-maker be a woman, the testatrix.

ESTATE.—By this word is to be understood property of all kinds, both real and personal. Real property includes tithes and advowsons, as well as freehold land and houses; while personal property includes debts due, arrears of rents, money, leasehold property, house furniture, goods, assurance policies, stock in public companies, and the like.

RESIDUARY LEGATEES.—It is well in all cases to leave to some person or persons "the residue of my estate and effects," although it may be thought that the whole of the property has been disposed of in legacies already mentioned in the will. It should be remembered that a will operates on property acquired after it has been made.

TO BEGIN A WILL.—A form in which a will may be commenced is:—"This is the last will of me, Thomas Smith, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, in the county of Berks."

TO END A WILL.—After disposing of the property, the will may be ended as follows :—"And I revoke all former wills and codicils. Dated this tenth day of December, 1890."

EXECUTION OF A WILL.—The testator should sign his name at the foot or end of the will, in presence of two witnesses, who will immediately sign their names in his and in each other's presence. A person who has been left a legacy or share of residue in the will, or whose wife or husband has been left a legacy, should not be an attesting witness. Their attestation would be good, but they would forfeit the legacy. It is better that a person named as executor should not be a witness. Husband and wife may both be witnesses, provided neither is a legatee. If a solicitor be appointed executor, it is lawful to direct that his ordinary fees and charges shall be paid; but in this case he (as an interested party) must not be a witness to the will.

ATTESTING EXECUTION.—Opposite to or beneath the testator's signature should be written the attestation clause. The following form of attestation will be found sufficient :—

Signed by the testator [or testatrix, as the case may be], in the presence of us, both present at the same time who in his [or her] presence and in the presence of each other have hereunto set our names as witnesses.

THOMAS SMITH [Signature of Testator.]

William Jones, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, Tailor. Henry Morgan, of North Street, Reading, Esq.

It is desirable that the witnesses should be fully described, as they may possibly be wanted at some future time. If the testator should be too ill to sign, even by a mark, another person may sign the testator's name to the will for him, in his presence and by his direction, and in this case it should be shown that the testator knew the contents of the document. The attestation clause should therefore be worded: "Signed by Thomas Brown, by the direction and in the presence of the testator, Thomas Smith, in the joint presence of us, who thereupon signed our names in his presence and in the presence of each other, the will having been first read over to the testator, who appeared fully to understand the same." If the testator be blind the will should be read aloud to him in the presence of the witnesses, and the fact mentioned in the attestation clause. If by inadvertence the testator should have signed his will without the witnesses being present, then the attestation should be :—"The testator acknowledged his signature already made as his signature to his last will and testament, in the joint presence," &c. Any omission in the observance of these details causes delay and expense, and sometimes great difficulty is experienced in procuring an affidavit by one of the attesting witnesses before the will can be admitted to Probate.

CODICIL.—When any change is required to be made in the disposition of property as stated in the will, the change should be embodied in a codicil. A codicil should begin :—"This is a codicil to the will of me, Thomas Smith, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, in the county of Berks, the said will bearing date," &c. A codicil must be dated at the end, and signed and witnessed with exactly the same formalities as the will.

EXECUTORS.—It is usual to appoint two executors, although one is sufficient. The name and address of each executor should be given in full, as follows :—"I appoint John Jones, of number twenty-one, London Street, Ipswich, and Edward Matthews, of number seventeen, Market Street, Lincoln, executors of this my will." An executor may be a legatee. Thus a child or wife to whom the whole or a portion of the estate is left may be appointed sole executor, or one of two executors. The addresses of the executors are not necessary; but it is desirable, here as elsewhere, to avoid ambiguity or vagueness.

APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEES.—The form of appointment of executors will also serve when the estate is left in care of trustees, except that the persons should be designated "executors and trustees." The Public Trustee may be appointed executor or trustee of a will. See PUBLIC TRUSTEE, post.

TRUSTS OF THE WILL.—When the estate is wholly for the children, the will may read, after the appointment of the executors and trustees:—"I give and devise all my estate and effects, real and personal, of which I may die possessed or entitled to, unto the said John Jones and Edward Matthews, upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child living at my death who being sons or a son attain the age of 21 years or being daughters or a daughter attain that age or marry. And for all or any the children or child living at my death, who being male attain the age of 21 years or being female attain that age or marry of any child of mine who dies in my lifetime leaving children or a child living at my death, such last-mentioned children or child to take the share or shares which their parent would have taken if living at my death, and so that no grandchild of mine shall take whose parent is living and capable of taking." Where the widow is to have a life-interest use the following words: "upon trust for my wife during her life [or during her widowhood], and after her death [or second marriage, which first happens] upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child" &c. as before. The words in square brackets will only be used where the widow is to lose her interest if she marries again.

WHO CANNOT MAKE A WILL.—A minor cannot make a will. A woman married before the 1st of January, 1883, can make a will with her husband's consent; but without such consent she can only (under the Married Women's Property Act) bequeath property accruing to her after that date except in certain circumstances, respecting which it is advisable to consult a solicitor. But a woman married after that date can dispose by will of all property belonging to her at the time of her marriage, and of all property acquired thereafter, in all respects as if she were an unmarried woman.

REVOCATION.—A will is revoked by a subsequent will (but only so far as such subsequent will operates as a virtual revocation, as by making other provisions inconsistent with the previous will; for this reason a will should always have a clause revoking previous testamentary dispositions), or by burning, tearing, or otherwise destroying the same. It is not sufficient to obliterate the will with a pen. Marriage in every case acts as the revocation of a will: so that after marriage the old will should be re-acknowledged, or a new one made.

LAPSED LEGACIES.—If a legatee die in the lifetime of the testator, the legacy or share of residue lapses and falls into the residue, excepting only in cases where the legatee is a child or "other issue" of the testator and leaves issue living at the testator's death, and the will does not provide for the class of children or issue being ascertained at some period other than the death of the testator. For instance, if a share of residue is left to "all my children living at my wife's death," the share of a child who died in the wife's lifetime would lapse even though the child should leave issue.

TO ONE PERSON ABSOLUTELY.—When it is the intention to leave all the property to one person, as for instance a wife or child, the will may read:—"I devise and bequeath all my estate and effects, real and personal, which I may die possessed of or entitled to, unto my wife Mary Smith, absolutely."

TO CHILDREN UNDER AGE.—When estates are left wholly or in part to children under the age of 21 years, trustees should be appointed to hold the property in trust for those to whom it will ultimately belong. The trustees will have power to apply the annual income for their maintenance. A wife may be appointed a trustee, or may be sole trustee. It is also usual to appoint the executors or some near relative, guardians of children under age. By the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1886, the mother of a child, if she survives the father, becomes the guardian of such child, either alone, if no guardian is appointed, or jointly with any guardian appointed by the father.

ALL PROPERTY TO BE INVESTED.—Executors and trustees may be empowered to sell and dispose of an estate, and after the payment of all just debts and expenses to invest the remainder. For this purpose the section headed "Trust Investments" should be consulted.

The stringency of the law as to the due execution of wills is only relaxed in favour of sailors and soldiers while on service. The law of wills is mostly contained in the Wills Act, 1 Vict. c. 27.

DUTIES OF EXECUTORS.—After the death of the testator, the duties of the executor may be stated briefly as follows:—The first duty of the executors, or of one of them, is to see that the funeral takes place in a suitable and becoming way; then to make lists or schedules of the debts and the assets or property. For purposes of duty it is necessary to estimate the value of the real and personal property left, or get it valued. Under the Finance Act, 1894, duties are charged on all property in which the testator had a life interest, even though the property may not have been under his personal control. The executor must take the will to the Probate Registry, Somerset House, or to the Probate Registry of the district in which the testator had a fixed place of abode, or to a solicitor, and prove the will; to collect all the property of the deceased and pay all his just debts, and before distributing the estate, if it be a large one, it is necessary in order to relieve the executors from personal liability to duly advertise in certain London and local newspapers for all claims against the estate to be sent in before a specified date. Pay the legacy or succession duty. Dispose of the residue of the property as directed in the will. By the Land Transfer Act, 1897, all the testator's real estate becomes vested in the executors, who hold the same as trustees for the persons beneficially entitled under the will or otherwise, and such persons can only acquire a title to the estate through the executors, after payment of all charges and liabilities to which the same is subject. Executors are not obliged to act, neither is it necessary that all the executors should act: one alone is competent to prove a will and carry out its provisions. In small estates, probate and letters of administration may be obtained through an Inland Revenue Office.

ADMINISTRATORS.—If an executor has not been appointed in the will, or if the executor be dead, or does not wish to act, the residuary legatee nearest of kin to the deceased, or a legatee under the will, is entitled to act and administer the will, and is called administrator.

WHERE TO FIND A PROVED WILL.

To find a will proved before 1st January, 1858, the date on which the Court of Probate Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77), came into operation, it is best to search first—if the testator was a man of substance—the index to the wills proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, which is kept at Somerset House. Failing this, the will is probably to be found in the registry of the district in which it was proved. The wills proved prior to 1858 were all distributed among the district registries when these institutions came into existence. This is the only broad rule which can be laid down to guide a searcher. To find a will proved since 1858 is a far simpler task. It must have been proved either at the Principal Registry at Somerset House, or in the registry of the district in which the testator lived. In the former case the original will itself is carefully preserved at Somerset House, the copy of which probate has been granted is in the hands of the executors who proved the will, and another copy or Parliament is bound up in a folio volume of wills made by testators of that initial and date; the indices to these volumes fill a room of considerable size at Somerset House, where the indices may be examined and any will read on payment of a search fee of one shilling. In the latter case, the original will, proved in the District Registry, is there kept, and may be seen or a copy obtained, but a copy is sent to and filed at Somerset House, where also it may be seen. A general index of grants, both probate and administrations, is prepared and printed annually in lexicographical form, and may be seen at either the Principal or District Registry. This index is usually ready by about June or July of the following year. The reader may not copy any part of the will except the names and addresses of the executors and the date and private number of the will. If he desires a copy, he can order one to be made, for which he will pay according to the length of the will, at the rate of sixpence a folio (ninety words) for an ordinary copy, and ninepence a folio for a certified copy, which, with a shilling stamp impressed thereon, can be produced and read in any Court of law. The District Registries established by the Act of 1857 are the following:—

SAFE CUSTODY OF WILLS.

There is a depository for the safe custody of the Wills of living persons at Somerset House. Since 1857 this depository has been provided by the State under sect. 91 of the Act 20 & 21 Vic. c. 77; but the provision has been almost a dead-letter. A will may be deposited through the Registrar of a District Registry, who will transmit the will to London in a registered letter on receiving a fee of 10*s.* for the deposit, of 2*s.* 6*d.* for entering a minute thereof, and 2*s.* for filing the affidavit which is required. A will once deposited will not be given up to anybody, but must remain in the registry until the testator dies, unless he goes to the registry with the original minute of deposit and other proof of his identity, and destroys his will in the presence of the Registrar. TRUST FUNDS AND INVESTMENTS.

BY RULE OF THE SUPREME COURT, DATED NOVEMBER, 1888, trustees may invest trust funds in the following securities:—

2¾ per Cent. Consols; to be reduced, 5th April, 1903, to 2½ per cent. Consols and Reduced 3 per Cent. Annuities. 2¾ per Cent. and 2½ per Cent. Annuities. Exchequer Bills. Bank Stock. India 3½ per Cent. and 3 per Cent. Stocks. Indian Guaranteed Railway Securities. Colonial Government Stocks guaranteed by Imperial Government. Mortgage of freehold or copyhold estates in England or Wales. 3 and 3½ per Cent. Metropolitan Consolidated Stock.

Debenture, preference, guaranteed, or rent-charge stocks of railways in Great Britain or Ireland having for ten years next before the date of investment paid a dividend on ordinary stock or shares.

Nominal stocks or nominal debenture stocks issued under the Local Loans Act, 1875, provided in each case that such stocks shall not be liable to be redeemed within a period of fifteen years from the date of investment.

Local Loans Stock under the National Debt and Local Loans Act, 1887.

THE RULE OF COURT OF NOVEMBER, 1888, will be little referred to now that all the foregoing items in more extensive, and in some cases slightly different, language, are authorized by the Trustee Act, 1893, the more important clauses of which, especially where the Rule of Court is varied, may be summarized as follows:—This Act, which consolidates the enactments relating to trustees, authorizes mortgages on freeholds, or property equivalent to freehold, not only in England and Wales, but also (where not prohibited) in Ireland and Scotland. A very few leaseholds, viz., terms of 200 years, at a nominal rent, are also authorized by the Trustee Act, 1893.

THIS ACT ALSO AUTHORIZES investments by trustees upon any securities guaranteed by Parliament, and these include the following:—Certain Colonial Government stocks, the Turkish Loan of 1855, the Egyptian 3 per cent. Guaranteed Loan, and one or two others. In addition to Metropolitan Stock, any stocks of the London County Council are now authorized; also any Corporation or Municipal stocks of the cities or boroughs (about 60 in number) having at the last census a population exceeding 50,000. Also stocks, &c., under certain conditions, of waterworks companies and of water commissioners. Another very important addition to the list of trust securities is this: Preference, debenture, guaranteed, or rentcharge stocks of British railway companies which have paid 3 per cent. on their ordinary stocks for ten years. This includes all the great lines in England, Ireland, and Scotland, except a few, e.g., the Great Eastern, and Chatham and Dover, which have not, for the whole period of ten years, paid regular dividends to their ordinary shareholders.

THE ACT FURTHER AUTHORIZES trust investments in certain Indian Railways guaranteed by the Indian Government, which can be found on reference to the Stock Exchange official lists. But with regard to the entire list, a trustee cannot invest in anything which is (directly or by implication) prohibited by the terms of his trust.

THE PUBLIC TRUSTEE.

This is a Government Office by means of which the State acts as Executor and as Trustee under a Will, or as Trustee under a Settlement, whether new or old, and in other capacities of a like nature. The Office has proved a complete success. In former editions, the value of the present and future estates in the care of the Public Trustee were reported as amounting to a total value of some £26,000,000. The annual report for 1909 speaks of this value as having reached a total of £38,000,000, and from authentic information published in the course of last year the total business negotiated by the Department since its inception down to the end of 1910 will probably exceed some £45,000,000. The average value of an estate for probate in this country is £4,400, whereas the average value of estates in the hands of the Public Trustee is £7,000; while as to Wills in his custody, which have yet to mature, the information as to the estates lodged with the Wills shows a high average value of some £33,000 apiece—an indication that the Public Trustee has secured the confidence of persons of means and education to a large and unexpected extent.

The methods of the Department, which dispense with forms wherever possible, are prompt and businesslike. The facts of any trust, new or old, in which it is desired that the Public Trustee should take office may be brought to his notice by letter or by personal interview. Upon his assenting to act, his appointment may be effected in the same simple way as that of a private trustee.

In the case of a Will about to be made, the appointment may be effected with even greater simplicity. All that the testator need say is, "I appoint the Public Trustee executor and trustee of this my Will"; or the appointment may be a joint one with personal friends or relations of the testator. In the case of a Will already made, the appointment of the Public Trustee to act in substitution of or jointly with the executors already nominated can be effected by means of a codicil.

The great advantages of the Public Trustee are that as he is a permanent trustee the expense of fresh appointments is thereby saved. He will never be ill, or unable to attend to business, and his integrity is guaranteed by the State.

In addition to these advantages, he makes a special feature of investment. The large funds placed in his care, and his official position, give him special advantages in this respect; and he conceives it to be his duty not only to do all that is possible to ensure that the capital shall be preserved intact, but also to invest as productively as is prudent under his powers, so that the best rate of interest obtainable shall be secured for the benefit of those entitled to the income.

The Public Trustee is not, as such, limited in his powers of investment to trustee securities, but, like a private trustee, he is bound by such powers of investment as may be given him in the Will or trust instrument under which he acts. In practice, wherever possible, he appears to follow the sound policy of spreading his investments as much as possible geographically, so that the risk of any loss, either of capital or of income, is diminished, and the stability of both assured. In his last report, he shows that the all-round return of the investments of the whole of the estates in his care is as high as £3 17*s.* per cent., and, where a greater latitude of investment is given than that permitted by trustee securities only, he has found it possible to secure a return of 4 per cent. and over.

The success of the Department may doubtless be ascribed to the wide public need for such an office; secondly, to the State guarantee which accompanied the remedy provided; and thirdly, to the energy and efficiency with which the Department is administered. The Public Trustee makes a point of giving the personal attention of himself and of his senior officials to the human and personal details of any trust, and in the care of children and infirm people he seems to be very successful. The statutory rules require that strict secrecy shall be observed in respect of all matters dealt with in the Department, and the Office is separate from any other Government Department. The work of the Office is audited by an officer called "The Inspector of Trust Accounts." Accounts of every trust, in very simple form, are furnished to the beneficiaries yearly, or oftener, as required.

A valuable power given to the Public Trustee is that of being able to direct the audit and investigation of the condition and accounts of any trust. This provision is intended to prove a valuable protection to any anxious trustee or beneficiary.

The Department does not disturb any existing practice in the trust as to the employment of any brokers, bankers, or solicitors. The fees are conceived upon a very moderate scale.

The Public Trustee is not allowed to work for profit, but merely to pay his expenses, so that the Office is a mutual one in that those using it have their estates administered at cost price.

The principal fees are of two kinds—a fee on capital and a fee on income. The fee on capital is taken in two instalments, half at the beginning and half at the end of a trust, such half ranging as follows :—

On the first £1,000, 15*s.* per cent.
On the excess of £1,000 to £20,000, 5*s.* per cent.
On the excess of £20,000 to £50,000, 2*s.* 6*d.* per cent.
On the excess of £50,000, 1*s.* 3*d.* per cent.

The fee on income is 1 per cent. if, as is usual, the income be paid direct to the person entitled, otherwise 2 per cent. up to £500 a year, and 1 per cent. on any excess of £500 a year. The fee on investment, if and when incurred, is ½ per cent. ; the Public Trustee, out of the fee, paying the brokerage. There is power to vary these fees to meet the peculiar circumstances of special cases, but, owing to the low range of the fees, the power of reduction is probably but seldom exercised, except, perhaps, in the case of large trusts.

An interview with the Public Trustee or with either of his principal clerks can be arranged by letter or telephone, and a pamphlet giving full information can be obtained post free on application to 3 & 4, Clement's Inn, Strand, W.C., or at any Post Office.

The staff, which at the opening of the Office on the 1st January, 1908, numbered 5 men, now numbers 145.

The League of the Empire (Founded 1901).

The work is entirely non-political and non-sectarian. Its practical work has been to promote co-operation between the different Countries and Colonies of the Empire, mainly in affairs connected with education, and to afford full and correct information regarding them, so that the duties of citizenship may be better understood and appreciated, and personal and active interest inspired in the great problems connected with our Empire's conditions and progress. The official relation of the League to the Education Departments and Governments throughout the Empire has been regularised (a) through the recommendation of its work to the Governments concerned by the Colonial Office of the Imperial Government and by the Agents-General in 1902-3 ; (b) by the active and wide-spread acceptance of its schemes by the different Educational Authorities and Governments. In 1907 the League carried through the first Conference between the Education Departments of the Home and Colonial Governments. One of the effects of this Conference was that the Imperial Government undertook to call the next Imperial Conference on Education in 1911. The Official Conference passed the following resolution :—"That the delegates desire to express their appreciation of the value of this Conference to the work of the Education Departments throughout the Empire." The League received a benefaction of £5,000 on condition that it produced a graded series of Text-Books on the Empire. The first of these books, "The British Empire : Its Past, Its Present, and Its Future," has been issued under the editorship of Professor Pollard. The book has taken two years to produce, and every proof has been corrected on the spot—indeed, about a third of the book has been supplied by those responsible for the government of our Empire. Two other books are in hand, one suitable for higher grade schools, and the other for elementary schools. Cordial acknowledgment of the services of the League have been made by the Colonial Office, by His Excellency the Governor, and by the workers. A number of teachers from all parts of the Empire have been accredited to the League for courses of lectures and study in the schools. The School Affiliation and Comrades' Correspondence Sections were established in 1901-2. The latter numbers now nearly 20,000 members. Other work undertaken are the giving of lectures, the establishment of a bureau of information, essay competitions, exhibitions, and the furthering of the keeping of Empire Day. It should be added that the League of the Empire is constitutionally an Imperial Institution, having a Council of representative men, Governors and others of authority in all parts of the King's Dominions.

The President is Sir Frederick Pollock. Amongst those who are Vice-Presidents and Councillors are Earl Grey, the Earl of Meath, the Earl of Plymouth, Lord Curzon, Lord Selborne, Sir Felix Schuster, the High Commissioners of Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, Professor J. B. Bury, Sir Gilbert Parker.
Chairman of Council, Sir Philip Hutchins, K.C.S.I.
Hon. Treasurer, Sir Charles Lyall, K.C.S.I.
Hon. Secretary, Mrs. Ord Marshall.
Organ of the League, "The Federal Magazine."
Address, Caxton Hall, Westminster, S.W.

PERSONAL PROPERTY, INCLUDING LEASEHOLDS.

TABLE of Succession applicable to England and Scotland, and showing persons entitled to administer.

The persons entitled to administer are shown in brackets.

IN EACH INSTANCE IT IS SUPPOSED THERE ARE NO NEARER RELATIONS THAN THOSE NAMED.

[* Where this is prefixed the Regulation applies to Scotland only.]

By the Intestates' Estates Act, 1890, a very important change was made in the law as regards provision for widows of men dying intestate and without issue. Under this Act the widow in such a case is entitled to the whole estate both real and personal if under £500 in value; if over that amount she takes £500 out of the real and personal estate rateably before any division is made, and after that the share in the remainder to which she was entitled before the passing of the Act.

If the Intestate die, leaving	His representatives take in the proportions following :—
Widow only	Half to widow. Half to the Crown. [Widow.]
Widow and child or children	One-third to widow, two-thirds to children in equal shares. In case of deceased children who have left issue, such issue take amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Widow.] *One-third to widow. One-third to living children in equal shares (but the heir must collate the heritable estate, and those children who have been advanced by intestate during life must collate the advances). One-third amongst living children per capita and issue of deceased children per stirpes. See NOTE A, next page.
Widow and father	Half to widow. Half to father. [Widow.]
Widow and mother, no father	Half to widow. Half to mother. [Widow.] *Half to widow, one-sixth to mother. Two-sixths to Crown.
Widow, brothers or sisters	Half to widow. Half equally amongst brothers and sisters, whether of the whole or half blood; if a deceased brother or sister has left issue, such issue take amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Widow.]
Widow, mother, nephews or nieces	Half to widow. One-fourth to mother. One fourth to nephews and nieces per stirpes. [Widow.] *Half to widow. One-sixth to mother, two-sixths to nephews and nieces per stirpes.
Husband, with or without children	All to husband. [Husband.] *Half to husband. Half to wife's next-of-kin. [Husband.]
Father, brothers, and sisters	All to father. [Father.] *One-half to father. One-half equally amongst brothers and sisters.
Mother, brothers, and sisters	All equally. [Mother.] *Mother one-third. Brothers and sisters two-thirds equally.
Mother, but no other kin	All to mother. [Mother.] *One-third to mother. Two-thirds to the Crown.
Child, children, or grandchildren by deceased child	Amongst children in equal shares, the grandchildren by deceased children taking amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Any number of children not exceeding three.]
Brother or sister, and nephews or nieces	Amongst brothers or sisters in equal shares, the children of deceased brothers or sisters taking amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Brother or sister.]
Brother or sister, and grandfather	All to brother or sister. [Brother or sister.]
Brother or sister, and uncles or aunts	All to brother or sister. [Brother or sister.]
Grandfather, no nearer relation	All to grandfather. [Grandfather.]
Father's father, and mother's mother	Equally to both. [Either or both.]
Grandmother, uncles, and aunts	All to grandmother. [Grandmother.] *All to uncles and aunts if paternal.
Great-grandfather, uncles, and aunts	Equally per capita. [To either or any number not exceeding three.]
Uncles and aunts	All equally. [To either or any number not exceeding three.]

ncle, and deceased uncle's child	All to uncle. [Uncle.]
ncle by mother's side, and deceased uncle or aunt's child	All to uncle. [Uncle.] *Child of deceased paternal uncle or aunt takes in exclusion of maternal uncle.
unts, nephew, and niece	All equally. [Either not exceeding three.] *Nephew and niece.
ousins	Equally per capita. [Any number not exceeding three.]
ephew by brother, and nephew by half-sister	Equally per capita. [Any number not exceeding three.] *All to nephew by brother.

NOTE A.—Taking per capita is taking by head individually. Taking per stirpes is taking by escent or representation. Thus, if A. die leaving three brothers or sisters, and no nearer kin, hey each take an equal part of his personal estate in his or her own right, i.e., per capita. If there re also children of a deceased brother or sister they share in the estate by taking amongst them he share which their deceased parent would have taken had he or she survived, i.e., per stirpes.

NOTE B.—By English Law, brothers and sisters of the half blood share equally with the whole lood. By the Scottish Law, brothers and sisters german (that is, by the same father and mother) nd their issue take in exclusion of brothers and sisters consanguinean (that is, by the same father nly) and their issue. And brothers and sisters consanguinean and their issue take in exclusion of rothers and sisters uterine (that is, by the same mother only) and their issue.

NOTE C.—Posthumous children take equally with those born in the lifetime of their father.

Nephew by deceased brother, and nephews and nieces by deceased sister	All to eldest nephew, son of deceased brother.

NOTE A.—By the Land Transfer Act, 1897, the real estate of a deceased person devolves to the personal representative of the deceased, and probate and letters of administration may be granted in respect of real estate only, although there is no personal estate. The ultimate ownership of real estate is not affected by these provisions, which are for the convenience of administration. As to the persons entitled to administration of real estate, they are substantially the same as in the case of personal estate; but the Court shall, in granting letters of administration, have regard to the rights and interests of persons interested in the real estate, and the heir-at-law, if not one of the next-of-kin, shall be equally entitled to the grant with the next-of-kin.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR OBTAINING PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION WITHOUT EMPLOYING A SOLICITOR.

THE entrance to the office for personal applications is in the south-east corner of the Quadrangle of Somerset House, Strand, Room 37. The applicant should bring the registrar's certificate of the death of the deceased, or an official certificate of burial, and the will, if there be one, and full details of the property and debts of the deceased.

If there be no will or no executor be appointed, or the executor will not act, two sureties must also attend and enter into a bond for the faithful administration of the estate, unless the whole personal estate does not exceed £50, or the husband is the applicant, when one surety only will be required.

The scale of probate duty as at present in force will be found in detail on pages 372-374.

In no case can any correspondence be entered into; nor can an interview be given to any agent. The business of the department can be transacted only with the applicant in person.

Where the deceased resided within the district of one of the District Probate Registries (see Appendix), application may be made at that registry instead of at Somerset House.

Where the whole real and personal estate, without the deduction of debts or funeral expenses, does not exceed £500, application may be made at one of the Inland Revenue Offices.

Where the deceased has left no will, and the whole personal estate does not exceed £100, and the widow resides at more than three miles from any Probate Registry, application may be made to the Registrar of the County Court.

iii. Leasehold

a. of £5 clear yearly value, original term being not less than sixty years.

b. of £50 clear yearly value, original term being not less than twenty years.

B. Scotland.

i. Lands and heritages in proprietorship of £5 yearly value as appearing in the valuation roll.

ii. Leasehold.

a. of £10 clear yearly value, original term, being not less than fifty-seven years or for life.

b. of £50 clear yearly value, original term being not less than nineteen years.

C. Ireland.

i. Freehold of £5 net annual value.

ii. Rent charges or leases for life or lives of £10 clear yearly value.

iii. Leasehold.

a. of £10 clear yearly value, original term being not less than sixty years.

b. of £20 clear yearly value, original term being not less than fourteen years.

N.B.—The Property Qualification is confined to Counties and to Boroughs which are Counties Corporate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mortgagee. A mortgagor in possession is entitled to vote, but the mortgagee becomes entitled on taking possession.

Trusts. The beneficiary, not the trustee, has the vote.

Joint Owners. Only one may now vote, unless they were all entitled to vote in 1884, or their interests were derived by succession, or they are partners in business on the land owned by them.

Freeholds. Two or more freeholds may be joined to make up the requisite value.

Property in Boroughs. Property situate in a borough, such as would give a vote for the borough, will not give one for the county unless the freeholder be disqualified for the borough vote by non-occupation.

Leaseholds. A lessee who has sublet does not lose his right to vote; but a lessee who has assigned loses the right. To be entitled to a vote, a sublessee or assignee of a sublease must be in actual occupation.

2. OCCUPATION

for twelve months, before registration of lands or tenements within a county or borough, entitled the occupier to a vote. This qualification is uniform throughout the United Kingdom.

"Occupier" means one who uses the premises either as a dwelling house or place of business. Continuous occupation is unnecessary, provided the occupier has the exclusive right to occupy. He or some other person must have been during twelve months rated to the poor in respect of the premises, and all poor rates made and allowed during the twelve months preceding January 5th paid on or before July 20th.

Residence required. In English and Scotch counties, and in Ireland, none, but in English boroughs there must be residence during six months of the qualifying year (four months being allowed for absence on duty or employment); in Scotch Boroughs during the whole year in or within seven miles of the borough.

£50 Rental Franchise. This qualification, resting on the occupation of land in counties at a yearly rent of not less than £50, is now virtually obsolete, but persons registered in 1884 with this qualification are entitled to be re-registered from time to time, so long as they retain it.

Service Franchise. Lodgers, licencees and servants do not enjoy the occupation Franchise, as they are neither owners nor tenants, but a servant if allowed to occupy land (only in counties) as a reward for service may be a tenant and therefore entitled.

N.B.—Occupation Qualification extends to any part of a house separately occupied.

3. RESIDENCE.

This Household Qualification is given to the "inhabitant occupier" throughout the United Kingdom (whether he occupies as owner, as tenant, or in virtue of any office, &c.) of a dwelling house (including flats and residential chambers), or any part of a house occupied as a separate dwelling, which has been rated, and for which rates have been paid by a certain date. There need not be actual inhabitancy, but there must be an intention of returning after a temporary absence, and a power of doing so without a breach of a legal obligation. So an undergraduate occupying college rooms from which he is excluded during vacation is not entitled to vote, nor a soldier occupying rooms from which he is required to be absent from time to time on duty.

In calculating the twelve months, a period not exceeding four months may be counted during which the house has been occupied and furnished by some one else, or during which the inhabitant occupier has been absent on duty in connection with any office, employment, etc.

Occupation in immediate succession of different premises in the same parliamentary county or borough is equivalent to continued occupation of the same premises during the qualifying period.

N.B.—This rule applies both to Occupation and Residence.

4. LODGERS.

This qualification belongs to anyone in the United Kingdom who has resided in the same lodgings for twelve months next preceding July 15th, such lodgings being of the clear yearly value, unfurnished, of £10. The Lodger is not disqualified because he has occupied different lodgings of the requisite value in the same house, nor because he occupies them jointly with another lodger, if the aggregate value is sufficient.

5. Freemen.

Reform Act, 1832, left the franchise to freemen of towns in which, prior to 1832, such qualification gave a right to vote, but only to those who have acquired freedom by birth or servitude, and who, during the year preceding claim, have resided in or within seven miles of the town.

In the City of London a freeman, to obtain a vote, must also be a Liveryman of one of the City Companies. He may also acquire freedom by purchase. He must reside within 25 miles of the place of poll.

6. The Universities.

Graduates on electoral roll of Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and London, the Chancellor, the Professors, the members of the University Court and General Council of Edinburgh, Glasgow, St. Andrews and Aberdeen, are qualified to vote for their respective Universities.

Registration.

i. Property Voter must claim in order to get on to the Register, but once there he need not make a fresh claim. He must have been in possession, or receipt of rents, in case of freeholds for six, leaseholds for twelve calendar months prior to July 15th in the year in which they claim to be registered. This is not necessary where the qualifying property is freehold, and has been acquired by marriage, marriage settlement, etc.

ii. Occupiers need not claim at all, unless omitted by the Overseers, whose duty it is to register their names.

iii. The Lodger Voter has to claim afresh every year.

Claims for the Old Lodgers' List must be sent in by July 25th, all other new claims by August 20th. The Register, when made up, comes into force on the ensuing January 1st, unless accelerated by special legislation.

Disqualifications.

Aliens, idiots, lunatics (except during lucid interval), infants, peers (except Irish actually elected and serving in the House of Commons), convicted felons (until freed by pardon or otherwise), persons convicted of corrupt practices, either at Parliamentary or Municipal Elections (seven years from date of conviction), and School Board Elections (six years from date of election), persons convicted of illegal practices at Parliamentary and Municipal Elections (five years from date of conviction), persons employed at elections, or within six months before, for pay or reward, bankrupts, persons in receipt of parochial or other relief, persons with fictitious or collusive qualifications (e.g., fagot voters), corporations, returning officers (unless the votes are equal), corporations, and women.

II. MUNICIPAL AND COUNTY COUNCIL ELECTIONS (ENGLAND AND WALES).

A. City of London.

1. Election of Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and Chamberlain.

The Electors are Liverymen

2. Election of Aldermen, Common Councilmen, and Ward Officers.

The Electors are (a) Freemen occupying premises in the city, and rated in that respect at not less than £10 per annum. (b) Male persons who have occupied for twelve months premises in the city, and are similarly rated. (c) Persons registered as Parliamentary Electors for the city by virtue of the borough occupation Franchise. (d) Persons otherwise entitled to be registered as Parliamentary Electors for the city, but disqualified by non-residence.

B. Other Boroughs and Counties.

1. Election of Mayor or Chairman.

The Electors are the Councillors or County Councillors.

2. Election of Aldermen or County Aldermen.

The Electors are the Councillors or County Councillors.

[An alderman of a municipal borough may not vote in the election of an alderman; nor may an outgoing alderman vote, as an alderman, in the election of mayor: Municipal Corporations Act, 1910, s. 1.]

3. Election of Elective Auditors.

The Electors are the Burgesses. This, however, does not apply to County Councils, whose accounts are audited by district auditors appointed by the Local Government Board.

4. Election of Councillors or County Councillors.

The County Electors, together with the burgesses of every borough within the county, form the Electorate for the County Council. A qualification which in a Municipal Borough would entitle a person to be a Burgess will, if held in a county, entitle him to be a County Elector.

The Municipal Franchise differs from the Parliamentary Borough Franchise in two important particulars—

a. The Franchise is, except in case of land, irrespective of the value of premises occupied.

b. Women may vote.

The qualifications are—

i. Occupation in the borough of a building of any value, or of land of the clear yearly value of £10.

ii. Residence in or within seven miles of the borough.

iii. Being rated and paying rates.

Disqualifications.—These are the same as in the case of Parliamentary Electors, except that peers, women, bankrupts, and persons with fictitious qualifications are not disentitled. Women may not vote in the City of London.

III. PARISH COUNCILS ELECTIONS (ENGLAND AND WALES).

The Electors are the "Parochial Electors," i.e., those persons registered in such portion, either of the Local Government Register (see II.), or the Parliamentary Register (see I.) of Electors, as relates to the parish.

N.B.—A woman is not disqualified by marriage from being on any Local Government Register of Electors, but husband and wife cannot both be qualified in respect of the same property.

IV. DISTRICT COUNCIL ELECTIONS. URBAN AND RURAL (ENGLAND AND WALES).

The Electors are the "Parochial Electors" of the parishes in the district.

V. LONDON BOROUGH COUNCILS.

The Mayor is elected by the Council, the Aldermen by the Councillors, and the Councillors by the "Parochial Electors."

CANDIDATES' QUALIFICATIONS.

I. Parliamentary Elections.

The following are not eligible: Aliens, women, minors, lunatics, English and Scotch peers, Irish representative peers, judges, the holders of various offices, clergy of the Established Church, and of the Roman Catholic Church, and ministers of the Church of Scotland, Government contractors, persons holding pensions of the Crown (other than diplomatic and civil service), convicted felons, and bankrupts.

II. Municipal and County Council Elections.

1. Mayor or Chairman must be chosen from the Aldermen or Councillors, or persons qualified to be such.

2. Aldermen must be Councillors or persons qualified to be such.

3. Elective Auditors must be qualified to be Councillors, but not members of the Council, town clerk, or treasurer.

3. Councillors must be, and entitled to be, burgesses, resident within seven miles of the borough, or within fifteen miles, if they possess a property qualification of £1,000, or the persons qualified to elect to the office of Councillor.

Disqualifications.—Officers on the active list, bankrupts, and persons convicted of crime or corrupt or illegal practices are disqualified. A person is disqualified if and while he is an elective auditor, or revising assessor, or holds any office of profit other than that of Mayor or Sheriff, or is interested in any contract or employment with or on behalf of the Council. A woman is not disqualified by sex or marriage from being elected a Councillor or Alderman of any County or Borough Council.

N.B.—Clerks in holy orders, and other ministers of religion, are qualified for election as County but not Borough (except London Borough) Councillors or Aldermen.

III. Parish Council Elections.

Persons eligible are: "Parochial electors," or persons who have resided during the whole twelve months preceding the election in or within three miles of the parish. Persons may be disqualified by receipt of parochial relief, bankruptcy, crime, tenure of a paid office under the Council, or pecuniary interest. Women, married and unmarried, are eligible.

IV. District Council Elections. (Urban and Rural.)

1. Urban.—In urban districts, which are boroughs, the Municipal Council is the District Council. Elsewhere, the Urban District Councillors must be either "parochial electors" of some parish within the district, or persons who have, during the whole twelve months preceding the election, resided in the district.

2. Rural.—The District Councillors must be either "parochial electors" of some parish with a union, comprising the district, or persons who have, during the whole twelve months preceding the election, resided in the union, or, if the parish be wholly or partly situate within the area of a county borough or other borough, is qualified to be elected as a Councillor for that borough.

Disqualifications are the same as in III.

V. London Borough Council Elections.

A person is not qualified to be elected a Borough Councillor unless he—

1. is a Borough Elector of the borough;

2. has, during the whole twelve calendar months preceding the elections, resided in the borough.

The qualifications for Mayor and Borough Alderman are the same as those given in II., 1 and 2.

Women are not disqualified by sex or marriage. Otherwise the disqualifications are the same as in III.

Regulations respecting Passports.

1. APPLICATIONS for Foreign Office Passports must be made in the form printed on the back of the Regulations (to be had on application), and inclosed in a cover addressed to "The Passport Department, Foreign Office, London, S.W." They must reach the Foreign Office before 5 p.m. on the day prior to that on which the Passport is to be issued.

2. The charge for a Passport, whatever number of persons may be named in it, is 2*s*. Passports are issued at the Foreign Office, between the hours of 11 and 4 on the day following that on which the application for the Passport has been received, except on Sundays and Public Holidays, when the Passport Office is closed. If the applicant does not reside in London, the Passport may be sent by post, and a Postal Order for 2*s*. should in that case accompany the application. Postage stamps will not be received in payment.

3. Foreign Office Passports are granted (1) to natural-born British subjects, viz., persons born within His Majesty's dominions, and to persons born abroad who derive British nationality from a father or paternal grandfather born within His Majesty's dominions, and who, under the provisions of the Acts 4 George II., cap. 21, and 13 George III., cap. 21, are to be adjudged and taken to be natural-born British subjects; (2) to the wives and widows of such persons; and (3) to persons naturalised in the United Kingdom, in the British Colonies, or in India.

A married woman is deemed to be a subject of the State of which her husband is for the time being a subject.

4. Passports are granted to such persons as are known to the Secretary of State, or recommended to him by some person who is known to him, or (1) in the case of natural-born British subjects and persons naturalised in the United Kingdom, upon the production of a Declaration by the applicant in the form printed at the back of these Regulations, verified by a Declaration made by any Banking Firm established in the United Kingdom, or by any Mayor, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Minister of Religion, Barrister-at-law, Physician, Surgeon, Solicitor, or Notary, resident in the United Kingdom; the applicant's Certificate of Birth may also be required in certain cases; (2) in the case of children under the age of 14 years requiring a separate Passport, upon production of a Declaration made by the child's parent or guardian in a Form (B), to be obtained upon application to the Foreign Office; (3) in the case of persons naturalised in any of the British Colonies, upon production of a letter of recommendation from the Colonial Office; and in the case of natives of British India, and persons naturalised therein, upon production of a letter of recommendation from the India Office.

5. If the applicant for a Passport be a Naturalised British Subject, his certificate of naturalisation must be forwarded to the Foreign Office with the Declaration or letter of recommendation. Naturalised British subjects, if resident in London or in the suburbs, must apply personally for their Passports at the Foreign Office; if resident in the country, the Passport will be sent, and the Certificate of Naturalisation returned, to the person who may have verified the declaration, for delivery to the applicant. Naturalised British subjects will be described as such in their Passports, which will be issued subject to the necessary qualifications.

6. Foreign Office Passports are not available beyond five years from the date of issue. Fresh Passports must then be obtained.

7. A Passport cannot be issued by the Foreign Office, or by an Agent at an outport, on behalf of a person already abroad; such person should apply for one to the nearest British Mission or Consulate.

8. Travellers who intend to visit the Russian Empire, the Turkish Dominions, the Kingdom of Roumania, Persia, Colombia, Venezuela, Hayti, or Eritrea, in the course of their travels, must not leave the United Kingdom without having had their Passports visés either at the Russian Consulate-General, 17 Great Winchester Street, E.C.; the Consulate-General of the Sublime Porte, 140 Leadenhall Street, E.C.; the Roumanian Consulate-General, 49 Parliament Street, S.W.; the Persian Consulate-General, 122 Victoria Street, S.W.; the Colombian Consulate-General, 6 Holborn Viaduct, E.C.; the Venezuelan Consulate, Finsbury Pavement House, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.; the Haytian Consulate, 32 Fenchurch Street, E.C.; or the Italian Consulate-General (for Eritrea), 44 Finsbury Square, E.C., respectively, or at one of the other Consulates of those States in the United Kingdom. Travellers about to proceed to any other country need not obtain the visa of the Diplomatic or Consular Agents of such country.

N.B.—A statement of the requirements of Foreign Countries with regard to Passports may be obtained upon application to "The Passport Department, Foreign Office, London, S.W."

ILLEGITIMACY.—A man may be summoned to petty sessions on the application of the mother of a bastard child, or by the Guardians of the Poor where the child becomes chargeable to the Union or Parish; and the Justices, on his being proved to be the father of the child, may make an order requiring him to pay for its maintenance and education a sum not exceeding 5*s*. a week. The mother has the custody of her bastard children. No person is required as father of an illegitimate child to give information concerning the birth of such child, and the registrar is forbidden to enter in the register the name of any person as father of the child unless at the joint request of the mother and father. Such person is in that case required to sign the register, together with the mother. A menial servant found to be enceinte may be peremptorily dismissed without notice; but any attempt to examine without her consent a servant supposed to be enceinte renders the employer liable to an action.

(2) Extra persons:—When licensed to carry more than two persons—for each additional person beyond two, the whole journey..... s. d. 0 6

Provided that two children under the age of ten years shall count as one person.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.—The fares by Taximeter Motor Cabs are based upon a combination of time and distance. When the cab is kept waiting, delayed by traffic, or caused to travel at the rate of less than six miles an hour, then the charge is by time. When travelling at a speed of six or more miles an hour, then the charge is by distance. Fares are according to distance or time, at the option of the hirer, expressed at the commencement of the hiring; if not otherwise expressed, the fare to be paid according to distance; but driver can refuse to be hired by time between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

DRIVER, if hired by distance, is not compelled to drive more than six miles, nor more than one hour if hired by time; further, if hired by time, the driver may be required to drive at any rate not exceeding four miles an hour; if required to drive more than four miles within the hour he may demand, in addition to the fare regulated by time, for every mile or any part exceeding four miles, the fare regulated by distance.

AGREEMENT to pay more than legal fare is not binding.

If the driver agree beforehand to take any sum less than the proper fare, the penalty for demanding more than the sum agreed upon is 40s.

The driver of every cab shall have with him, and when required produce, the Authorized Book of Distances, and every driver of any cab shall, if so required, deliver to the hirer a printed ticket, showing fares, &c.

Driver may demand a reasonable sum as a deposit from persons hiring and requiring him to wait at any place, over and above the fare to which the driver is entitled for driving thither. Penalty 40s., if driver, having received such deposit, refuse to wait, or go away before the expiration of the time for which the deposit shall be a sufficient compensation; or if the driver shall refuse to account for such deposit.

The London Cab Act, 1896, enacts that if any person hires a cab, knowing, or having reason to believe, he cannot pay the fare; or, fraudulently endeavours to avoid payment of a fare; or, having failed, or refused, to pay a fare, refuses, or gives a false address, is liable, in addition to the fare, to a penalty of 40s.

The fares legally demandable by a stage carriage are those painted in a conspicuous manner on the inside of every such carriage, and they are recoverable in a summary way before a Justice of the Peace, in the same way as fares for a hackney carriage.

All property left in any cab shall be deposited by the driver (and in the case of a stage carriage, by the conductor, or driver if no conductor) at the nearest Police Station within twenty-four hours, if not sooner claimed by the owner; such property to be returned to the person who shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Police that the same belonged to him, on payment of all expenses incurred, and of such sum to the driver as the Secretary of State has by order prescribed. Property found in a stage carriage by a passenger must be given up to the conductor under a penalty of £10.

All inquiries, &c., relating to public carriages should be addressed to the Public Carriage Office, New Scotland Yard; but inquiries as to property left in a cab or stage carriage should be made at the Lost Property Office, New Scotland Yard. Office hours, 10 to 4.

HACKNEY CARRIAGE STATISTICS.

During 1909 there were licensed public carriages:—Hansoms, 3,299; clarences—animal power 3,263, mechanical power 3,956; omnibuses—animal power 1,771, mechanical power 1,180; tramway cars—mechanical power 2,198, animal power 239; total, 15,906. Drivers and conductors:—Cab drivers—animal power 8,629, mechanical power 3,769; stage drivers—animal power 2,609, mechanical power 6,315; conductors, 9,664; total, 30,986.

HACKNEY AND STAGE CARRIAGE DRIVERS before obtaining a licence are required to pass an examination as to their ability to drive, and hackney carriage drivers, in addition, have to pass an examination as to their knowledge of town. It extends to a knowledge of the principal squares, clubs, hospitals, hotels, theatres, streets, and public buildings in London. During 1909, of 2,586 men examined, 577 were successful. The annual average number of applicants who passed the examination during the past five years was 557. The proportion of drivers to hackney carriages is 11·78 drivers to 10 carriages; 196 of the drivers are over 70 years of age.

Of lost property, 65,375 articles were deposited, of which 28,062 were claimed by the owners, and £4,023 1*s*. 2*d*. awarded to the drivers and conductors.

Tithe Commutation.

THE tithe of produce, the ancient provision for the maintenance of the clergy, was, after various attempts at modification and composition, commuted in 1836 by Act of Parliament to a payment in money. The land was valued, and a modus fixed, based upon the average value of corn for the preceding seven years, and payments, collected half-yearly by the clergy or lay-owners, have since been made on a septennial average. The value fixed amounted in some cases to as much as ten shillings per acre. The better the land for corn-growing, the larger was the sum to be paid, as it was a direct charge upon the corn grown, the prices upon which the Act was based being per quarter—wheat at 56*s*. 2*d*.; barley, 31*s*. 8*d*.; and oats, 22*s*. Consequently much land, not being worth the tithe, is now out of cultivation, or let at a price which just covers the charge. An Act passed in 1891 makes it compulsory for the owners of the land, instead of the occupiers, to pay the tithe, which amounts in the aggregate to about four millions annually, of which sum £766,334 is paid to 2,096 lay-owners or impropriators. Extraordinary tithes were an additional charge made, when the Commutation Act was passed, upon hop, fruit, and market-garden grounds. These special industries were so affected by the tax, which in some cases amounted to thirty shillings an acre, that serious resistance against the payment ensued, and an Act was passed in 1886 providing that it should not be levied on land brought under such cultivation after the passing of the Act, but land under these crops at the time was permanently burdened with the impost. The tithe map and apportionment for each parish is deposited with the incumbent and churchwarden. Any one interested therein may have access to the same and obtain extracts by paying 2*s*. 6*d*. for inspection, and 3*d*. for every 72 words contained in the extract. Tithe may, upon the joint application of the land-owner and tithe-owner to the Board of Agriculture, be redeemed for a sum not less than 25 times its amount. This is dependent upon the consent of the Board, and sometimes on that of the Bishop and patron. Town property and building land is often redeemed, agricultural land rarely, the cost being too great.

The average Tithe Rent Charge for the first fifty years from 1836 was £102 9*s*. 9½*d*., and for the past 74 years (1837–1910) £92 16*s*. 8¾*d*.

Architects.

The custom is to charge 5 per cent. on the cost of new work, if exceeding £1,000. Below that sum, an increased scale is usual. An increased charge is also made for alterations to existing buildings, and for designs for decorations, fittings, and furniture. If PLANS, &c., are prepared for works which are never carried out, the charge is one-half the above, with a further half per cent. if tenders have been invited and received. These charges do not include negotiations for purchase of site, &c., nor settlement of difficulties with adjacent owners and public authorities, nor taking out quantities. For repetitions a modified charge is usually arranged. The minimum charge per day is three guineas. In all cases, travelling and other out-of-pocket expenses are paid by the employer in addition to the fees. For furnishing or checking a Schedule of Dilapidations and Estimate the usual charge is 5 per cent. on the estimate, but in no case less than two guineas. For valuing and negotiating the settlement of claims under the Lands Clauses and similar Acts the charge is on Ryde's Scale.

Quantity Surveyors.

A fee of 2½ per cent. upon the amount of the lowest tender received for the contemplated building, or upon its estimated cost should the work be abandoned before tenders are received, is charged by Quantity Surveyors for preparing Bills of Quantities.

FOR MEASURING AND ADJUSTING VARIATIONS the fees are 2½ per cent. on the amount of additions, and 1½ per cent. on the amount of omissions brought into account.

FOR SERVICES IN CONNEXION WITH LITIGATION OR ARBITRATION, a charge per day (dependent upon the Surveyor's professional position) is made.

The above charges are exclusive of the cost of printing, lithography, and fair copies of accounts, and in all cases travelling and other out-of-pocket expenses are payable in addition to the fees.

Surveyors.

(1) VALUATION OF FREEHOLD, COPYHOLD AND LEASEHOLD PROPERTY.—£1 1s. per cent. on the first £1,000; 10s. 6d. per cent. on the next £9,000; 5s. 3d. per cent. on the residue.

(2) FOR VALUING AND EFFECTING A SALE BY PRIVATE CONTRACT.—Under £500, 5 per cent. on £100, and 2½ per cent. on residue; between £500 and £5,000, 2½ per cent.; above £5,000, 2½ per cent. on first £5,000, and 1½ per cent. on residue.

(3) FOR TIMBER AND CROPPING VALUATIONS it is usual to charge 5 per cent. on the first £500, with 2½ per cent. on the remainder. This is also the usual fee for valuing agricultural land for annual rental.

Auctioneers' and Estate Agents.

FOR THE SALE OF FREEHOLD AND COPYHOLD ESTATES AND HOUSES AND GROUND LEASES, BY AUCTION OR BY PRIVATE TREATY.—£5 per cent. on the first £100; £2½ per cent. up to £5,000; and on the residue above that sum £1½ per cent.; and the usual commission of £5 per cent. in addition on the amount paid for fixtures, furniture, and effects, and in addition for any disbursements.

FOR LETTING UNFURNISHED HOUSES, OR DISPOSING OF LEASES OTHER THAN GROUND LEASES BY ASSIGNMENT OR OTHERWISE.—Where the term is for three years or less, £5 per cent. on one year's rent; where for more than three years, £7½ per cent. on one year's rent, and (in either case) upon the premium or consideration, £5 per cent. up to £1,000, and 2½ per cent. on the residue, and the commission of £5 per cent. on any sum obtained for fixtures, furniture, or effects of any kind.

FOR LETTING FURNISHED HOUSES, IN TOWN OR COUNTRY.—When let for a year or less period, £5 per cent. on the rental. When let for more than a year, £5 per cent. on first year's rent, and £2½ per cent. on rent for remainder of term. Where a property is let, and the tenant afterwards purchases, the commission for selling will then become chargeable, less the amount previously paid for letting furnished or unfurnished.

FOR VALUATIONS OR SALE OF FURNITURE, FIXTURES, AND OTHER EFFECTS.—For Sale, £5 per cent.; for Valuation, £5 per cent. up to £500, and £2½ per cent. on the residue.

FOR VALUATION OF FURNITURE AND EFFECTS FOR PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION.—£2½ per cent. on the first £100, and £1½ per cent. on the residue.

FOR VALUATION OF PROPERTIES FOR SALE, PURCHASE OR MORTGAGE.—£1 per cent. up to £1,000, 5s. per cent. above, on full amount of valuation. In valuations for Mortgage, if an advance is not made, one-third of the above scale, the minimum fee to be £3 3s.

FOR VALUATIONS FOR PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION (UNDER THE FINANCE ACT, 1894) OF FURNITURE AND EFFECTS.—£2½ per cent. on the first £100, and £1½ per cent. on the residue. OF FREEHOLD, COPYHOLD, OR LEASEHOLD PROPERTIES—5s. per cent. on amount of valuation. Minimum fee, £3 3s.

FOR NEGOTIATING THE PURCHASE OF ESTATES, HOUSES, AND GROUND LEASES.—£2½ per cent. up to £500, and £1 per cent. beyond that amount.

FOR NEGOTIATING THE TAKING OF FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED HOUSES.—Half the scale for letting.

FOR LETTING BUILDING LAND.—Amount of one year's ground rent, or by agreement.

FOR MAKING AND EXAMINING INVENTORIES, and making catalogue for auction sale—From one guinea, according to length, exclusive of expenses.

MAKING schedule of fixtures to attach to lease—From 1 to 4 guineas, or about 3 guineas per day.

FOR MAKING schedule of dilapidations, and serving notice to repair—From 2 to 5 gs. per day.

FOR SETTLING amount of dilapidations—5 per cent. on amount, and out-of-pocket expenses.

RAILWAY, School Board, Corporation, Board of Works, and other compensations—SCALE:—

If the award be for £1,000 the fee chargeable is 18 gs., and for £1,200 19 gs., and so on, each £200 additional earning a further guinea, but no fee less than 7 guineas; and a fee of 3 guineas per day for London valuers, and 5 guineas per day for valuers outside the London area, for attendance in London before jury or arbitrator.

MANAGEMENT of estates, including collection of rents—Tithe-rent charges, ground rents, &c., from 3 to 5 per cent.; cottage property, from 5 to 10 per cent., according to special agreement.

Allowances under Bankruptcy Acts, 1883 and 1890.

The following charges are to be subject to reduction by agreement with the Official Receiver or the trustee, or to increase with the sanction of the Committee of Inspection and the Receiver:—

Brokers.—For inventory not exceeding 5 folios, 10s. 6d.; additional per folio to 20 folios, 1s. 6d.;

each folio after 20, 1*s*. For inventory and valuation :—On the first £100, £2 10*s*. ; for the next £400, £1 5*s*.; above £400 up to £10,000, £1; above £10,000, 10*s*. Travelling expenses in addition.

Auctioneers.—For sales by private contract half the above charges for inventory and valuation ; for sales by auction (in addition to certain out-of-pocket expenses) of chattel property, 5 per cent. on first £500, 4 per cent. on next £500, above £1,000 2½ per cent. ; and of estates in land, including prior valuations for determining amount of reserve bids, on first £300 5 per cent., on next £1,600 2½, above up to £5,000 1¼, and above £5,000 1 per cent. Cost of surveys, dilapidations and specifications, £2 to £5.

Accountants.—For preparing balance-sheet, investigating accounts, &c., principal's time, exclusively so employed, per day of seven hours, including necessary affidavit, £1 1*s*. to £5 5*s*. Chief-clerk's time, 10*s*. 6*d*. to £1 11*s*. 6*d*. Other clerk's time, per day of seven hours, 7*s*. 6*d*. to 16*s*. These charges to include stationery, except forms used.

MEDICAL FEES.

Patients are charged according to their supposed incomes, the income being indicated by the rental of the houses in which they reside. The following are the charges usually made by general practitioners :—

General Practitioners.	Rentals.
	£10 to £25.	£25 to £50.	£50 to £100
Ordinary Visit	2*s*. 6*d*. to 5*s*.	3*s*. 6*d*. to 7*s*.	5*s*. to 10*s*. 6*d*.

Midwifery	21*s*.	21*s*. to 63*s*.	63*s*. to 105*s*.
Adminstrng. Chlfrm.	10*s*. 6*d*.	21*s*.	42*s*.
Consultants.
Advice or Visit alone	21*s*.	21*s*.	21*s*.
Advice or Visit with another Practitioner	21*s*.	21*s*. to 42*s*.	21*s*. to 42*s*.
Mileage beyond two miles from Home	10*s*. 6*d*.	10*s*. 6*d*.	10*s*. 6*d*.

Special visits—i.e., of which due notice has not been given before the practitioner starts on his daily round, are charged at the rate of a visit and a half. Patients calling upon the doctor are charged at the same rate as if visited by him.

When the ordinary medical attendant is called upon to meet another in consultation, he is entitled to charge double his ordinary fee. When he himself is called in, in consultation, he is entitled to the minimum fee of 21*s*.

When more members of one family are ill at the same time, half a fee is charged for each beyond the first.

In midwifery cases the fee generally covers all charges for visits, &c., if all goes well, but if the illness be protracted, or if any special operation has to be performed, there is an extra charge.

If attendance on servants is paid for by employer, or if he send for the doctor, the charge is the same as to himself.

Certificates of health are to be charged for same as visits, except where special investigation is needed, as in certificates for lunacy, insurance offices, &c., when the charge may be from half a guinea to two guineas.

Vaccination is usually charged for according to the number of visits required.

Medical bills are commonly rendered once or twice a year, and contain but one amount—"Attendance and medicine," from date to date, so much. The patient has no means of checking the correctness of the charge, although medical men, like all others, are liable to err ; they, however, are always willing to show their ledgers when requested.

SOLICITORS' CHARGES.

These are now usually regulated in conveyancing and non-contentious business by the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and the Scale thereunder—we say "usually" because that Act allows an option to a solicitor of declining to adopt it. In practice, most solicitors (although some old-established firms are found to prefer the old system) are willing to adopt the Scale, and especially on mortgages and sales. Looking first at the old system, we find that an Act of 1843 made solicitors' charges on conveyancing liable to taxation by a public official ; and in 1870 a further Act enabled the taxing officer to have regard to "skill, labour, and responsibility" as well as to mere length of documents. The Act of 1881 enabled the high legal authorities, with the consent of certain representative solicitors, to frame a Scale, and this has been done. It chiefly relates to sales, purchases, and mortgages, and is based upon the value of the property or amount of the money involved. Besides this, it is legal for a client to make a bargain beforehand for a fixed sum. The amount coming to the solicitor, whether under Scale or agreement, is intended to cover the services of himself and his clerks, while it is, of course, exclusive of actual outlay for stamps, &c. On purchase or mortgage money exceeding £300 and not exceeding £1,000, the Scale charge for each party's solicitor is 1½ per cent. ; this does not apply to sales by auction. Where a negotiation fee is chargeable, in addition, by the vendor's, purchaser's, or mortgagee's (not mortgagor's) solicitor, the Scale charge on sums exceeding £300 and not exceeding £3,000 is 1 per cent. It should be noted that if the solicitor negotiates the purchase or mortgage, he is entitled to an additional fee of substantial amount under the Scale referred to.

STREETS AND FOOTPATHS.

Streets and Footpaths.—The scavenging of streets and the cleansing of footways and pavements is generally undertaken by the sanitary authorities. It is unlawful to place or leave on any footway any furniture, goods, wares or merchandise, or any cask, tub, basket, pail, &c.; or to place over any footway any blind, shade, covering, awning, or other projection less than eight feet in height from the ground ; or to place any goods, wares, merchandise, matter, or thing whatsoever, so that the same project in such a manner as to obstruct or incommode the passage of any person over or along a footway ; or to roll any cask, tub, hoop, or wheel upon any footway, except for the purpose of crossing the footway ; or to throw or lay down any materials in any street, or beat or shake any carpet, rug, or mat in any street after the hour of eight in the morning.

RECEIPTS.

Receipts should be kept for six years from the date of payment, after which period no action can be brought concerning the goods, &c., received.

Perpetual Calendar

FROM THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE CHRISTIAN ERA.

By which the day of the week of any day of any year can easily be ascertained.

By Colonel F. W. M. SPRING, late Royal Artillery.

RULE.—To the day of the Month, add Factors for Month, Century, and Year, and divide the total by 7.

If there is no remainder, the day is Sunday.
If 1 is the remainder	„	Monday.	Should the total be less than 7, it is to be taken as a remainder
„ 2	„	Tuesday.
„ 3	„	Wednesday.
„ 4	„	Thursday.
„ 5	„	Friday.
„ 6	„	Saturday.

EXAMPLE.

Date of the Battle of Waterloo 18 June, 1815.

The Derby, 1856–1910.

The following table gives the winners of the Derby for the last 55 years. Including 1851, Sir J. Hawley scored four successes with Teddington, Beadsman, Musjid, and Blue Gown, the second and third being consecutive victories. The late Duke of Westminster also scored four wins with Bend Or, Shotover, Ormonde, and Flying Fox. The Duke of Portland, Lord Rosebery, and Mr. Bowes have won twice consecutively. The late King Edward VII. won three times (twice before his accession). Lord Falmouth, Mr. W. I'Anson, Mr. Merry, Sir F. Johnstone, and Sir J. Miller were twice victorious at intervals of four or more years.

BILLIARDS. 415

BEST "spot-in" break (exhibition match) 3,304, by W. J. Peall, 1890; match for money 2,032, by W. J. Peall, 1888. Best spot-barred breaks, 1,592 by J. Roberts, 1894, and 1,467‡ by T. Taylor, 1891. Greatest number of spot-hazards in succession 633, by W. J. Peall, 1883. Successive nursery cannon record of 280 is held by W. Cook, on Jan. 11, 1906. Largest number of successive screw-back red hazards 286, by J. G. Sala, 1888. Fastest 1,000 up game, all-in, W. J. Peall, 1884, 44 min. Fastest 1,033 spot-barred, J. Roberts, 1894, 59¾ min. Under Billiard Association Rules, H. A. O. Lonsdale is the amateur champion. The highest breaks are 1,143§ (and 879 off the red) by Geo. Gray, in Nov. and Oct., 1912, at London and Hull; 802 by H. W. Stevenson, Feb. 16, 1905, recognised by the B.A.; and 821 by John Roberts, Jan. 24, 1905, in Scotland. By means of the now abolished cradle cannon W. Cook, in June, 1907, scored 42,746‡; and by the aid of the same stroke T. Reece, during June and July, totalled 499,135, but the latter was not passed by the Billiard Association, as it was not made entirely in public play.

‡ Balls jammed in mouth of pocket. § Both the break and the number scored off the red are records, though not under B.A. rules. Geo. Gray was 18½ years old.

SWIMMING.

* All these records were made with motor pacing and wind Shields. † Flying starts.

At the Stadium, on July 3, 1909, J. H. Bishop established an amateur record, riding 513 miles 1430 yards in 24 hours.

On Sept. 17-18, 1881, M. Cordang, at The Hague, Holland, rode 640 miles 196 yards in 24 hours, but owing to his suspension at the time by the U.V.F. the record is not recognised. At Madison Square Gardens, New York, December, 1898, Charles Miller rode 2,007 miles 4 laps in 142 hours.

At Munich, on Sept. 25, 1903, Paul Guignard rode 101 kilos 623 meters (nearly 63 miles) in 1 hour. He was paced by Hoffman on a three-cylinder machine with a wind shield.

On Aug. 23, 1909, W. J. Bailey, Polytechnic Cy. C., beat his own quarter mile flying start record of 25 4-5th secs. by 3-5th sec., Bailey's new record being 25 1-5th secs. This beats the professional world's record of 25 2-5th secs. made by T. J. Gascoyne, at Catford, on May 5, 1900.

Mint Marks.—The designs adopted for gold coins are identically the same in the Mints of London, Sydney, Melbourne, and Perth, with minute "Mint Marks" immediately above the date on the reverse side—the letter S (Sydney), M (Melbourne), and P (Perth). The letter C is borne on Imperial gold coins struck at the branch Mint at Ottawa, Canada, which are otherwise of identical design.

The authorized Coinage of the United Kingdom consists of the following pieces, those marked* only being issued on special occasions; the issue of crowns and double florins has been discontinued for several years:

STANDARD GOLD contains twenty-two twenty-fourths (carats) of fine gold and two twenty-fourths of alloy; fineness, 916·66, or 22 carats. Twenty troy pounds of standard gold are coined into 934 sovereigns and one half-sovereign; one troy ounce is, therefore, intrinsically worth £3 17*s.* 10½*d.*, and one ounce of pure gold, on the same basis, £4 4*s.* 11½*d.*

STANDARD SILVER consists of thirty-seven-fortieths of fine silver and three-fortieths of alloy; fineness, 925. One troy pound of standard silver is coined into 66 shillings. [Another Standard, called the "New Sterling" or Britannia, of the fineness 11 oz. 10 dwt. (958·33), is practically obsolete. It is occasionally used, however, for high-class plate.]

†BRONZE is an alloy of copper 95 parts, tin 4 parts, and zinc 1 part.

THE "REMEDY" is the amount of variation permitted in fineness and in weight of coins when first issued from the Mint.

TOKENS.—No person is allowed to coin any token to pass for, or as representing, bronze or other money, under a penalty of £20.

LIGHT GOLD.—Any person to whom it is tendered may break, cut, or deface any gold coin below the least current weight; but under the provisions of the Coinage Act, 1891, and an Order in Council of 16 March, 1892, light gold coin which has not been illegally dealt with is received by the Bank of England on behalf of the Mint at its full nominal value.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES are issued for sums of £5, £10, £20, £50; also for £100, £200, £500, and £1,000.

BANK POST BILLS can be obtained at the Bank of England for amounts of £10 and over at seven days' sight. They are issued for the full sum named therein, without allowance for discount. No charge is made for bills so drawn: they may be obtained at the Chief Office in London, or at any of the branches.

LEGAL TENDER OF MONEY.—The tender of Bank of England Notes is legal in England and Wales for every purpose, and by anyone (except by the Bank of England). No one can be compelled to give change. Gold, if above the least current weight, is a legal tender to any amount. Silver is not a legal tender for sums over two pounds, nor bronze, including farthings, for sums over one shilling.

† It is interesting to note that the legal weight of a penny is one-third, of the halfpenny one fifth, and of the farthing one tenth of an ounce avoirdupois. Further, the halfpenny is one inch in diameter.

PRICE OF SILVER, 1900–1909.—The Average Yearly Price of Silver per standard Troy Ounce in the London Market during the last ten years was as follows:—1900, 28¼*d.*; 1901, 27$\frac{15}{16}$d.; 1902, 24½*d.*; 1903 24¼*d.*; 1904, 26⅜*d.*; 1905, 27$\frac{13}{16}$d.; 1906, 30$\frac{7}{16}$d.; 1907, 30$\frac{3}{16}$d.; 1908, 24⅜*d.*; 1909, 23$\frac{15}{16}$d.

In the United States the price of silver is quoted in cents per troy ounce fine. In order to convert an English quotation into cents per ounce fine, first express the pence as a whole number and decimal fraction and then multiply by 2·192; to express a United States price on the English system, multiply the cents by 0·4562.

Currency of British Dominions and Colonies.

IMPERIAL sterling coins are the sole legal metallic currency in the following British Colonies:—

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA AND SOUTH AFRICA GENERALLY.
FIJI.
GIBRALTAR.
NEW ZEALAND.
ST. HELENA.

In the following Dominions special coins are current in addition to the Imperial series:—

AUSTRALIAN COMMONWEALTH. — Special florins, shillings, sixpences, and threepences in silver, and pence and halfpence in bronze, of the same weights and composition as Imperial coins of these denominations, but of special designs.

BRITISH GUIANA AND CERTAIN W. INDIAN ISLANDS.—A special groat or fourpence.

GUERNSEY.—Eight doubles (= 1 penny), 4, 2, and 1 double.

JAMAICA.—Nickel-bronze pence, halfpence, and farthings.

JERSEY. — Special pence, halfpence, and farthings.

MALTA.—One-third of a farthing.

NIGERIA, NORTH AND SOUTH.—One penny (nickel-bronze) and one-tenth penny (aluminium and nickel-bronze), all perforated.

EXAMPLE 1.—What is the present value of a Lease having 37 years to run of the net annual value of £100, interest being reckoned at 4 per cent.? ANSWER:—19·14 years' purchase, or £1,914.

EXAMPLE 2.—A man, aged 54, in the receipt of a pension or annuity of £100 a year net, wishes to commute that for a present payment, interest being reckoned at 5 per cent. How much will he receive? ANSWER:—Looking at the Table of Expectation of Life (p. 423), it will be seen that the expectation for age 54 is about 17 years; and from the above table an annuity certain for 17 years, interest at 5 per cent., is worth 11·27 years' purchase. The present payment required would therefore be £1,127 approximately.

Note to Example 2.—This method is only approximate. The values of annuities which depend on lives of a given present age, when properly calculated according to a given mortality table and a given rate of interest, are always somewhat less than those given by the method used in this example.

* When the annuity is payable at the beginning instead of at the end of the year, the amount for the following year, less £1, must be taken. Thus, for £1 at 2½ per cent. for 25 years, take 26 years, £36·012, and deduct £1—£35·012.

REPAYMENT OF PUBLIC LOANS.

LARGE sums of money are every year advanced to County or District Councils and other public bodies, for improvements, building of workhouses, schools, harbours, bridges, &c., to be repaid in a given number of years, including interest. The following scheme of tables for the repayments of Loans was compiled under the Local Government Act, 1858, and examined by the actuary of the National Debt Office. It gives the sums needed as the annual amount of principal combined with interest required for the liquidation of a debt of £100, at the stated percentage, in 10, 20, 30, 40, and 50 years :—

Years	3 per Ct.			3½ per Ct.			4 per Ct.			4½ per Ct.			5 per Ct.
10	11	14	5½	12	0	5½	12	6	7	12	12	9	12	19	0
20	6	14	5½	7	0	8½	7	7	2	7	13	9	8	0	5½
40	4	6	6½	4	13	7½	5	1	0½	5	9	8½	5	16	6½
50	3	17	8½	4	5	3½	4	13	1½	5	2	2½	5	9	6½

If the loan be for £1,000, each annual instalment as shown above must be multiplied by 10 ; if for £2,000, then by 20, and so on.

ALL Founders cast their type nearly to one uniform height, though the letters may vary considerably in their breadth.

The type chiefly used in this Almanack is named Nonpareil. The column contains 75 lines, and is, technically, 12 Pica ems wide; on an average every column actually contains about 3,000 letters. The compositor in making out his bill reckons that the column contains so many (1,800) ems; he then, doubling that number, charges as so many (3,600) ens.

A very minute type, used only occasionally, is:—

Brilliant. A column the size of this in the Almanack if set in Brilliant would contain 124 lines, and about 7,500 letters.

Weights and Measures.

BRITISH WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

THE Weights and Measures Act of 1878, which superseded all previous laws upon the subject, enacts the measures which may legally be used in the United Kingdom. These are based upon the Standard Yard and the Standard Pound, which are kept in the custody of the Standards Department of the Board of Trade.

Further Acts of Parliament were passed in 1889 and 1904 dealing with the question of verification of weights and measures, and regulations were issued by the Board of Trade in 1907 respecting the inspection and stamping of weights and measures.

The Yard and the Pound are the only two independent standards for weights and measures, as the Gallon, the standard of capacity, both for dry and liquid measure, is not independent, but is based upon the Pound. The Gallon is defined in the Act of 1878 as the volume of ten imperial standard pounds weight of distilled water weighed in air against brass weights, with the water and air at the temperature of 62° Fahrenheit, and the barometer at 30 inches.

The multiples and sub-divisions of the standard yard, pound, and gallon, as laid down in the Act of 1878, are as follows; the legal abbreviations are given in brackets:—

1.—MEASURES OF LENGTH.

12 inches (in.) ...	=	1 foot (ft.).
3 feet	=	1 YARD (yd.).
5½ yards	=	1 rod, pole, or perch.
4 poles	=	1 chain or 100 links.
10 chains.....	=	1 furlong.
8 furlongs.....	=	1 mile.

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT.

7,000 grains (gr.) ...	=	1 POUND (lb.).
Also,
16 drams (dr.) ...	=	1 ounce (oz.).
16 ounces	=	1 POUND (lb.).
14 pounds	=	1 stone.
8 stone	=	1 hundredweight (cwt.).
20 hundredweights	=	1 ton.

3.—MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

4 gills	=	1 pint.
2 pints	=	1 quart.
4 quarts	=	1 GALLON.
2 gallons	=	1 peck.
4 pecks	=	1 bushel.
8 bushels	=	1 quarter.
36 bushels	=	1 chaldron.

4.—MEASURES OF LAND.

40 square perches...	=	1 rood.
4 roods	=	1 acre.

The Acre is represented graphically thus:

The above are the only British weights and measures which are legal for general use.

For certain special purposes, the following are also authorised by the Act of 1878 or by Order in Council under the Act:—

1.—For weighing gold and silver and precious stones.

The Troy ounce, equal in weight to 480 grains. In dealing with quantities less than an ounce, the ounce is divided decimally, not into grains. Larger quantities than an ounce are stated in ounces. There is no Troy pound.

2.—For the use of Apothecaries and for selling drugs retail.

3 scruples ...	=	1 drachm (ʒ1).
8 drachms ...	=	1 Apothecaries' ounce (oz. Apoth.).

b.—MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

60 minims (min.)	=	1 fluid drachm (fl. dr.).
8 fluid drachms	=	1 fluid ounce (fl. oz.).

Of the Apothecaries' measure of weight, the grain is the same as the Imperial grain; and the Apothecaries' ounce contains 480 grains, like the Troy ounce. But, of the measures of capacity, the Apothecaries' drachm is not the same as the Imperial dram, and the two words are spelt differently. A fluid ounce of distilled water at a temperature of 62° Fahrenheit is equal in weight to the Imperial ounce (437·5 grains), and the fluid drachm (54·6875 grains) is equal in weight to two Imperial drams.

It is somewhat to be regretted that the Apothecaries' weights and measures were retained by the Act of 1878, but as they are authorised for use with medicines and drugs only, and are illegal for any other purpose, it is not of much consequence.

METRIC WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

In addition to the Imperial standard weights and measures, the use of the French or Metric system of weights and measures was made permissive in the United Kingdom by an Act passed in 1897.

In the Metric system, the standard of length is the Metre, the standard of weight is the Kilogram, and the standard of capacity is the Litre. Accurate copies of the Metre, Kilogram, and Litre are kept in the custody of the Standards Office of the Board of Trade.

The names of the sub-divisions and multiples of each of the standard measures of the Metric system are as follows.

For the sake of comparison, the equivalent value of the nearest British measure is given opposite each, and the recognised abbreviations are shown in brackets.

1.—MEASURES OF LENGTH.

10 millimetres (mm.) = 1 centimetre (cm.) = 0·3937 inch.
10 centimetres = 1 decimetre (dm.) = 0·328084 foot.
10 decimetres = 1 METRE (m.) = 1·093614 yard.
10 metres ... = 1 dekameter (dam.) = 1·9884 poles.
10 dekametres = 1 hectometre (hm.) = 0·4971 furlong.
10 hectometres = 1 kilometre (km.) = 0·6214 mile.

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT.

10 milligrams (mg.) = 1 centigram (cg.) = 0·1543 grain.
10 centigrams = 1 decigram (dg.) = 1·5432 ,,
10 decigrams = 1 gramme (grm.) ... = 15·4323 ,,
10 grammes = 1 dekagram (dag.) = 5·6438 drams.
10 dekagrams = 1 hectogram (hg.) = 3·5274 oz.
10 hectograms = 1 KILOGRAM (kg.) = 2·204622 lb.
10 kilograms = 1 myriagram = 1·5747 stones.
10 myriagrams = 1 quintal (q.) = 1·5684 cwt.
10 quintals... = 1 tonne (t.)... = 0·9842 ton.

10 millilitres (ml.) = 1 centilitre (cl.) = 0·0704 gill.
10 centilitres = 1 decilitre (dl.) = 0·1759 pint.
10 decilitres = 1 LITRE (lit.) = 0·8799 quart.
10 litres ..... = 1 dekalitre (dal.)... = 2·1997 galls.
10 dekalitres = 1 hectolitre (hl.) = 2·7497 bushls.

4.—MEASURES OF LAND.

100 sq. metres = 1 are (a.)..... = 0·0988 rood.
100 ares ..... = 1 hectare (ha.) = 2·4711 acres.

THE BRITISH DEPENDENCIES.

The Imperial weights and measures are the legal standards in the British Dominions and in India. In some Colonies the Metric system may also be used. In certain Colonies and in India, the old local measures are still employed to a considerable extent. Among these are the following :—

Indian Weights (Bengal).

Tola, unit of postage = 180 grains.
Chittak = 5 Tolas ; Seer (16 Chittaks) = $2\frac{1}{16}$ lb.
Imperial or Indian Maund = $82\frac{2}{7}$ lb. = 40 seer.

Madras.

Viss = 3·09 lbs., Maund = 25 lb., Candy = 500 lb.

Cape Morgen..... = 2·11654 English Acres.
Cape Feet ..... = 1·033 English Feet.
Cape Rood ..... = 12·356 English Feet.

EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.

The Metric system of weights and measures has been adopted in the following countries :—

Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Norway, Rumania, Servia, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland.

In Russia the standard of length is the Sachine, which is equal to seven British feet ; the standard of weight is the Pound, equal to nine-tenths of the British pound. The other measures are :—

1.—MEASURES OF LENGTH.

16 vershok = 1 archine.
3 archine = 1 sachine.
500 sachine = 1 verst.

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT.

3 zolotnik = 1 loth.
32 loth = 1 pound.
40 pounds = 1 pood.
10 poods = 1 berkovatz.

In Turkey the weights and measures differ considerably in different parts of the Empire, but the following are those used at Constantinople and the neighbourhood :—

1.—MEASURES OF LENGTH.

2 jeras = 1 rup.
8 1ups = 1 pek = 26·77 British inches.

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT.

16 kirats = 1 dram.
400 drams = 1 oke = 2·828 British pounds.
44 okes = 1 kantar.

The usual measure of capacity in Turkey is the Kileh, which is slightly larger than the British bushel.

THE UNITED STATES.

The British Imperial measures of length and of weight are the legal measures in the United States of North America ; but the measures of capacity are different, as the old British measures of capacity, which are obsolete in the United Kingdom, have been retained. These are :—

For measuring liquids : The old Wine Gallon, equal to 0·8331 British gallon.

For measuring things dry, such as corn : The old Winchester Bushel, equal to 0·9694 British bushel.

The Metric system is permissive in the United States, but is little used.

Besides the measures of length, weight, and capacity, which have been described above, there are certain other important measures which are practically used by all nations. These are :—

ANGULAR MEASURES.

The unit of Angular measure is the angle of an equilateral triangle, which is divided into sixty parts, called Degrees. As there are six such angles in a complete circle, the latter contains 360 degrees, which are thus divided :—

60 seconds (1″) = 1 minute (1′).
60 minutes = 1 degree (1°).
360 degrees = 1 circle.

CIRCULAR MEASURES.

Diameter of Circle × 3·1416 = Circumference.
Diameter Squared × ·7854 = Area of Circle.
Diameter Squared × 3·1416 gives Surface of Sphere.
Diameter Cubed × ·5236 = Solidity of Sphere.
One Degree of Circumference × 57·3 gives Radius.
Diameter of Cylinder × 3·1416 ; product by length or height, gives the Surface.
Diameter Squared × ·7854 ; product by length or height, gives Solid Content.

GEOGRAPHICAL MEASURES.

The North and South Poles are two points at the opposite extremities of that diameter of the earth round which it revolves. The Equator is a great circle, equally distant from the North and South Poles. For geographical purposes, the surface of the earth is divided by circles, called the circles of Latitude and Longitude. The circles of Latitude are small circles parallel to the Equator. The circles of Longitude are great circles perpendicular to the Equator, and passing through the North and South Poles. These circles are divided into Degrees, Minutes, and Seconds. Degrees of Latitude are numbered from the Equator to the North and South Poles. Degrees of Longitude are numbered from the primary circle of Longitude, or Meridian, which passes through the astronomical observatory of Greenwich.

A geographical mile is the length of one minute of Latitude. If the earth was a sphere, every minute of Latitude would be of the same length; but, as it is a spheroid, the length of a minute increases from 6,046 feet at the Equator to 6,108 feet at the Poles. The mean length of the geographical mile is 6,076·8 feet. The Nautical, or, as it is sometimes called, the Admiralty mile is 6,080 feet. It is divided into 10 cables. The length of one minute of Longitude is 6,087·2 feet at the Equator, and gradually diminishes to nothing at the North and South Poles.

The polar diameter of the Earth is 7,899 British miles. The mean equatorial diameter is 7,926 miles. The circumference at the Equator is 24,902 miles.

The Knot is a measure of speed; the expression "15 knots" indicates that the vessel in question is capable of steaming or sailing 15 geographical miles in one hour.

MEASURES OF TIME.

Measurements of time are based on the time taken by the earth to revolve round its axis; by the moon to revolve round the earth; and by the earth to revolve round the sun. As these motions are not exactly commensurable with one another, it has been necessary to adopt average or mean intervals of time for ordinary use.

Of these the first is the Day, which, in this country, commences at midnight. It is divided thus:—

60 seconds	=	1 minute.
60 minutes	=	1 hour.
24 hours	=	1 day.

The hours are counted from midnight up to 12 at noon, and again from noon up to 12 at midnight.

The astronomical day commences at noon, and is counted up to 24 hours at the following noon.

With the Jews and Mohammedans the day begins, not at midnight, but at sunset on the previous day. It is important to remember this when comparing dates in different calendars, as the hours between sunset and midnight belong to the previous day in the ordinary calendar, and to the succeeding day in the Jewish and Mohammedan calendars.

The Week is a period of seven days.

The Month in the ordinary calendar is approximately the twelfth part of a year, but the length of the different months varies as follows:—

January, March, May, July, August, October, and December have each 31 days.

April, June, September, and November have each 30 days.

February has 28 days, except in leap year, when it has 29 days.

The Jews and Mohammedans use the lunar month, based on the length of time that the moon takes to revolve round the earth. The month commences, not at true new moon, but at sunset of the day when the new moon is first seen after sunset. The length of the lunar month varies, so the Jewish and Mohammedan months have sometimes 30 and sometimes 29 days.

The Year is the length of time that the earth takes to complete one revolution round the sun, which is 365·2422 mean days. The ordinary year is taken as 365 days, and every fourth year, called Leap Year, has 366 days. Every year the date of which is divisible by 4, without remainder, is leap year. But the last year of each century that is not divisible by 400 without remainder is not a leap year. For example, the year 1900 had only 365 days.

The Mohammedan year always consists of twelve lunar months, and is sometimes 354 and sometimes 355 days in length.

For Standard Time see page 71.

TIME AND WATCH ON BOARD SHIP.

TIME.—Time is kept by means of "Bells," although there is but one bell on the ship, and to strike the clapper properly against the bell requires some skill.

First, two strokes of the clapper at the interval of a second, then an interval of two seconds; then two more strokes with a second's interval apart, then a rest of two seconds, thus:—

BELL, ONE SECOND; B., TWO SECS.; B. S.; B. SS. B. S.; B. SS.; B.

WATCH.—For purposes of discipline, and to divide the work fairly, the crew is mustered in two divisions: the Starboard (right side, looking forward) and the Port (left). The day commences at noon, and is thus divided:—

Afternoon	Watch	... ...	noon to 4 p.m.
First Dog	,,	... ...	4 p.m. to 6 p.m.
Second Dog	,,	... ...	6 p.m. to 8 p.m.
First	,,	... ...	8 p.m. to midnight.
Middle	,,	... ...	12 a.m. to 4 a.m.
Morning	,,	... ...	4 a.m. to 8 a.m.
Forenoon	,,	... ...	8 a.m. to noon.

This makes seven WATCHES, which enables the crew to keep them alternately, as the Watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day, and the men who have only four hours' rest one night have eight hours the next. This is the reason for having Dog Watches, which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. into two Watches.

MEASURES OF TEMPERATURE.

Variations of temperature are measured by thermometers, which are graduated on three different systems, viz.:—

The British, or Fahrenheit thermometer.

The Centigrade, or Celsius thermometer.

The Réaumur thermometer.

In the Fahrenheit thermometer the distance from the freezing point of water to the boiling point is divided into 180 degrees. The freezing point is marked 32°, and the boiling point 212°.

In the Centigrade thermometer the freezing point is marked 0°, and the boiling point 100°.

In the Réaumur thermometer the freezing point is marked 0°, and the boiling point 80°.

To convert Centigrade degrees to Fahrenheit, multiply by $\frac{9}{5}$ and add 32°.

To convert Réaumur degrees to Fahrenheit, multiply by $\frac{9}{4}$ and add 32°.

For example :—

20° Centigrade = 20 × $\frac{9}{5}$ + 32 = 68° Fahrenheit.
20° Réaumur = 20 × $\frac{9}{4}$ + 32 = 77° Fahrenheit.

To convert Fahrenheit degrees to Centigrade, subtract 32° and multiply by $\frac{5}{9}$.

To convert Fahrenheit degrees to Réaumur, subtract 32° and multiply by $\frac{4}{9}$.

For example :—

68° Fahrenheit = $\frac{5}{9}$(68 − 32) = 20° Centigrade.
77° Fahrenheit = $\frac{5}{9}$(77 − 32) = 20° Réaumur.

To convert Centigrade degrees to Réaumur degrees, multiply by $\frac{4}{5}$.

To convert Réaumur degrees to Centigrade degrees, multiply by $\frac{5}{4}$.

For example :—

20° Centigrade = 20 × $\frac{4}{5}$ = 16° Réaumur.
20° Réaumur = 20 × $\frac{5}{4}$ = 25° Centigrade.

ELECTRICAL MEASURES.

It is customary to express electrical measures in terms of the centimetre, the gramme, and the second, and the value of the units has been fixed by International agreement. The principal units, as described in the Order in Council of January 10, 1910, are as follows :—

The OHM, the unit of resistance, is the resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury, at the temperature of melting ice, 14·4521 grammes in mass, of a constant cross-sectional area, and of a length of 106·3 centimetres.

The AMPÈRE, the unit of current, is the unvarying electric current which, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water, deposits silver at the rate of 0·001118 of a gramme per second.

The VOLT, the unit of pressure, is the pressure which, when steadily applied to a conductor whose resistance is one ohm, will produce a current of one ampère.

Standards of the above units are kept at the Standardising Laboratory of the Board of Trade.

The WATT, the unit of power, is $\frac{1}{746}$ of one horse-power, the horse-power being 33,000 lb. raised one foot in one minute. The Board of Trade unit is 1,000 Watt-hours.

In carbon lamps of 16-candle power (nominal) about four watts are required per candle power to give good economical results for domestic purposes. One Board of Trade unit will keep a 16-candle carbon lamp alight for about 16 hours ; metallic filament lamps require considerably less.

MEASURES FOR SPECIAL PURPOSES.

Builders' Measurements.

Stock or kiln bricks	8¾ inches	× 4½ × 2¾
Welsh fire-bricks	9	,, × 4½ × 2¾
Paving bricks	9	,, × 4½ × 1¾
Square tiles	9¾	,, × 9¾ × 1
,,	6	,, × 6 × 1
Dutch clinker bricks	9½	,, × 3 × 1½

A Rod of Brickwork 16½ feet × 1½ brick thick = 306 cubic feet, or 11⅓ cubic yards, and contains about 4,500 bricks with about 75 cubic feet of mortar.

Ordinary bricks weigh about 7 lb. each ; a load of 500 weighs about 1 ton 11 cwt. 1 qr.

A Piece of Wall Paper is 12 yd. long × 21 in. wide (English), and 9 yd. × 18 in. (French).

Timber and Wood.

40 cubic feet rough, 50 cubic feet squared = 1 load.
50 cubic feet of planks = 1 load.

OLD BRITISH MEASURES.

The Cubit was the length of the forearm from the elbow to the end of the middle finger. Its length, as a measure, varied in different countries. The British Cubit was 18 inches, and was divided into 6 palms or hand-breadths; the Hand, still used for measuring horses, was 4 inches. The Ell also varied. The British Ell was 45 inches; the Scottish Ell was 37·2 inches.

The Statute Mile and the Statute Acre (see p. 430) are based on the Statute Perch of 5½ yards. The Mile is 320 perches (1,760 yards), and the Acre 160 square perches (4,840 square yards). In former times other miles and acres, based on different perches, were also used, among which were the following:—

The Scottish Mile was 320 falls or Scottish perches, each of 6 Scottish ells (1,984 yards). The Scottish Mile was about 1¼ Statute Mile.

The Irish Mile was 320 Irish perches, each of 7 yards (2,240 yards). 11 Irish Miles were equal to 14 Statute Miles.

The Scottish Acre contained 160 falls, or square Scottish perches (6,150·4 square yards). It was equal to 1·27 Statute Acre.

The Cunningham Acre contained 160 square perches, the perch being 6¼ yards (6,250 square yards). It was equal to 1·29 Statute Acre.

The Irish Acre contained 160 square Irish perches (7,840 square yards). It was a little more than 1⅝ Statute Acre.

The Cheshire Acre contained 160 square perches, each perch being 8 yards (10,240 square yards). It was nearly equal to 2½ Statute Acres.

The Hide was an ancient measure of land, which varied in different parts, but the average was 120 acres. A yard of land—virgate, or farthing land—was a quarter of a hide. In some counties the hide was called a carucate, which was divided into eight bovates. In the time of Domesday Book a hide was worth, on the average, £1 per annum; a knight's fee was usually five hides.

THE BRITISH ISLES.

THE KING AND COURT.—(1910) May 7. King George held his first Privy Council, at which he delivered a touching and earnest speech. 9. The new King was proclaimed throughout the country with picturesque and stately ceremony. 10. King George issued messages to the Navy, Army, and to India, and Queen Alexandra addressed an affecting letter to the Nation. 17. The body of King Edward, which had lain in state in the Throne Room at Buckingham Palace for three days, was conveyed in solemn procession to Westminster Hall for the public ceremonial. King George and the many Royal personages assembled for the funeral walked behind the gun-carriage upon which the remains were carried through densely crowded thoroughfares. At Westminster Hall the Archbishop of Canterbury conducted a special service attended by Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra and members of both Houses of Parliament. Later in the day and on the two following days the general public were allowed to pass by the bier, many thousands availing themselves of the privilege. 20. Amid a nation's mourning, the funeral of King Edward took place. King George, with the German Emperor and many other sovereigns and royal personages, proceeded to Westminster Hall, where the Archbishop of Canterbury conducted a short service. The coffin was then carried through enormous crowds to Paddington Station, whence the remains were taken to Windsor. The last rites were performed in St. George's Chapel, where a notable gathering had assembled, the scene being one of unequalled splendour and impressiveness. 22. King George in messages to his people expressed his deep appreciation of the loyalty and sympathy which had been exhibited throughout the Empire since the death of King Edward. 24. The British Empire.

* THE total area of the British Empire is nearly 11,400,000 square miles, with a total population of about 410,000,000. The known surface of the globe is estimated at 55,000,000 square miles, and its total population is believed to be about 1,800,000,000; so that the British Empire occupies approximately 21 per cent., or more than one-fifth, of the earth's surface, and its population is in the proportion of 22 per cent., or over one-fifth, of the inhabitants of the globe. The total revenue exceeds £400,000,000, the debt totals over £1,500,000,000, and the trade exceeds £1,600,000,000. Railways to the extent of 90,000 miles have been opened, and 12,160,000 net tons of shipping sail under the British flag, while nearly 265,000,000 tons enter and clear annually at British ports.

THE CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

The Constitution.—The Constitution, which is unwritten, recognises certain great principles, including the fair administration of justice; the prohibition of taxation without the consent of the people; and a limited monarchy, the power of the monarch being, in effect, wielded by a ministry supported by a majority of the House of Commons. The component parts of the British Government may be thus briefly described:

1. The King.—The King has a right to veto bills passed by both Houses of Parliament, but in practice his veto is almost obsolete. "The King can do no wrong," is a maxim of the Constitution, and consequently no action for civil wrong will lie against the Crown. A petition of right, however, will generally enable an injured subject to obtain redress.

2. The House of Lords consists of peers. A peer may hold his seat by (1) hereditary right, (2) creation by the King. English bishops, Irish peers elected for life, and Scottish peers elected for duration of Parliament, may also sit in the House of Lords. This House may alter or reject a Bill passed by the House of Commons. In practice it generally submits to the will of the people.

3. The House of Commons.—This body consists of 670 elected members representing county, borough, and university constituencies. Roughly speaking, about one-sixth of the population are electors.

4. The Ministry.—The Ministry includes members of the Cabinet and a number of other persons who have no seat in the Cabinet. Ministers are drawn from the ranks of the party in power.

5. The Executive.—This consists of the King in Council. It is the Crown which "makes peace and war, issues charters, increases the peerage, is the fountain of honour, of office, and of justice." Ministers hold their office during pleasure; they may be dismissed at any moment.

The Judicial System.—(a) England and Wales.—The laws in England and Wales are administered by judges appointed by the Crown, who hold office for life, and cannot be removed save on petition presented by both Houses of Parliament. The High Court comprises the King's Bench, Chancery, and Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Divisions. Two Courts of Appeal hear appeals from these divisions, the ultimate Court of Appeal from all the courts in the United Kingdom being the House of Lords. All civil cases arising in London and Middlesex are tried at the Royal Courts of Justice, but civil cases arising in the country are tried on circuit by judges of the King's Bench. The Chancery Division has exclusive jurisdiction to try certain classes of actions. To the County Courts is relegated the duty of trying actions where the sum in dispute does not exceed a certain amount. The County Courts, too, have jurisdiction to try cases arising under certain special Acts of Parliament, e.g.,

* An enlarged edition of WHITAKER'S ALMANACK, containing the whole of the Popular Edition, together with a supplement devoted to the Imperial Dominions, Foreign Countries, Annual Summaries, Sport, Shipping and Railways, Holiday and Health Resorts, County and Municipal Directory, &c., is also published, nearly half-bound, 792 pages, price 2*s.* 6*d. net.* (See Table of Contents, p. 503.)

the Workmen's Compensation Act. Bankruptcy cases arising in London are heard in the London Bankruptcy Court, while in the provinces the County Courts have jurisdiction in bankruptcy.

With regard to criminal law in England it is a general principle that, except for certain minor offences, every person charged is entitled to be tried by a jury. Courts of criminal jurisdiction are (1) the judges of the High Court sitting at Assizes for the trial of cases in the provinces, and in London at the Central Criminal for the trial of cases arising in and around London; (2) Courts of Quarter Sessions, holden for every county, and formed of justices of the peace, presided over by a chairman who is unpaid. The recorders of certain cities and boroughs have a jurisdiction similar to that of courts of Quarter Sessions in respect of cases arising within their districts. (3) Courts of Petty Sessions, consisting of two justices of the peace or a stipendiary magistrate. These courts hear and decide minor offences, and have power to commit offenders to take their trial in more serious cases. (4) Court of Criminal Appeal: This court, which was established by an Act passed in 1907, has power to hear appeals against convictions and sentences. It will not, however, re-try a case, nor will it upset the verdict of a jury unless it is manifestly unreasonable.

(b) Scotland.—Scots civil law, which is entirely different to that of England, is administered by the Court of Session, which is a court of law and equity. The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges, and as a rule it is confined to the trial of serious cases. The sheriff of each county is the proper criminal judge in all crimes occurring within the county which merit only an arbitrary punishment. Borough magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases occurring within the burgh or county, and in a number of minor offences under various statutes.

(c) Ireland.—The civil courts in Ireland are very similar to the English courts. In the main the criminal procedure is also similar.

Local Government. — Local government is carried out under the central control of the Local Government Board. The subjects which local bodies administer are, inter alia, the poor law; the laws relating to public health; the maintenance of the police; the control of the sale of intoxicating liquors; the provision of lunatic asylums. Local authorities also have to administer and carry into effect the laws as to elementary and other schools. Scotland and Ireland each have an elaborate system of local government. The ruling principle has been to entrust special interests to those specially interested.

Defence.—The defence of the Empire is entrusted to the navy and army. The numbers of the navy are maintained by voluntary enlistment, although the right of impressment still exists. The army is maintained by voluntary enlistment.

GOVERNMENT OF THE IMPERIAL DOMINIONS.

Colony Defined.—A Colony means any part of the King's dominions except the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, and British India.

Control of Parliament.—All British dominions are subject (except as regards taxation) to the legislation of the British Parliament; but no Act of Parliament affects a colony unless that colony is specially mentioned. If the legislature of a colony enacts a law which is repugnant to an imperial law affecting the colony, it is to the extent to which it is repugnant absolutely void.

Colonial legislatures may be controlled (1) by the refusal of the governor's assent to any measure passed; (2) by reservation of a measure for the consideration of the Crown, and refusal of Crown's assent; (3) by a suspensory clause and the refusal of the Royal assent.

Subject to what has been stated above, the parliament of a self-governing dominion exercises within its borders all the ordinary powers of a Sovereign assembly.

The Imperial Dominions may be divided into four classes, according to the way in which they are governed:

1. Wherein both legislative and executive powers are vested in the governor alone.—In this class are Gibraltar, Labuan, and St. Helena, where power is also reserved to the Crown to legislate by Order in Council. The South African colonies of Bechuanaland, Basutoland, and Zululand are governed in substantially the same way, but no power is reserved to the Crown.

2. Where there is government by a governor acting with an executive and a legislative council, the councils being nominated by the Crown or a governor representing the Crown.—Colonies so governed include British New Guinea, Ceylon, Falkland Islands, Fiji, Gambia, St. Vincent, Sierra Leone, Straits Settlements, Trinidad.

3. Where there is government by legislative assembly wholly or partly elected, and an executive council nominated by the Crown or the governor representing the Crown.—In this class may be placed the Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guiana, Jamaica, Leeward Islands, Mauritius, and Malta.

4. Those having responsible government.—The principal government departments are administered by political chiefs who are responsible, not merely or mainly to the Crown, but to the elected legislature. The Dominions thus governed include Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa.

British India.—India is governed by the King as Emperor, acting on the advice of the Secretary of State for India. Where the advice of a council comes in, it is the Council of India, whose members are appointed by the Secretary of State. In certain matters the actions of the Secretary of State and Council are not valid unless sanctioned by Parliament. The Governor-General of India in Council acts for executive purposes very much on the lines of the governing body of a Crown colony.

Protectorates.—The protectorates are countries which, as regards their foreign relations, are under the exclusive control of the King. The protectorates of the British Empire include British Central Africa, British East Africa, Uganda, and Nigeria.

Spheres of Influence.—A sphere of influence may be described as an area wherein other foreign Powers undertake not to attempt to acquire influence or territory by treaty or annexation.

THE BRITISH ISLES.

The British Isles, including the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, lie between the 48th and 61st degrees of N. latitude, and the 2nd degree of East and the 11th degree of West longitude. The total area is 77,683,084 acres, or 121,377 sq. miles, with a population in 1910 of 45,469,564. In 1909 there were 1,146,118 births (25·5 per 1000). 667,765 deaths (14·8 per 1000), and 313,120 marriages (13·9 per 1000) in the United Kingdom. The average strength of the Regular Army of the United Kingdom was 253,400 officers and men in 1909, the Army Reserve numbered 133,990, the Special Reserve 69,954, the Territorial Force 273,141, and the Police numbered 65,400. The number of Immigrants was 261,325, and of Emigrants 474,378, in 1909. The number of Paupers and Dependents in Jan. 1910 was 1,139,780, and 14,987 Criminals were convicted in 1909. There were in 1909 46,474 registered Joint Stock Companies trading in the United Kingdom, the paid-up capital amounting to £2,163,132,789, and 1,808 incorporated Building Societies, with liabilities of £58,821,696 (exclusive of 56 unincorporated societies, with liabilities of £15,149,873). There were also 2,243 Industrial and Provident Societies, with 2,535,615 members, having a share capital of £33,914,059 and a sales total of £110,619,570. In 1909 there were 30,603 applications for Patents, of which 15,065 were sealed, and 6,112 Trade Marks were registered. With regard to Insolvency, 4,517 persons were adjudicated bankrupts in 1909, with total liabilities £10,446,336 and assets £5,136,477. In 1909 shipping to the extent of 66,309,519 tons entered and 66,958,163 tons cleared at various ports of the United Kingdom, while in 1908 sailing and steam vessels numbering 364 were totally lost, their tonnage being 147,139, and 691 lives were lost, of whom 98 were passengers and 593 crew. Of the total area, 46,888,403 acres were under cultivation in 1909, 8,299,798 acres being under corn crops, 4,109,487 under green crops, 34,018,644 other crops, grass, permanent pasture, etc. The live stock included 2,091,743 horses, 11,761,830 cattle, 31,839,799 sheep, and 3,543,331 pigs; 63,196,696 bushels of wheat, 68,944,753 bushels of barley and bere, and 178,736,970 bushels of oats were grown in the United Kingdom, while 97,854,425 cwt. (about 195,000,000 bushels) of wheat and 11,052,540 cwt. of wheatmeal and flour were imported in 1909.

CENSUS POPULATION OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

Previous to 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland; nor was it till 1813 that statesmen had anything more than surmise to guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

1570.....4,160,221	1670.....5,773,646
1600.....4,811,718	1700.....6,045,008
1630.....5,600,517	1750.....6,517,035

The first general Census was taken in 1801, and since the time named there has been a fresh numbering every ten years, with the following results:

From the above figures it appears that the population of the United Kingdom including Islands in the British Seas in 1901 shows an increase of upwards of 3,725,000 when compared with the population in 1891, and the number of inhabited houses an increase of 908,000.

AGED PAUPERS OVER 70 YEARS.

The disqualification for an old age pension attaching to the receipt of poor relief since 1st January, 1908, ceased to operate after 31st December, 1909. The total number thus hitherto disqualified cannot be stated, but the following statistics relate to a census taken on particular days:—

England and Wales.—The number of paupers over 70 years of age (exclusive of lunatics in asylums, &c.) relieved on 1st January, 1910, was:—

	Men.	Women.	Total.
Indoor	33,473	24,248	57,721
Outdoor	40,999	97,224	138,223
Total	74,472	121,472	195,944

The number of indoor paupers includes 39,203 who, in the opinion of the various medical officers, were unable satisfactorily to take care of themselves owing to mental or physical infirmity, representing 67·8 per cent. of the total.

Scotland.—The number of paupers over 70 years were:—

	Paupers.	Dependants.
15th Jan., 1909	15,978	944
15th Sept., 1909	15,019	867

Ireland.—The number of persons over 70 years on 1st January, 1910, was approximately 25,000.

PAUPERS AND POOR RELIEF, U.K., 1850–1910.

The number of persons in receipt of Poor Relief for a series of years, with the amount expended out of the Poor Rates (including Receipts-in-Aid) in Actual Relief of the Poor, except that the expenses of management for Scotland and Ireland (but not for England and Wales) are included:—

THE BUDGET, 1910–1911.

The Budget of 1910–1911 was introduced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on June 30, 1910. The Estimated Expenditure was £171,857,000—an increase of £9,755,000 over that estimated for the previous year (the principal increases being £5,500,000 for the Navy, £2,300,000 for Civil Services, £600,000 Customs and Inland Revenue, and £850,000 for the Post Office). Provision had also to be made for the 1909–1910 deficit of £26,248,000, and for £908,000 granted in 1909–1910 and payable during the present financial year. The enormous total of £199,482,000 had therefore to be provided, towards which arrears of taxation would provide £30,046,000, tax revenue £142,455,000, non-tax revenue £27,290,000—a grand total of £199,791,000, leaving a balance for contingencies of £309,000. The Parliamentary Debates on the Budgets of 1909–1910 and 1910–1911 are epitomised and printed in the "Parliamentary Summary" on pp. 154–9.

The naval expenditure of the British Empire on sea going force in 1909-10 was £36,301,900, of which the U.K. contributed £35,807,000. The aggregate gross tonnage of the Mercantile Marine protected thereby was 17,328,351 U.K. and 1,391,186 India and Colonies; total 28,709,537 gross tons, which carries the annual value of nearly £1,700,000,000 including bullion and specie. The naval expenditure is therefore 2·135 per cent., if regarded as a premium for insurance. Other nations spend as follows in millions of £ —U.S.A., 25·7 to protect 4,854,787 tons of Mercantile Shipping; Japan, 5·2 for 1,150,000 tons; Russia, 12·4 for 975,000 tons; Germany, 11·4 for 4,230,000 tons; and France, 22·8 for 1,884,000 tons.

THE INCOME TAX.

A Tax on Income was first imposed by Pitt in 1798, in order to meet the expenses of the French War, and at the conclusion of peace in 1801 it was abolished. In 1803 the Income Tax was again imposed as a Property Tax, divided into Schedules A, B, C, D, and E, as at the present time, the rate being 1*s.* in the £ on incomes exceeding £60, except in the case of Schedule B, where the rate was 9*d.* in England and 6*d.* in Scotland. In 1805 the rate was increased by 3*d.*, and in 1807 the figures were 2*s.* in the £ on Schedules A, C, D, and E, 1*s.* 6*d.* on Schedule B for England and 1*s.* for Scotland. At the conclusion of peace the Income Tax ceased for 26 years (1815–1842), to be re-imposed by Sir Robert Peel on June 22, 1842, at the rate of 7*d.* in the £ on all incomes exceeding £150. In 1842 the tax produced about £5,000,000, or about £710,000 per 1*d.* of tax; and in 1908–9 the yield was £33,408,754, or £2,784,063 per 1*d.* of tax.

THE NATIONAL DEBT.

he National Debt is mainly the remnant of growth of many years, and nearly all was ed for foreign wars. There was a trifling sum £664,263 until the "Glorious Revolution" of 8, which added nearly £16,000,000 to the Debt. der Queen Anne the campaigns of the Duke of rlborough added nearly £38,000,000, part of ich was paid off in the time of George I. In reign of George II. about £87,000,000 were led, but the first twelve years of George III. £10,000,000 of this paid off. The American r added £121,000,000, making the total nearly 50,000,000, which was reduced considerably il 1793, when the repayments ceased owing to outbreak of the French Revolutionary War. twenty-three years, £601,500,343 were added the debt for the purposes of the war, the lowing amounts being raised :—

The Debt is of three descriptions:—I. Funded (a) Permanent, (β) Terminable: II. Unfunded: III. Certain other Liabilities. The Funded and Unfunded (or Floating) Debts are included in the fixed annual charge, and details of the various descriptions are given below:—

I. Funded Debt.—(a) Permanent.

That is, Debt which the Government is not under obligation to pay off at any fixed time. This consisted of the following stock on 31 March:—

	1909.	1910.
2½ per cent. Consols	£573,739,142	£567,005,323
2¾ per cent. Consols	4,112,366	3,972,266
2½ per cent. (16 Vict.)	30,341,580	30,245,089
Bank of England Debt	11,015,100	11,015,100
Bank of Ireland do.	2,630,769	2,630,769

(β) Terminable Annuities.

These are a description of Sinking Fund by means of which a considerable portion of debt is paid off year by year, and after a certain time the capitalized sum entirely extinguished, the Treasury giving an Annuity for a certain number of years in exchange for permanent stock.

The following is a list of these terminable annuities with their amount, the dates when they expire, and their capitalized value as on March 31, 1910:—

(1) Annuities for Life and Terms of Years (£1,503,072, created 1830–1888)	£14,536,591
(2) Annuities created by the National Debt Local Loans Act 1887, and the Finance Act 1899:—
(a) Savings Banks Annuities (£471,084 expiring in 1913)	1,984,119
(b) Savings Banks Annuities (£751,296 expiring in 1924–1925)	10,296,795
(c) Book Debt Annuities (£745,215 expiring in 1924)	9,059,356
(3) Sinking Fund Annuity (£15,547 created in 1884 and expiring in 1934)	—
Total Capital value...	£35,876,861

II. Unfunded Debt.

The Unfunded Debt consists of loans, money borrowed for short periods, which the Government is bound to pay off at certain dates, and is represented by certain loans having currency for periods varying from a few months to five or more years. On 31 March, 1910, these consisted of three months' Treasury Bills to the amount of £1,000,000, six months' bills £13,500,000, and also of War Stock and War Bonds (2¾ per cent.) repayable in 1910 to the amount of £21,000,000, and Exchequer Bonds (2¾ per cent.) repayable by annual drawings of £1,000,000 to the amount of £6,000,000.

The total Debt on which interest is included in the Permanent or Fixed Annual Charge is therefore £713,245,408.

III. Other Capital Liabilities.

These sums, which are not included in the capital on which interest is arranged for in the permanent charge, stood as follows on 31 March, 1910:—

Imports and Exports Classified.

The tables on the next page show the value of British Imports and Domestic Exports, differentiating Imperial and Foreign customers, and summarising the merchandise into the four main headings of Food, Drink and Tobacco, Raw Materials, Manufactures, and Miscellaneous. The values are as ascertained by the Board of Trade, and represent in the case of Imports the full value (what is known as "C.I.F."), i.e., cost, insurance, and freight, or if sent on consignment the sale value at the date of entry; in the case of exports the term "Domestic" includes only British and Irish produce or manufactures, and the values are those known as "F.O.B.," i.e., cost and charges for delivery on board the ship.

It must always be borne in mind that Imports have two values—F.O.B. when they start and C.I.F. when they arrive, the latter being the free on board, or cost, plus insurance and freight. Similarly, exports scheduled with their F.O.B. values as above are enhanced in value (= C.I.F.) by the time they are landed. The existence of these two values accounts, in some degree, for the difference between the figures ascertained by the Board of Trade for the United Kingdom and those ascertained by the statistical authorities of other countries. In addition, there is a difficulty in ascertaining the true origin of some imports which are liable to be ascribed to the nation which owns the port of lading. Such imports have been in many cases consigned to England from an inland country.

THE KINGDOM OF ENGLAND.

THE southern and eastern parts of England have a population mainly derived from Belgic Gaul, whilst the western districts and Wales have been peopled from the West of France and the North of Spain, while Ireland and Scotland are believed to have been peopled by a race originally Belgic. When the Romans first came to our shores the inhabitants might have been roughly divided into two sections: those who lived inland, and who may with some reason be called Celtic colonists, were a race of hunters and shepherds, dressed in the skins of beasts, and inhabiting huts made of rude wickerwork and covered with rushes; whereas the coast-dwellers were, probably, of Gallic origin, with some approach towards civilisation, and holding intercourse, for purposes of trade, with foreign merchants visiting the island. Neglecting the Romans, who were no more than mere military garrisons, and mingled little with the natives—much like Europeans in the East at the present day—we have the Saxons and Jutes established from Kent to Devonshire, and the Angles (and subsequently the Norsemen) from the Thames to the Tweed. The Norman Conquest brought in a mixed multitude from the Continent; the wars of Stephen introduced a numerous body of Flemings, who were settled by Henry II. in Wales; and the commercial views of Edward III. led to the establishment of a still larger body of the same people as clothworkers in Kent. The west of England was known to the Phœnicians, and was resorted to by them for its tin, four centuries or more B.C.; hence the whole country received the name of the Cassiterides, or Tin Islands. When invaded by Cæsar (B.C. 55) it was called Britain (perhaps derived from Prydain, the name of an early chief of great power), or sometimes Albion, that is, the White Land, from the white cliffs on the S.E. coast.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—In 1909 the cultivated area of England was 25,540,985 acres (of which 21,488,862 were occupied by tenants, and 3,052,123 by owners):—Acres under Wheat, 1,734,236; Barley, 1,379,133; Oats, 1,839,912; Beans, 302,653; Peas, 182,209; Rye, 49,254; Potatoes, 405,529; Turnips, 1,056,823; Mangold, 442,910; Cabbage, 60,404; Kohl Rabi, 17,644; Rape, 75,978; Clover and Rotation Grasses, 2,383,459; Small Fruit, 78,124; Hops, 32,539; Vetches, 127,415; Lucerne, 64,908; Other Crops, 119,349; Bare Fallow, 276,511; total arable land, 10,628,990. Permanent grass, 13,911,995. The rateable value of agricultural land in England and Wales in 1908 was £23,653,307. The produce in 1909 was 7,285,506 quarters of wheat (33·61 bushels per acre); 6,340,580 quarters of barley (36·78); 9,763,873 quarters of oats (42·45); 1,070,238 quarters of beans (28·42); 546,064 quarters of peas (25·90); 2,643,109 tons of potatoes (6·52 tons per acre); 16,543,107 tons of turnips and swedes (15·65); 9,316,314 tons of mangold (21·03); 2,090,595 tons of hay from clover, sainfoin, and rotation grasses (28·85 cwt. per acre); and 4,731,088 tons of hay from permanent grass (23·11 cwt. per acre). The Live Stock included 1,187,870 horses; 2,073,440 cows and heifers; 3,026,705 other cattle; 6,191,525 ewes; 10,303,287 other sheep and rams; and 2,046,284 pigs.

Education (England and Wales).—Public Elementary Education is free, and is conducted in various institutions known as Ordinary Public Elementary Schools,* with 216,172 boys and 200,917 girls under 5 years, 2,283,573 boys and 2,245,310 girls over 5 and under 12, and 541,954 boys and 537,237 girls of 12 years and over, on the registers in 1909. There were also 44 Higher Elementary Schools, with accommodation for 13,293 scholars, and Special Schools for Blind, Deaf, Defective, and Epileptic Children. Teachers are trained at Pupil-Teacher Centres, Training Colleges, and Hostels. Public Secondary Education is conducted at 912 Recognised Secondary Schools, at 2,202 Evening (Continuation) Schools, and at 103 Day Technical Classes, 46 Art Classes, 42 Technical Institutions, and 225 Schools of Art. A Parliamentary grant of £11,104,305 was made for Public Elementary Education (England and Wales) in 1908, the total receipts for that purpose being £11,519,200, exclusive of £10,467,804 received from Local Rates, the total payments being £21,987,004 in 1908. In addition to State action, there are in England many establishments known as "The Public Schools," where the upper and middle classes are educated at their own cost; and Universities at Oxford (1249 A.D.), Cambridge (1257 A.D.), Durham (1831), London (1836), Manchester (1850), Birmingham (1900), Liverpool (1903), Leeds (1904), Sheffield (1905), and Bristol (1909), with various University Colleges throughout the Kingdom.

Occupations (1901).—Of the 12,134,259 males of 10 years and upwards in England and Wales in 1901, 1,071,040 were engaged in Agriculture, 1,042,864 in Building and Works, 774,291 in Food, Tobacco, Drink and Lodging, 640,989 Coal and Shale Mine Workers, 626,263 Engineering and Machine Making, 548,190 Dock, Coal and General Labourers, 430,645 Road Conveyance, 351,911 on Railways, 311,618 Professional, 307,889 Commercial or Business Clerks, 233,000 Wood, Furniture, Fittings and Decorations, 229,123 Tools, Dies, Arms and other Metal Trades, 222,796 Merchants, Agents, Accountants, Banking and Insurance, 196,898 Cotton Manufactures, 184,081 Boot and Shoe Trades, 180,496 Messengers, Porters and Watchmen, 179,932 Domestic Outdoor Service, 171,687 General or Local Government, 168,238 Defence, 131,429 Seas, Rivers and Canals, 130,731 Precious Metals, Jewels, Watches, Instruments and Games, 124,263 Domestic Indoor Service, 119,545 Tailors, 115,083 Cycles, Coaches and other Vehicles, 111,081 Drapers, Mercers and Dress, 107,170 Printers and Lithographers, and 101,938 Chemicals, Explosives, Oil, Grease and Soap Makers. Of females, 3,254,242 unmarried and 917,509 married, aged 10 and upwards, were occupied, 1,330,783 being in Domestic Indoor Service, 340,582 Dressmakers, 332,233 Cotton Manufactures, 196,141 Laundry and Washing, 172,873 Teaching, 142,687 Food and General Shopkeepers, 122,068 Woollen and Worsted Manufactures, 117,640 Tailoresses, 111,841 Charwomen, and 95,900 Staymakers, Shirtmakers and Seamstresses.

* These Schools are also divisible as "Provided," where the provision of the fabric and the cost of maintenance is borne by the public, and "Non-Provided," where the buildings are not provided or maintained by the public, but by a religious denomination.

Statistics of English Counties.

THE following tables show the Area and Population of each County* in England and Wales according to the Census of 1901, the Rateable Value as settled by the Assessment Committees in the Valuation Lists in 1909, the amount of Rates received by Boards of Guardians of Poor Law Unions in each county for their own purposes (i.e. excluding county contributions) during the year ended Lady Day, 1909, together with the number of Paupers who were actually in receipt of relief on Jan. 1st, 1910.

The total population of England and Wales in 1901 was 32,527,843, as compared with 29,002,525 in 1891. The total number of Paupers receiving relief on Jan. 1st, 1910, was 942,837, being a decrease of 17,011 when compared with the previous year. The total cost of Relief to the Poor for the year ended Lady-Day, 1909, excluding the expenditure of the Metropolitan Asylums Board in connection with hospitals for infectious diseases, was £14,723,448.

The total amount of Rates received by Boards of Guardians in England and Wales for their own purposes during the year ended Lady Day, 1909, was £12,326,068, as compared with £11,928,863 in the previous year. This was equivalent in 1909 to a rate of 1*s.* 2¾*d.* in the £ on Assessable Value or 6*s.* 11¾*d.* per head on estimated population. The receipts in aid of these Rates, inclusive of grants from County and Borough Councils, and grants under the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, amounted to £3,850,000. The cost of Relief to the Poor for the year ended Lady-Day, 1909, amounted to 8*s.* 4*d.* per head of the estimated population. (For statistics and other particulars as to Wales, see next page.)

The Principality of Wales.

The Principality of Wales, with an extreme length of 135 miles and a breadth varying from 35 miles to 95 miles, lies in the S.W. of Great Britain, and has an area of 7,370 square miles. It is rich in minerals; slate, coal, and iron being among the more important; while of its manufactures, flannel, cloth, and hosiery alone are worthy of mention. The native inhabitants are almost wholly of the Cymric stock of the Celtic race; and a large number of them belong to the religious body known as the Calvinistic Methodists.

At what time Christianity was introduced it is impossible to tell, but certainly not later than A.D. 400. When the British Christians were driven from their homes, such of them as did not seek refuge beyond the seas found in the rocky fastnesses of the Welsh mountains a secure retreat from their enemies. There they immediately set about dividing the country into ecclesiastical divisions for administrative purposes, and the present sees of Wales represent those leading centres of religious thought that became famous in the sixth century. The four bishoprics still remain as of old, and the numbers of beneficed clergy now to be found in them are as follows: St. David's, 360; Llandaff, 261; St. Asaph, 207; and Bangor, 147. The sees of St. David's and Llandaff were united with the Southern province in the year 1107, and those of Bangor and St. Asaph in the years 1092 and 1143 respectively.

When the Saxon pirates began to visit and ravage the eastern shores of Britain, the Celtic inhabitants were gradually pressed westward by the invading hordes, and finally found secure shelter in the wilds of Wales, Devon, and Cornwall. The border-lands, or marches, between England and Wales were long in a state of at least guerilla warfare; and it was not until about 850 A.D. that one Roderick (Rhodi Mawr) contrived to unite the whole country into one Principality, dividing it afterwards among his sons into three smaller ones, named, severally, Gwynedd, Dyved and Ceredigion, and Powis. This was followed by the incursions of the Danes, after which Howel once more (in the 10th century) succeeded in reuniting the country. Later, when England was tending in the same direction of unity, Athelstane received a tribute from the Welsh in recognition of his nominal sovereignty over them. William I. and his son Rufus both tried the plan of granting fiefs to their more adventurous Norman knights, on condition of their conquering the land; Henry I. introduced into the Principality a colony of Flemish wool-workers. Henry II., too, and John, endeavoured, with doubtful success, to effect a final subjugation of the troublesome province. A combination of fortuitous circumstances led to its lasting conquest. Llewellyn, who succeeded David, had been implicated in the Montfort rebellion, but, on the accession of Edward I., managed to get included in the general amnesty granted to those who had joined the Leicester faction. In 1276, however, Edward, having been repeatedly refused the homage due to him from Llewellyn, raised an army to enforce his commands. Llewellyn was slain in battle in 1282, with two thousand of his followers; and in the following year his brother David was betrayed to the English, sent in chains to Shrewsbury, and at last put to a painful and ignominious death as a traitor. The Welsh nobility then submitted in a body, and King Edward invested his son Edward (who had been born at Carnarvon) with the Principality, which very soon afterwards was fully annexed to the Crown. The Welsh is a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of its own.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total area of the land of the Principality was 4,749,651 acres in 1909, of which 2,782,479 acres were cultivated, 729,122 acres being arable and 2,053,357 permanent grass. Of the arable land 39,583 acres were under wheat, 85,272 under barley, 198,528 oats, 529 rye, 1,376 beans, 714 peas—a total of 326,002 acres under corn crops. 26,994 acres were under potatoes, 58,219 turnips and swedes, 11,136 mangolds, 704 cabbage, 71 kohl rabi, 4,690 rape, 601 vetches, 385 lucerne, 1,198 small fruit; 292,636 clover, sanfoin, and rotation grasses; 1,110 other crops, and 5,376 bare fallow. The live stock included 160,633 horses, 744,672 cattle, 3,795,342 sheep, and 204,784 pigs.

Education.—Public Elementary Education is free. There is a special department at the Board of Education, Whitehall, for Welsh education, although it is administered on the same lines and under the same Acts as in England. The figures of school attendances, &c., are not shown separately in the returns, nor is the revenue or expenditure on Welsh education ascertainable from existing materials. There is a University of Wales, with constituent colleges at Aberystwith, Bangor, and Cardiff, and a University College of St. David at Lampeter.

THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND.

THE most northerly part of the island, divided from the south by the River Tweed, the Cheviot Hills, and the Solway Firth, is the ancient Caledonia or modern Scotland, and contains nearly 30,000 square miles, or 19,069,500 acres, with a population of 4,472,103 in 1901, estimated at 4,929,251 in 1910.

Industries.—The principal industries are agriculture, distilling, flax and jute (Dundee), cottons (Paisley), shipbuilding and engineering (Glasgow and Greenock), dyeworks (Perth), and printing and brewing (Edinburgh). The Western, Eastern, and Mid Lowlands are immensely fertile, and contain iron and coal-fields. In 1909 the acreage under wheat was 49,679, barley 199,981, oats 943,437, potatoes 142,938, turnips 440,506, clover and rotation grasses 1,538,480, permanent grass 1,487,053, and total 4,859,609; there were 204,490 horses, 1,176,165 cattle, and 7,328,265 sheep. Scotland produced in 1909 255,811 qrs. of wheat, (41·39 per acre), 936,901 barley (37·48), 4,737,867 oats (40·18); 880,946 tons of potatoes (6·16 tons per acre), 7,620,676 tons of turnips and swedes (17·3); 652,589 cwt. of hay from clover, &c. (31·38 per acre), and 216,585 cwt. from permanent grass (28·32 per acre). The product of the sea fisheries amounted in 1909 to £2,961,499, and over 40,000,000 tons of coal were raised in Lanarkshire and the other mining districts in 1908, and about 150,000 hands were employed in textile industries. The annual value of the trade of Scotland is about £85,000,000, of which over £40,000,000 represents the value of imports. The principal ports, with the tonnage of entries in 1909, are given on p. 459.

Education.—There were 3,149 Primary Schools in 1909, with 803,820 children on the register, and 182 Higher Grade Schools, with 22,403 children, in addition to 756 Continuation Classes (108,813 scholars). £2,129,781 were expended for education in Scotland from Parliamentary grants in 1909–10, and £3,411,798 by school boards in 1907–1908. There are Universities at St. Andrews (1411 A.D.), Glasgow (1450), Aberdeen (1494), and Edinburgh (1582).

POPULATION, AREA, VALUATION AND PAUPERS OF COUNTIES.

 The valuation of lands and heritages is that furnished by the Inspectors of the Poor to the Local Government Board for Scotland. The number of Paupers is that chargeable on May 15, 1909.

THE KINGDOM OF IRELAND.

IRELAND is an island lying between 51° 26′ and 55° 23′ N. lat. and 5° 20′ and 10° 26′ W. long. It is about 60 miles to the west of England. On three sides it is washed by the Atlantic Ocean, and on the east by the Irish Sea and St. George's Channel. Its greatest length is, from north to south, 306 miles, and from east to west from 120 to 180, with an area of about 31,759 square miles. The total acreage is (1909) 20,731,244, of which 2,995,945 acres are barren mountain, turf bog, marsh, or building land. The greater part of the surface is a plain, interspersed with low hills, the highest mountain being 3,414 feet above the sea-level. The rivers are numerous, the Shannon, 254 miles in length, being the principal; but the chief water feature of the country is the beautiful series of lakes or (as they are called) loughs, the largest, Lough Neagh, covering a surface of 98,255 acres. The harbours are among the finest in the world.

Government.—The government is semi-independent. A Lord-Lieutenant, appointed by each successive Ministry, exercises almost regal sway. The peerage are represented in the Imperial Parliament by 28 of their number; and 103 members represent the country in the House of Commons. The legal establishment is similar to that of England, and is presided over by a Lord Chancellor.

Population.—The population of Ireland on March 31, 1901, was 4,458,775 (2,200,040 males and 2,258,735 females), a decrease of 245,975, equal to 5·23 per cent., since the preceding Census of 1891. Of the total population the professional class numbered 214,343, domestic 219,419, commercial 97,889, agricultural 876,062, industrial 639,413. In 1909 there were 22,769 marriages, 102,915 births, and 75,096 deaths. The estimated population on 30 June, 1910, was 4,371,163.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—In 1909 the total cultivated area was 14,580,142 acres. There were 43,606 acres under wheat, 1,035,735 under oats, 163,100 under barley or bere, 7,464 under rye, 1,626 under beans, and 264 under pease—a total acreage of 1,251,795 under cereal crops; 579,799 acres were under potatoes, 276,944 turnips, 73,437 mangold, 42,383 cabbage, 1,849 vetch and rape, and 27,259 other green crops—a total of 1,001,671 under green crops; 38,110 acres were under flax, 2,278,438 hay, and 9,997,395 under rotation grasses and for pasture. The produce in 1909 was 1,754,321 bushels of wheat (40·23 per acre), 8,006,192 barley (49·09), 55,711,393 oats (53·79); 3,202,819 tons of potatoes (5·52 per acre), 4,970,039 turnips, &c. (17·95); 1,473,807 tons of hay (1·77) from clover, &c., and 3,102,370 (2·14) from permanent pasture. The live stock included 528,806 horses, 4,699,564 cattle, 4,133,358 sheep, 1,149,179 pigs; and in 1908 246,286 goats and 24,031,095 poultry.

Industries.—In addition to agriculture and pasture, linen and shipbuilding are the principal industries in the north-east, sea fishing throughout the coast districts, distilling and brewing in many of the large towns, and cloth and lace locally. The western districts are being developed by the opening up of communication. Bee-keeping is rapidly gaining ground.

The total value of fish landed in 1909 was £363,801, the quantities being 993,083 cwt. (including 330,724 cwt. mackerel and 517,262 cwt. herrings), exclusive of salmon and shell-fish.

Religion.—The prevailing religion is Roman Catholic, 3,308,661, or 74·21 per cent. of the population, professing that form of faith, there being also 581,089 Protestant Episcopalians, 443,276 Presbyterians, and 62,006 Methodists. Until the year 1871 the Established Church was a branch of that of England, with two archbishops and ten bishops, although the members of this communion were but 12 per cent.—9 per cent. of the remaining Protestants being Presbyterians.

Education.—Ireland has three universities, a large number of endowed secondary schools, and an admirable system of primary schools under the National School Commissioners. There is also a Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction. In 1909 there were 8,401 Primary Schools in operation, with 679,235 pupils on the rolls and 12,842 principal and assistant teachers; there were also 7 Training Colleges, with 539 men and 665 women students resident. The total expenditure by the Commissioners from grants and rates was £1,688,649 in 1909–10.

ROYAL IRISH CONSTABULARY.
Headquarters, Dublin Castle—£1,385,767.

The Royal Irish Constabulary, then styled "the Constabulary of Ireland," was formed in 1836 by the consolidation of the "Barony Constables" and the "Peace Preservation Police." The force is armed with rifle, sword, and pistol. Its duties are varied, and military as well as police work has often to be undertaken. In 1867, by Her late Majesty's command, the title of the force was changed from the Constabulary of Ireland to Royal Irish Constabulary, in special recognition of the splendid services rendered in the past, and in particular during the Fenian outbreaks of that year. Officers and men alike have given repeated proofs of conspicuous courage and daring, and of exceptional moderation under the most trying circumstances. Approximate strength of the force 1910-11:—239 Head Constables, 1,702 Sergeants, 375 Acting Sergeants, and 8,273 Constables; total, 10,489.

THE ISLE OF MAN AND THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

ISLE OF MAN (MONA),

an island in the Irish Sea, in lat. 54° 3′—54° 25′ N. and long. 4° 18′ - 4° 47′ W., nearly equidistant from England, Scotland, and Ireland. It is about 34 miles long, and from 10 to 12 broad, containing an area of 145,325 acres, with a population of 55,598. In the ninth century a body of malcontents from Norway emigrated to the western isles of Scotland, and their prosperity drew upon them the anger of the Norwegian monarch Harold, who in the year 870 sent forth a great expedition and conquered the Orkneys and the Shetlands, the Western isles, and Man. For three centuries the Norwegian rule remained intact, but when, in 1263, Alexander III. defeated the famous Haco, at the battle of Largs, all these islands fell under Scottish rule. On his accession to the English throne, Henry IV. seized on the Isle of Man, and in 1406 bestowed it on the Stanley family. In 1736 James, 10th Earl of Derby, died without issue male; the earldom went to his next male heir, but the sovereignty of the island went, with the Barony of Strange, to his heir-general, James, Duke of Athole, on whose death the island descended to his daughter Charlotte, from whom, in 1765, Parliament purchased the sovereignty for £70,000. In 1827 the Crown purchased it for the sum of £417,144. The land is rich in minerals, lead, iron, blende, and slate, and exports large quantities of agricultural produce. About 50 miles of railway have been constructed, and about 23 miles of electric tram roads. The natives of this island belong to a mingled race of Celts and Norwegians, and the language, in which the Celtic element is predominant, is known as the Manx.

Man is governed by an independent Legislature called the Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Governor and Council, and the House of Keys. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. Unless signed by the legal quorum of each House a Bill is not sent for the Royal Assent, the quorum of the Upper House or Council being the Governor and two Members, and of the Lower House or Keys thirteen Members, the majority of the whole number (24). After receiving the Royal Assent, it does not become law until promulgated in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys.

CAPITAL: Douglas, pop. 19,223 (Castletown, pop. 1,963, is the ancient capital); the other towns are Peel, pop. 3,306, and Ramsey, pop. 4,729.

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

comprise the bailiwicks of Jersey (including the Minquiers and Ecréhou Rocks) and Guernsey (in the latter of which are comprehended the small islands of Alderney, Sark, and Herm), situated off the north-west coast of France, at distances of from ten to thirty miles. They are the only portions of the Dukedom of Normandy now belonging to England, to which they have been attached ever since the Conquest. The area altogether is about 73 square miles; and the population in 1901 was 95,841—Jersey, 52,796, Guernsey, with Herm and Jetou, 40,328, Alderney, 2,054, and Sark, 506. The land under cultivation in Jersey amounted in 1910 to 59,703 vergées (2¼ vergées = 1 acre), and in Guernsey (1904) 11,071 acres, the principal product of the soil of Jersey being potatoes and wheat, and in Guernsey green crops and oats. There were 2,218 horses, 12,022 cattle, 180 sheep, and 4,600 pigs in Jersey in 1910; in Guernsey (1904), 1,439 horses, 6,528 cattle, 209 sheep, and 5,099 pigs. The famous Jersey and Guernsey breed of cows has earned a well-deserved celebrity. The principal officer in each island is the Lieut.-Governor, who represents His Majesty. French is the official language of the local legislatures, called the States, and of the Royal Court, and the old Norman dialect is still spoken by the people, but English is now permissible in the legislative assembly. The Bailiff, appointed by the Crown, presides over the States and over the Royal Court or judicial body. The climate of these islands is mild, and the soil exceptionally productive. The islands being all but exempt from imperial taxation, they possess a very large trade. The chief town of Jersey is St. Helier, on the south side, where there is excellent sea-bathing; the principal town of Guernsey is St. Pierre, on the east coast.

THE CITY OF LONDON.

LONDON was a place of importance under the mans, and was famed for its vast conflux of aders and its abundant commerce even in the st century of the Christian era. From the Romans is said it received municipal institutions, which ve endured in their main features to the esent day. In Saxon times it was in reality a all independent State, and its burgesses main- ned their independence even after the Battle Hastings. William the Norman only gained ssession of their city by means of a treaty with m; and about eight years after he granted a arter, which is still preserved. It is addressed William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve, d all the Burgesses, and promises that they ll be "law worthy" (i.e., possessed of privi- es) as they were in the days of Edward the nfessor. The Portreeve, however, received the rman title of Bailiff, which, in 1191, was anged to Mayor; the first holder under the w name being Henry Fitzalwyn, who filled the ce for 24 years. On his death a new charter s granted by King John in 1214, which directed Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever ce been done, though in early times the same ividual often held the office more than once. familiar instance is that of "Whittington, ice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality, four nes, A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1419); and modern es occur with Alderman Wood, 1815, 1816; Sir m Key, 1830, 1831; Alderman Cubitt, 1860, 1; and Alderman Sir R. N. Fowler, 1883, 1885. e title of Lord Mayor is said to have been first towed in 1354 on Sir Thomas Legge, by ward III.

Aldermen were first appointed by a charter of nry III. in 1242, and were elected annually tween 1377 and 1394, when a charter of hard II. directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council was at an early date substituted for a popular assembly called the Folkmote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 16 members, and none less than four. Sheriffs (as well as aldermen) were Saxon officers, who usually had charge of a large district. The time of their appointment for London is uncertain, but they appear in ancient records as early as A.D. 1130. At first they were only the officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but King John gave them, in the first year of his reign, permission to choose their own Sheriffs. The citizens, however, lost this privilege, as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned, by the Local Government Act, 1888, but they continue as heretofore to choose the Sheriffs of the City of London. They are appointed on Midsummer Day, and enter on office at Michaelmas, on which day the Lord Mayor is elected. He is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, to take the final declaration of office—the pageant, conducted with some degree of civic state, being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show. The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is an ancient officer. There were at one time 2 Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circ. 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk (called Common Clerk) and Common Serjeant (now appointed by the Crown) are mentioned as officers in the charter of Edward II., A.D. 1319, but the offices can be traced to a much earlier date than this.

* The above is abstracted from the 277th "City's Cash Account" of the series extant—A.D. 1633 to 1909. (The Accounts earlier than A.D. 1633 were believed to have been destroyed in the Fire of London; but two years' Accounts, temp. Queen Elizabeth, have been recently discovered among the Corporation Archives, as exceptions to that belief.) The Volumes are in full detail, signed by the Auditors, and in perfect preservation. The extract is from the 126th Annual Printed Account of the Corporation, A.D. 1784 to 1909. The Accounts are prepared and stated as directed by Resolutions of the Court of Common Council of the 5th June, 1903, and the 14th December, 1905, upon Reports of the Coal and Corn and Finance Committee, and they are printed in conformity with the 76th Standing Order of the Court of Common Council. The Accounts are issued in the form prescribed by those Orders, and show the Income and Expenditure applicable to the year on the various Funds.

The next triennial election takes place in March, 1913.

THE London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888. London is an administrative county, covering an area of 121 square miles, with boundaries conterminous with those of the area over which, prior to 1889, the Metropolitan Board of Works exercised jurisdiction under the Metropolis Management Act of 1855, except that under the London Government Act, 1899, there was some rearrangement of the county boundaries, the principal being that Penge was taken out of and South Hornsey was added to London.

The City of London is an electoral division of the county, and was not much affected by the Act. The County of the City of London is a county for non-administrative purposes, such as quarter sessions, justices, &c.; and the Metropolis outside the City is a county for non-administrative purposes, by name the County of London, in which the justices continue their judicial duties.

The Council comprises a chairman, 19 aldermen, and 118 councillors, together 138, or, if the chairman be also an elected member or alderman (as at present), 137. The term of office for aldermen is 6 years, and 10 or 9 retire every 3 years. The councillors are elected for 3 years, and will all retire in March, 1913, the eighth council having been elected in March, 1910. The councillors are elected directly by the ratepayers, and the councillors elect the aldermen. The positions of aldermen and councillors are the same, except as to the term of office. The first meeting of the London County Council was held on the 21st March, 1889, under the presidency of Lord Rosebery.

The result of the 1910 election was an almost equal division of parties, so far as the elected representatives are concerned, but including the aldermen the Municipal Reform party have a small majority.

The powers, duties, and liabilities of the Council include the following: First, those formerly belonging to the Metropolitan Board of Works in connection with the raising and loaning of money, and the sanctioning of loans required by the councils of the metropolitan boroughs; main drainage, and the sanctioning of local sewers; fire brigade; parks and open spaces; works for prevention of floods by the Thames; Thames crossings (bridges, tunnels, and ferry); street improvements; controlling the width of new streets, the building line, and the naming and numbering of streets; supervising buildings and district surveyors; dangerous structures; structure of theatres and music-halls; artizans' dwellings; cattle diseases; explosive substances and petroleum storage; infant life protection; gas, gas-meter, and electric-meter testing; tramways, &c. Secondly, those transferred from former county justices in connection with the granting of music and dancing licences; provision of asylums for pauper lunatics, and of reformatory and industrial schools, the duties with regard to the latter, however, being now discharged by the Council under its powers as Education authority; testing weights and measures; county buildings; coroners; and other minor matters. Thirdly, powers transferred from various authorities with regard to highways; licensing of houses or places for the performance of stage-plays beyond the limits of the Lord Chamberlain's authority; licensing of slaughter-houses and of cow-houses; and the supervision of common lodging-houses. Fourthly, new powers with respect to registration of electors; public health; historic buildings and monuments; inspection of factories and certain other buildings to secure means of escape from fire; suppression of nuisances; regulation of overhead wires; the administration of the Shop Hours and Shop Seats Acts, the Children Act, and the Midwives Act; reformatories for inebriates; the licensing and inspection of employment agencies; the registration of motor cars; and the collection of duties on dog and establishment and certain other licences. Under the Education (London) Act, 1903, the Council became the authority for all public education in the county, both elementary and higher. As the central representative body in London, the Council also interests itself in the thousand and one things affecting the welfare of the people of London as a whole, and has delegates on the Metropolitan Water Board and numerous other boards, charities, &c.

The Council entrusts many of its duties to committees, who not only administer most of the executive duties which fall upon the Council, but also prepare and submit for the consideration of the Council schemes and proposals. The Finance Committee have important statutory powers. No costs, debt or liability exceeding £50 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee. The Council is the principal money-raising body for all the local authorities in the county, and has a gross debt, according to the latest returns, of about £83,235,000, a Sinking Fund of £31,918,000, and an annual expenditure, including loans advanced to other bodies, of about fifteen millions, of which about six millions are expended on education. The Council has recently revised its standing orders relating to expenditure with a view to strengthening its control. The Asylums Committee have special powers under the Lunacy Acts, and manage Hanwell, Colney Hatch, Banstead, Canehill, Claybury, Bexley, and Horton Asylums. On the Horton estate a working colony for epileptic patients has been established. Accommodation is provided in the London County asylums for nearly 20,000 patients. The Housing of the Working Classes Committee perform the duties cast upon the Council by the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, including the clearance of insanitary areas and the building of working-class dwellings. The Council has quite recently decided to clear a large insanitary area at Tabard Street, Southwark, and two smaller areas close by, at an estimated cost of £473,300. The total accommodation provided by the Council up to 31st March, 1910, comprised 2,111 cottages, 6,428 tenements in block dwellings, and 1,846 cubicles in three lodging houses. The total capital outlay was £2,792,855. It is the aim of the Council to make its working-class dwellings self-supporting, and in this, taking all the dwellings as a whole, it has succeeded, but there is a charge on the rates in respect of estates in course of development.

The Improvements Committee are responsible for the carrying out of street improvements and the construction and maintenance of bridges utside the City of London) and tunnels across e river Thames. The largest improvements rried out in recent years are the new street etween Holborn and the Strand, now known as ingsway and Aldwych; a new tunnel under e Thames at Rotherhithe; and an extensive nprovement at Westminster, including a new nbankment of the Thames between the Houses Parliament and Lambeth Bridge. This imrovement is nearing completion, and the mmittee have in hand several smaller imrovements.

The Fire Brigade, directed by the Fire Brigade ommittee, has been much increased since the ouncil came into existence: the authorised fire aff now numbers over 1,360 men; several new ations are being built, while old stations are ing improved and enlarged, and the equipent improved by the addition of motor appliices. Perhaps the most popular work of the ouncil is that connected with its parks and pen spaces. Amongst the latest additions to ese open spaces in and around London are arble Hill, Twickenham (to preserve the view om Richmond Hill), Avery Hill, Eltham, Hainult Forest, Essex, Springfield Park, Clapton, d Ruskin Park, Denmark Hill. The annual penditure on the maintenance of parks d open spaces (over 5,100 acres) is about ,140,000.

The disposal of sewage is the work of the Main rainage Committee. The metropolitan main rainage system covers about 140 square miles, cluding certain districts outside the county, and mprises 290 miles of main, storm-relief, interpting and outfall sewers, eleven pumping staons, two sewage precipitation stations, and six dge vessels. The sewage is conveyed to the utfalls at Barking and Crossness, and there the olid matters held in suspension are precipitated, he harmless effluent being allowed to flow into he river, while the sludge is taken out to sea. he total quantity of sewage treated at the outalls in the course of a year amounts to over 00,000 million gallons. A comprehensive scheme or enlarging the main drainage system was dopted by the Council in 1900, and this was mplemented in 1904 by a scheme of extensive ood relief works. These works are already well n hand. The total capital outlay on main rainage up to 31st March, 1910, was £11,623,979.

In previous Almanacks particulars have been iven of the purchase by the Council of the most mportant tramway systems within the county. he Council is now in possession of all the tramays in London with the exception of a few iles of lines in the north-west. On 31st March, 910, the system extended over 135½ street iles, being 115½ miles of electric lines (mostly nderground conduit) and 20 miles of horse nes. The latter are being rapidly reconstructed or electric traction. Practically the whole of his great system is worked by the Council. The otal capital outlay on tramways amounted, on 1st March last, to £10,709,504, and the net debt utstanding to £8,899,999. A report recently resented to the Council on the results of the ear 1909–10 showed gross receipts of £2,023,003, surplus on working of £789,036 (surplus on lectric lines £834,208, less deficiency on horse nes £45,172), and a net surplus, after payment f interest on capital outlay and providing for epayment of debt, of £192,109, of which £132,230 was carried to the renewals fund, and the balance to General Reserve. 43,160,186 car-miles were run and 451,439,216 passengers were carried during the year. This department of the Council's work is directed by the Highways Committee.

The Education Committee comprises thirty-eight members of the Council and twelve co-opted members. Names of these members will be found under the Alphabetical List of Councillors. The Council is responsible for the education of about 730,000 children in elementary schools, and is doing much to improve the supply of secondary and technical education in London and the provision of training colleges for teachers. The estimates of expenditure on rate account for education for the year 1910–11 amount to £5,721,339, of which £4,748,433 is for elementary and £972,906 is for higher education, which now includes evening schools as well as secondary schools, training colleges, polytechnics, and technical institutes. The charge falling on the rates, after deducting grants and other receipts in aid, is £3,785,576, necessitating a rate of 1s. 8¼d. in the pound—an increase of ½d. in the pound upon the rate for 1909–10.

The Local Pensions Committee, appointed under the provisions of the Old Age Pensions Act, is composed of twenty-one members of the Council and twelve persons appointed by the Council.

The expenditure of the Council is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by the issue of Stock, and current income raised in a county rate. Certain contributions, including education grants, are also received from the Imperial Exchequer. The capital disbursements for the year ended 31st March, 1910, amounted in round figures to £2,694,000, including improvements (streets, bridges, and tunnels), £364,000; housing of the working classes, £119,000; main drainage, £373,000; fire brigade, £31,000; parks and open spaces, £114,000; lunatic asylums, £36,000; tramways, £1,226,000; new county hall, £151,000; and education, £376,000. The maintenance of these works and services, the sinking fund to pay off debt, and the interest on the debt, together with all recurring disbursements of every kind, are paid out of rates, or, in the case of tramways and working-class dwellings, out of receipts. Some idea of the nature and amount of the expenditure on rate account will be gathered from the statement on the next page.

The last issue of London County Consolidated Stock made by the Council was that of £2,250,000 in May, 1909, carrying interest at the rate of 3½ per cent., the Stock being issued at £102 per £100 of stock. All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund, under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure within a period of 60 years. The total Stock now outstanding amounts to about £73,500,000, out of total issues of £77,856,011.

The rating for the year 1910–11 amounts to 2s. 11d. in the pound over the whole county, including the City, and a further rate over the county outside the City of 2¼d. in the pound, together 3s. 1¼d. This includes 1s. 8¼d. for education. The assessable value of the County of London on 6th April, 1910, was £44,864,000—a 1d. rate over the whole county producing £186,900.

The following is a summary of the estimates of the amount to be raised by county rate for the year to 31st March, 1911, prepared at the beginning of the year. These figures do not include the receipts and expenses on account of the revenue-producing undertakings (tramways, working-class dwellings, &c.):—

LONDON POLICE.

THE CITY POLICE district comprises an area of 673 statute acres, and contains two courts of justice, those of the Guildhall and Mansion House, where the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen are the magistrates (see p. 206). Although the area is comparatively small, the rateable value is enormous, and there are 26,923 night residents to be protected.

The Force comprises 1 Assistant Commissioner, 3 Superintendents, 5 Chief Inspectors, 23 Inspectors, 23 Sub-Inspectors, 96 Sergeants, and 1,029 Constables; also 1 Sergeant and 49 Constables on private service duty.

The METROPOLITAN POLICE district embraces an area of 447,626 statute acres, with a population of between seven and eight millions. There are within this area sixteen Police Courts, viz., Bow Street, Clerkenwell, East Ham, Greenwich, Lambeth, Marlborough St., Marylebone, North London (Stoke Newington Rd.), Old Street, South Western (Lavender Hill), Thames (Stepney), Tower Bridge, West Ham, West London (Vernon Street), Westminster, and Woolwich (see p. 206).

The force on Oct. 16, 1910, consisted of 3[illegible] Superintendents, 603 Inspectors, 2,544 Sergeants, and 16,034 Constables, making a total of 19,213, with 286 horses.

It is scarcely possible to form an accurate estimate of the enormous actual value of the property under police protection, but the mean rateable value of the metropolitan area for Metropolitan Police purposes for the year 1909–10 was £55,217,933.

LONDON FIRE BRIGADE.

PREVIOUS to the formation of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, under an Act passed in 1774, the churchwardens and overseers of every parish had been compelled to maintain an engine for putting out all fires occurring within their own boundaries; though, independently of this provision, for more than thirty years before 1866 the leading fire insurance companies had jointly organised and worked a fire-engine establishment of their own. On 1st January, 1866, the Metropolitan Board of Works took over these responsibilities. On 1st January, 1867, the Board also took over from the Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire (founded 1844) the service of the saving of life from fire. By the passing of the Local Government Act, 1888, the London County Council assumed control of the Fire Brigade. In 1904 the title of the Brigade was altered from "Metropolitan Fire Brigade" to "London Fire Brigade." The total amount expended on the Brigade for the year ended 31st March, 1910, was £304,446. Of this amount the Treasury and the various insurance companies contributed £46,999.

On 31st March, 1910, the complement of the Brigade consisted of:—1 chief officer; 2 divisional officers; 2 assistant divisional officers; and 1,356 officers, firemen, coachmen, and pilots. There were 81 land fire-stations, 3 river stations; and the appliances included 75 horsed fire-engines, 76 horsed fire-escapes, 8 motor fire-engines, 10 motor fire-escapes, 5 motor hose-tenders, 6 turntable long ladders, 29 long ladders, 23 smoke helmets, 90 hose-carts, 2 fire-floats and 4 steam fire-engines on rafts, 4 oil-tank wagons, 4 motor cars. There were 315 horses and 53 miles of hose in use by the Brigade. The fire-alarms distributed over London numbered 1,320. The number of calls to which the Brigade responded during the year ended 31st December, 1909, totalled 5,233, and the fires numbered 3,197, of which 62 were classed as "serious."

PRINCIPAL OFFICERS.

Chief Officer, Lieut. Sampson Sladen, R.N. (with certain allowances) £900
Divisional Officers, Sidney G. Gamble, C.E. Arthur R. Dyer.
Assistant Divisional Officers, Cyril C. B. Morris, Lieut. H. Spencer, R.N.

METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD.

Chairman, E. B. Barnard, J.P. ..... †
Vice-Chairman, G. S. Elliott, J.P. ..... unp.
Clerk of the Board, A. B. Pilling £1,750
Assist. do., W. J. G. Norris £600
Supervisor, F. W. Drake £700
Solicitor, W. Moon £1,000
Chief Engineer, W. B. Bryan £2,500
Depy. do., J. W. Restler £1,827
Accountant and Registrar, A. Newton ... £1,000
Depy. do., D. P. Hutchings £600
Chief Revenue Officer, J. Wilson £618
Director of Water Examinations, Dr. A. C. Houston £1,100

The Metropolitan Water Board was created in 1902, and came into existence in 1903, the duties of the Board being to supply water to the districts previously supplied, or authorised to be supplied, by the various authorities superseded. The area of the Board is 537 square miles, with a population of 7,108,504 in 1910. The total amount of water supplied during the year 1909–10 was 82,365,791,471 gallons. The charge for domestic purposes is 5 per cent. on the rateable value. The sources of supply are four in number, namely, (1) the river Thames and Lee; (2) gravel beds adjoining the main stream of the Thames and other gravel beds at Hanworth; (3) natural springs; and (4) wells sunk in the chalk or other strata in the Lee Valley on the north of the Thames, in Kent and at certain other points south of the Thames. The Board consists of 66 members, nominated by the constituent authorities of the water area for three years ending 1st June, 1913, and meet on the Friday in each fourth week at Metropolitan Asylums Board Offices, Thames Embankment, E.C. Offices, Savoy Court, Strand, W.C.

† A sum of £500 per annum is voted to the Chairman to defray the cost of "official hospitality."

THE CITY COMPANIES, NUMBER OF LIVERYMEN, CORPORATE AND TRUST INCOMES, MASTERS, CLERKS, AND HALLS.

s will be seen from the following table, many he London Livery Companies are possessed of t wealth. Of some portion of the property are merely trustees, but of the "corporate" perty they are the sole owners, and may dis- of the income as they please. Fifteen of Companies have more than ten thousand ds a year, and most of them are very liberal heir charities, especially in the way of cation. In the majority of cases the desig- nation of the Company gives a clue to the trade which gave rise to the guild, but the Fletchers (arrow makers) and the Loriners (bridle, bit, and spur makers) are not self-explanatory. The following list is compiled from returns made (in many cases but partially) at the Editor's request. Where the return was incomplete the Editor allowed the old figures to remain. The order of precedence is given in parentheses after the name of each Company.

LONDON: PRINTED BY WILLIAM CLOWES AND SONS, LIMITED, DUKE STREET, STAMFORD STREET, S.E.

The Indian Empire extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia. Legally, "British India" means all territories governed by the King through the Governor-General of India, or through any officer subordinate to him; while "India" means British India, together with any territories of any native prince or chief under the suzerainty of His Majesty, exercised through the Governor-General of India or any officer subordinate to him (Act 52–3 Vict., c. 63, s. 18). There are tracts of tribal territory on the N.W. and N.E. frontiers under the political influence, though not yet under the administrative rule, of the Indian Government; and within the Indian sphere of influence lie the self-governed States of Afghanistan, Nepal, and Bhutan.

Boundaries and Area.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia from the Gulf of Oman to near Zulfikar on the Harirud; then with the Russian Empire along the frontier laid down by agreement in 1885 as far as the Oxus at Khamiab; thence along the Oxus by the Panjah branch up to the Victoria lake, and from the east end of that lake by the line demarcated in 1895 up to Povalo Schveikovski on the Taghdumbash Pamir, where three empires—the British, Russian, and Chinese—meet. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire, mainly along the crests of the Muztagh (Karakoram) and Himalayas, till the limits of French Indo-China are reached on the Upper Mekong. The Indian frontier, leaving the Mekong, marches with Siam till it reaches the sea at Victoria Point, half-way down the Malay peninsula. Beyond the sea the Indian Empire includes the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, the Laccadive Islands, Aden and Perim, besides protectorates over Socotra, Bahrein, and various chiefships along the coast from Aden to the Persian Gulf. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from 8° to 37° N. latitude, and from 61° to 101° E. longitude. Calcutta, the capital, lies in 88° E. long. The total area of India proper is about 1,767,000 square miles, of which 680,000 square miles are under native administration. The British Provinces comprise 61 per cent. of the area, and nearly 79 per cent. of the population, which in 1901 numbered 294,361,056. (For details, see pp. 507–8.)

Physical Features and Products.—Excluding Burma, which forms no part of the Indian peninsula, we may broadly divide the country into three sections, viz., the Himalayan region, the northern river-plains, and the southern table-land.

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a general height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,141 feet, Kunchinjunga, 28,146 feet, and Dhaulagiri, 26,826 feet, near the centre of the range; and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush Mountains. The line of perpetual snow is at about 16,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the plains below. The slopes afford a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the S.W. of the range), and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria, including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree-fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, deodar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet, and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk-deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, elephant, monkey, and tiger, with eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great fever-haunted Tarai or Duar jungle, densely forest-covered and full of big game.

The Great Plain.—The northern river-plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. Of these, two are on the north side—the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Tsan-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two, on the southern slope, are the Sutlej, which, after flowing W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams, joins the Indus; and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of about 1,550 miles, drains almost all the Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after flowing along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W., and finally joins the Ganges 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. The Indus and Ganges, with their tributaries, are the source of an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest, most populous, and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the fertiliser and the water-carrier. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. So rich is the Indo-Gangetic plain that it supports a population of about 50 millions, almost wholly agricultural. The density of the population is extremely high in this region, averaging in the Bengal delta 552 per square mile, and rising in a few districts to 900. The population has increased most in the densest areas, and pressure on the soil is severe in parts of Behar and the United Provinces. In Northern India there are two harvests, rabi (spring) crops being reaped in March and April, kharif (autumn) crops in October to December. In the north we find wheat, pulse, maize, millet, barley, and tea; while in the south, indigo, cotton, sugar-cane, jute, oilseeds, tobacco, opium, and spices are produced. Among the fauna are monkeys, panthers, tigers, leopards, hyenas, jackals, squirrels, elephants, deer, crocodiles, and snakes. Salt, mica, and coal are the chief minerals. The Ganges delta yields rice, bamboos, and a large variety of palms. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India Native States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Suleiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river-plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhyas. The Eastern and Western Ghauts all but complete this environing triangle of mountain ranges. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhyas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghauts, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapti flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghauts lie close to the coast, and afford no exit for rivers, there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapti; all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghauts, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanuddy, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavery (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Cauvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of Southern India has shaped its history: the S.W. coast, shut in by mountains, is very primitive and moves slowly; the S.E., open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress. The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghauts, which rise to 8,000 feet in the Nilgiris, are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests. Teak, ebony, satinwood, sandalwood, palm, and bamboo abound. The jungles in the E. are very deadly. The tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various smaller game afford sport. Snakes are found everywhere. In the valleys and on the higher plains many valuable crops are raised, chiefly rice, millet, cotton, oilseeds, coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco, and chinchona. The black cotton soil is very fertile. There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals. The southern table-land has furnished considerable supplies of minerals. At present the minerals principally worked are coal, manganese ore, mica, and gold.

Burma.—Beyond the Bay of Bengal is the large province of Burma, watered by the Irrawaddy and its tributaries and by the Salween. The delta region is flat; further inland are hill and rolling downs; while the north is mountainous. Rice is the chief staple. Millet, cotton, sesamum, and tobacco are also grown. The forests, particularly of teak, make a considerable contribution to the exports. Petroleum is produced in rapidly increasing quantities, and jade and rubies are mined. The fauna include monkeys, jackals, tigers, elephants, bison, and deer.

Climate.—About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N.W. In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold. In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold. In tropical Southern India the climate is more equable. Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea. India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon. The S.W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast early in June and the northern provinces late in June. The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rain, the fall, which averages 60 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, 30 inches in the Indo-Gangetic plain, and 30 inches in the Deccan, but is small in Sind and Rajputana. Madras benefits by the N.E. monsoon in the autumn.

The People of India.

Population.—The third general census of India was taken on the 1st March, 1901. The enumeration embraced the whole of the Indian Empire, except a few outlying tracts and certain disturbed areas on the frontier. The final census returns gave a population of 294,361,056, as compared with 287,314,671 in 1891 (for details see p. 508). Deducting for purposes of comparison the population of tracts not enumerated in 1891, the increase in the ten years is only about 1½ per cent., as compared with an increase of over 11 per cent. in the previous decade. These statistics show that long-continued famine in Western India, combined with an abnormal prevalence of cholera, plague, and other diseases, had, during the decade, seriously enhanced mortality. The census total of 1901 is divisible into 231,899,507 (or 79 per cent.) for British India, and 62,461,549 (or 21 per cent.) for Native States. India is not over-populated, for two-thirds of the people live on one-quarter of the area. In Burma, Assam, and elsewhere a much larger population might subsist.

Languages.—India has 147 vernacular languages, of extraordinary variety. The languages spoken by 292,563,771 persons in India are grouped in three families; and twenty-three languages belonging to these families are spoken by not less than one million persons each. The principal languages are Hindi (spoken by 60,354,137 persons), Bengali (44,624,048), Bihari (37,076,990), Telugu (20,696,872), Marathi (18,237,899), Panjabi (17,070,961), and Tamil (16,525,500), after which come Rajasthani, Kanarese, Gujarati, Oriya, Burmese, and Malayalam. Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi, has become the literary language of Hindustan, and is the lingua franca of India. English is understood by many.

Religions.—The population by religions includes 207,147,026 Hindus (70 per cent. of the total), 62,458,077 Muhammadans (21 per cent.), 9,476,759 Buddhists (3 per cent.), nearly all in Burma, leaving 6 per cent. for all other religions, including 2,923,241 Christians (two-thirds of whom are in Madras and Travancore), 2,195,339 Sikhs, 1,334,148 Jains, 94,190 Parsis, and 8,584,148 described as Animists, who believe in magic and strive to propitiate impersonal forces. The Muhammadans, who are increasing faster than the Hindus, are infected with the caste system and other Hindu characteristics. Christian converts come mainly from the more degraded classes in Bengal and Madras.

Large Towns.—Tables below show the populations of the chief towns and the distribution of the people by occupations. There are 28 towns with a population of over 100,000, and 49 with 50,000 to 100,000. The urban areas of over 5,000 people comprise less than 10 per cent. of the total population.

Occupations.—About two-thirds of the population depend on agriculture. The cotton industry supports over 7,500,000 persons, more than two-thirds of whom depend on handweaving. There are 5,500,000 persons in Government service, civil or military.

Sex.—Marriage is almost universal owing to religious obligations. Infant marriage and enforced widowhood are extending through Brahmanical influence and notions of social distinction. There are nearly 26,000,000 widows in India. The males outnumber the females in the proportion of 1,000 to 963.

A Brief Sketch of Indian History.

ALEXANDER'S invasion of India (326 B.C.) is the first landmark of Indian history. A dim outline of earlier events can be traced from the evidences of race and language, from the traditions contained in ancient Indian literature, from accounts of later Greek and Chinese writers, and from coins and inscriptions. The oldest Indian books are supposed to date from about 1500 B.C.; they are written in Sanskrit, a language akin to Persian and to the principal European languages. The people who wrote these books were Aryans, a race which, as their traditions indicate, came into India from north of the Hindu Kush. They found in India, and conquered, a population of yellow-skinned type in the Himalayan districts, and a short, dark-skinned race, of low civilisation, in the rest of India. Of both these types there are still survivals. The religion and metaphysics of the Aryans are to be found in the Vedas and Upanishads; their epics, the Mahabhárata and Rámáyana, extol their mythical heroes; while in the Code of Manu we find a picture of Indian society, rather as the priestly caste of the day wished it to exist, than as it actually then existed. The ascendency of the Brahman priesthood over the soldier class of Kshetriyas is represented as fully established. The system of caste, originating in the attitude of the Aryas (kinsmen) to the dark and servile aborigines, generally prevails, and the people are organised in village communities. In the sixth century B.C. a new religion arose, called Buddhism. Its founder was Gautáma, a prince of the Kshetriya caste, who took the name of Buddha, the "awakened," and died about 487 B.C. His supposed remains were discovered near Peshawar in 1909. His tenets are contained in the Tripitaka, the Buddhist gospel. Buddhism was, in India itself, mainly a social reform, a revolt against the pride of caste and the exclusiveness of the Brahman priesthood. It prevailed widely from 250 B.C. to 350 A.D., but was never quite general, and existed side by side with Brahmanism, which it never succeeded in ousting. At length it lost ground, less through persecution than through a change in popular feeling; and before the twelfth century it had become practically extinct in India itself, though it still flourishes not only in Siam, China, and Japan, but also in Nepal, Burma, and Ceylon. Its decline in India was accompanied by a revival of Brahmanism, much modified. A branch of Buddhism, however, or a survival of a kindred creed, continues to exist in India in the distinct sect of the Jains. The followers of this creed, which flourished most from about 950–1300 A.D., are still numerous in Gujarat, and are also found in other parts of India.

According to Herodotus the twentieth satrapy of Persia at one time included part of the north-west of India. Alexander (326 B.C.) did not penetrate beyond the tributaries of the Indus, though he sailed down the river. At his death his Indian possessions fell to Seleucus, whose ambassador, Megasthenes (306 B.C.), has left an account of the country under the rule of Chandragupta, the Greek Sandracottus. Megasthenes describes the democratic village communities of the Punjab, and speaks of the people as brave and truthful, and averse to litigation, and of the women as chaste; and he notes the absence of slavery. Asoka (272–231 B.C.), the grandson of Chandragupta, whose edicts on stone pillars throw light upon this period, was a convert to, and a great patron of Buddhism, which became the State religion. Our last contributors to a knowledge of India before the period of continuous authentic history are the Buddhist pilgrims from China, who visited the country between 399 and 695 A.D.

The influence of the Greek conquest was swept away by the Scythians, who poured in many waves, between about 165 B.C. and 320 A.D., over Northern India. Their inroads left a lasting influence on the character of the population, and profoundly modified the religious beliefs and domestic institutions of the Hindus. The sixth century was a period of confusion. The emperor Harsha (606–648), after many years of fighting, which made him master of Northern India, ended his reign in piety and peace. From about 650 to 950 anarchy prevailed.

The Arab conquest of Persia, towards the middle of the seventh century, brought the successors of Muhammad to the Indus, and in N.W. India they made some temporary acquisitions; but three centuries were to pass before the foundations of a durable Muhammadan empire were laid. It was in 999 that Mahmud of Ghazni (in Afghanistan) began a long series of incursions into India, no fewer than fifteen expeditions taking place between 999 and 1027, one of which carried him beyond the Jumna, while another ended in the capture of Somnath, in Kathiawar. The succeeding dynasties of Afghan kings held power in India for 500 years; but the advance of their power was gradual, for it was not till 1206 that Delhi was taken and the greater part of Hindustan annexed by Kutb-ud-din, whose memory is perpetuated by the Kutb Minar, near Delhi. The first Muhammadan invasion of the Deccan took place in 1294.

THE MOGUL EMPIRE.—The Muhammadan Mongols, or Moguls, after overrunning Central and Western Asia, arrived in 1219, under Genghis Khan, on the frontiers of India, but did not cross the Indus. During the reign of the last monarch of the Taghlak line, the famous Tamerlane (or Timur) burst into India at the head of a mighty host, captured and sacked Delhi in 1398, and laid waste a great part of Hindustan. A period of weak dynasties followed; frequent invasions from without, and general misrule and anarchy within, paved the way for larger conquests by the Mogul Emperors. In 1526 Babar, a direct descendant of Timur, overthrew the last of the Afghan kings at Panipat, and founded the MOGUL EMPIRE, which at his death extended from the Oxus river in Central Asia to the borders of the Gangetic delta. His son, Humayun (1530-56), lost the whole of the territory conquered by Babar, but recovered a portion of it (including Delhi) shortly before his death. His victor was Sher Shah Sur, who reigned from 1540–1545. Akbar the Great, Humayun's son (1556-1605), spent a long reign in firmly establishing the empire; at his death his dominions extended over Kabul, Kandahar, and all India north of the Nerbudda. Moreover, of the Muhammadan kingdoms of the Deccan, Ahmednagar, Berar and Bidar were absorbed, and Bijapur and Golconda forced to pay tribute. Akbar followed up his conquests by important financial reforms; he was tolerant in religion, and just to all classes of his subjects. Among the great men of his time were the Hindu, Todar Mall, his able finance minister; Abul Fazl, the historian of his reign; and Faiz, the poet. Bairam Khan, Akbar's faithful guardian in his youth, revolted when the young king seized the reins of power, but was pardoned. Jahangir (1605–27) received in 1616 Sir Thomas Roe, the ambassador of James I. His empress was the famous Nur Jahan. Under Shah Jahan (1627–1658) the Mogul Empire reached the zenith of its glory. Many public works and grand buildings, including the Taj Mahal at Agra, testify to his magnificence and taste. The close of Shah Jahan's reign was embittered by the rivalries of his four sons. Aurangzeb (1658–1707) defeated and killed his brothers and kept his father a prisoner till death (1666). Aurangzeb had great ability and courage, but religious intolerance, distrust and dissimulation characterised his chequered career. His reign, in some respects splendid, ended in failure. He brought the Mogul Empire to its greatest extent by conquering and incorporating all India as far south as Tanjore. But from this time the decline of the empire began. Four sons disputed the right of succession, and Bahadur Shah (1707–12) gained the coveted crown. After four short-lived emperors Muhammad Shah (1719–48), grandson of Bahadur, came to the throne. His viceroys became rebellious, and so contributed to the success of the Mahrattas, who subdued the Deccan. About 1724 part of the Deccan became practically independent under Nizam-ul-Mulk (ancestor of the present Nizam). In 1738, to avenge an alleged insult, Nadir Shah of Persia invaded India, captured Delhi, gave orders for a general slaughter of the inhabitants, and carried off enormous plunder. All the country west of the Indus was lost to the empire. On the death of Muhammad, the phantom rulers, Ahmad Shah (1748–1754) and Alamgir II. (1754–1759), occupied the throne, and were succeeded by Shah Alam (1759–1806), who came to terms with the British.

THE MAHRATTAS.—As the Moguls declined, the power of the Mahrattas increased. They were Hindus, and their country was in the Western Ghats, to the east of Bombay. The founder of their power was Sivaji (1627–1680), a chieftain of the family of Bhonsla, who became famous by his raids in the Deccan, and aimed at founding a Hindu kingdom. Balaji Vishvanath (1712–1720), Peishwa, or Prime Minister, succeeded in making that office of paramount importance and hereditary in his family, Sivaji's descendants thenceforth holding a merely nominal position. Under the Peishwas, aided by Scindia, Holkar, and the Gaekwar, who formed independent States about this time, the Mahrattas rapidly extended their territory and influence, conquering Gujarat, Malwa, Berar, and Orissa. Although they were severely defeated at Panipat in 1761 by Ahmad Shah, the Afghan invader, they remained for some time the first power in India, and were the most dangerous opponents of the English. Too often their rule degenerated into a system of organised plunder. With the Pindaris, a horde of freebooters who followed in their train, they became a scourge to the country. It was not until both Pindaris and Mahrattas were finally overthrown in 1818 that India enjoyed the blessings of internal peace. The Mahratta empire, containing within itself the seeds of disintegration, was fated to bend before the superior sway of Europeans, who, at first attracted by love of adventure or hopes of gain, had gradually extended their power in India.

THE SIKHS.—The Punjab lay beyond the reach of the Mahrattas. There the decay of the Mogul empire gave the opportunity, not to a nation, but to a religious sect, united by military discipline, to establish territorial dominion. The founder of the Sikh religion was Nanak Shah, a Hindu reformer, born near Lahore in 1469. He preached the one God, purity of life, and abolition of caste. He had ten successors, named gurus or apostles, ending with Govind Singh (1708). The sect, though cruelly persecuted, survived, and gradually adopted a political organisation. It became a power under Ranjit Singh (1780–1839), who, revolting against the Afghan Amir, by whom he had been appointed Governor of Lahore, founded the kingdom of the Punjab. The powerful army he had organised brought on the collision which he himself had carefully avoided, and after two wars with the British the Sikh kingdom was annexed, and became the province of the Punjab (1849).

EUROPEAN ADVENTURE.—From time immemorial the lucrative trade of Europe with India and the farther East has enormously enriched in turn each nation that has held it. In the 15th century it was mainly possessed by the Venetians on the European side, and by the Arabs on the Eastern side. The chief trading centres of the Arabs were Calicut, Ormuz, Aden, and Malacca. Seeing the large profits to be derived from this trade, the rising nations of Europe in the 15th century sought to obtain a share. Hence the ardour of the navigators who set out to discover an ocean route to India. The sea route round the Cape of Good Hope was discovered by Vasco da Gama, who anchored before Calicut in May, 1498. From that time until they lost their naval supremacy, a century later, the Portuguese enjoyed practically a monopoly of Indian trade. The first Portuguese viceroy, Francis of Almeida (1505–1509), established numerous factories and fortresses; while his successor, Alfonso de Albuquerque, captured Goa (1510), and extended the Portuguese dominion, notably on the Malabar coast. This dominion for 60 years from 1542 was tantamount to an entire regulation of the Asiatic coast trade with Europe from the Persian Gulf to Japan. It was stained by great cruelty. When the crowns of Spain and Portugal were united in 1580 under Philip II., the Asiatic interests of Portugal were subordinated to the European interests of Spain, and the decline of Portuguese power in Asia was rapid. Till then the Portuguese brought Indian products to Lisbon, whence the Dutch carried them to other ports of Europe. But when Philip II., on account of the Dutch revolt, shut Lisbon against them, the Dutch were driven to trade directly with the East. In 1602 they formed "The Dutch East India Company" by amalgamating previously existing trading companies, and the principal Portuguese settlements in the East were gradually captured. By 1661 the Portuguese held only those remnants of their Indian possessions which they still hold. The Dutch occupied the Cape as a halfway station. After a time they firmly established themselves in Java and the neighbouring coasts and islands, but were forced by the British to relax their hold on India. French and Danish East India Companies were established in 1601 and 1616 respectively. The latter achieved little, but, as will be seen directly, the French had a brief but brilliant period of influence in the middle of the 18th century.

ENGLISH DOMINION.—At the close of the 16th century the English, like the Dutch, became eager to share in the profits of Indian commerce. After some smaller ventures, the London East India Company was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth by royal charter on 31st December, 1600. There were 217 subscribers of the capital of £68,373, and the official title was "The Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies." A second charter in 1609 made the Company's privileges perpetual. The Portuguese resisted the new competitors, who nevertheless obtained a permanent footing at Surat after several stubborn engagements off Swally in 1612. In 1615 the British ambassador, Sir Thomas Roe, aided by the influence of the Emperor Jahangir, greatly improved the position and prospects of the Company. In 1639 the English acquired a strip of land on the east coast, built a factory there, fortified it, and named it Fort St. George; in 1653 this settlement of Madras became a Presidency. In Charles I.'s reign rival enterprises led to confusion and to piratical excesses in the East, but in 1657 co-operation and discipline were secured by the charter granted by the Protector Cromwell to a single company comprising the whole body of merchants. The charter was renewed by Charles II., in whose reign the Company enjoyed great prosperity. When, in 1662, Charles II. married Katharine of Braganza, a part of her dowry from Portugal was the Island of Bombay; in 1668 he transferred all his rights over it to the Company for an annual payment of £10. In 1687 Bombay replaced Surat as the seat of the western Presidency. Although in 1633 the Company had obtained certain treaty rights in Bengal from the Mogul, and in 1651 a factory had been established at Hooghly, yet in that part of India they held no territory as in Bombay and Madras. In 1688 the Muhammadan rulers forced them to abandon their settlement, but they were invited to return, and in 1690 were laid, amid swamp and jungle, the foundations of the Presidency of Fort William, which was destined to develop into the modern city of Calcutta. In 1698 a rival company called "The English East India Company," to distinguish it from the old "London Company," was started. After a period of conflict and trade losses, the rival companies came to terms in 1702; and in 1708 they were amalgamated under the title of "The United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies."

When Great Britain engaged in war with France in 1744, the rival Companies of England and France came into collision, with the result that Madras was captured in 1746. Had Dupleix been well supported from home, he might have founded a French empire in India. The first reverses of the English were retrieved by Clive, whose gallant defence of Arcot (1751) was followed up by a series of brilliant movements, culminating in the utter defeat of the French army by Coote at Wandiwash in 1760, and in the capture of Pondichérry in 1761, which completed the ruin of the French Company. Since then the territory retained by the French in India has been insignificant; and in it they are forbidden by treaty to hold any considerable military force. The tragedy of the Black Hole of Calcutta (1756) summoned Clive from Madras, and his victory at Plassey over the Nawab of Bengal in 1757 made British influence predominant.

Clive was appointed first Governor of Bengal in 1758. In 1760 he returned home, and in 1763 the English were again embroiled in Bengal, but completely defeated their opponents at Buxar (1764). In 1765 Clive (now Lord Clive) returned to Bengal as Governor, and before he left finally in 1767 he succeeded in reforming the services, in which great abuses existed. As a result of Clive's efforts, the East India Company in 1765 received from the Emperor at Delhi the diwani or fiscal administration of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, with the Northern Circars (Madras), and 25,000,000 people came under the government of the Company. Thus were laid the foundations of England's territorial dominion in India.

After an interval of misrule Warren Hastings (1772-85) was appointed Governor of Bengal, and in 1774 he became Governor-General, on the creation of that office under the Regulating Act of 1773. He vigorously reformed the revenue arrangements and judicial procedure. Hastings was the first great administrative organiser of the British possessions. He greatly increased the power and territory of the Company, notwithstanding the opposition of a hostile Council. Mysore in 1760 had been seized by Hyder Ali, a Mussulman adventurer, and a powerful and inveterate enemy of the English. By repelling Hyder Ali's memorable invasion of the Carnatic (1780), and defeating the triple alliance of the Nizam, the Mahrattas, and Hyder Ali, Hastings probably saved British India. On his return to England he was impeached, but acquitted.

The first administration of Lord Cornwallis (1786-93) was marked by a thorough reform of the Company's Civil Service, by the introduction of the permanent settlement of the land revenue in Bengal, by the remodelling of the judicial system, and by the third Mysore War, in which he defeated Tippoo, the son and successor of Hyder Ali. The rule of Sir John Shore (1793-98) was uneventful.

The administration of the Marquess Wellesley (1798-1805) was distinguished by many important events. Tippoo, as courageous and as hostile to the English as his father, was in 1798 in secret correspondence with the French, who were then dominant in the military councils of the Nizam and of Scindia, were strongly established in Mauritius, and under Napoleon, then engaged in his Egyptian campaign, were aiming at a great Eastern Empire. Lord Wellesley saw the necessity of crushing this dangerous Power, and the Fourth Mysore War ended in the capture of Seringapatam (1799), the death of Tippoo, and the conquest and restoration of Mysore to a representative of the family of Hindu Rajas whom Hyder Ali had dethroned. The Treaty of Bassein (1802) broke up the Mahratta confederacy, but led to the Second and Third Mahratta Wars, which curtailed the power of Scindia and Holkar, and increased the strength and extent of the Company's dominions. Lastly, Lord Wellesley developed, if he did not initiate, a system of subsidiary alliances with Native States, which aimed at making the British the one paramount Power, while giving greater security than the balance of power attempted by his predecessors. Wellesley doubled the territories of the Company, and transformed a mercantile body into a political power with a preponderating influence throughout India. During the brief second administration of Lord Cornwallis (1805), and that of Sir G. Barlow (1805-7), Wellesley's policy of subsidiary alliances was reversed.

Lord Minto (1807-13) established peaceful relations with the Punjab, Afghanistan, and Persia, through the missions of Metcalfe, Elphinstone, and Malcolm respectively, and captured Mauritius. On the renewal of the Company's charter in 1813 the monopoly of Indian trade was abolished.

Under the Marquess of Hastings (1814-23) a severe struggle with Nepaul ended with the Treaty of Sagauli (1816), which still regulates India's relations with that State. The annexation in 1818 of the territory of the Mahratta Peishwa enlarged Bombay Presidency to its present dimensions. Lord Hastings in the same year crushed the Pindaris of Central India, freebooters who organised large bands that devastated the country in all directions. Reviving Lord Wellesley's policy of alliances, he settled on their existing basis the relations of the Supreme Power with the feudatory States of Rajputana and Central India. He encouraged education. Lord Amherst (1823-8) succeeded Lord Hastings. Encroachments on British districts by the King of Ava and his insolent refusal of all redress led to the first Burmese War, which cost 20,000 lives and nearly £14,000,000, but gave to India the fertile provinces of Aracan and Tenasserim, and, practically, Assam.

While Lord William Bentinck was Governor-General (1828-35), steam communication with India was introduced, suttee (or widow-burning) was abolished, educated natives were admitted more freely into the service of the Company, and various reforms were passed affecting education, the liberty of the Press, finance, and justice. The new charter of the East India Company in 1833 abolished the remaining monopoly of Chinese trade, introduced reforms in the constitution of the Indian Government, made the North-West Provinces a separate administration, and abolished the restrictions on the residence of British subjects in India. The resolution of Lord Auckland (1836 42) to support Shah Shuja against Dost Muhammad brought on the first Afghan War (1839-42), and the serious disaster attendant on the fatal retreat from Cabul. The administration of Lord Ellenborough (1842-44) saw the conquest of Sind by Sir Charles Napier and its annexation (1843). Lord Hardinge (1844-48) conducted in person the first Sikh War, and fought a series of severely-contested battles, ending with Sobraon (1846).

Lord Dalhousie's administration (1848-56) was fruitful in events. The Second Sikh War resulted, after severe fighting, in the submission of the Sikhs and the annexation of the Punjab (1849). The second Burmese War (1852), deprived the King of Burma of Pegu. Lord Dalhousie promoted the introduction of railways and the telegraph. He established cheap postage, promoted steam navigation with England vid the Red Sea, and opened the Ganges Canal, still one of the largest irrigation works in India. His annexation policy was much criticised at home. It proceeded on the principle that British being preferable to native rule, gross misrule or a break in the natural succession justified, in the interest of the subject populations, the transfer of a native State to the British Government. In 1849 this "doctrine of lapse" was applied to Satara, and in 1853 Jhansi similarly became British territory; while on the death of the last of the Mahratta Princes of Nagpur, his territory was annexed, and became the Central Provinces in 1853. In 1856, after repeated warnings to the tyrannical ruler of Oudh, that kingdom was also annexed, without bloodshed or fighting.

Earl Canning (1857-62), who succeeded Lord Dalhousie, left England pledged to pursue a policy of peace, but he was destined to face the greatest crisis that has threatened the British Empire in India. A mutiny of sepoys broke out on the 10th May, 1857, at Meerut, and spread through the whole Bengal Army. Delhi was for some months in the possession of the rebels, and many chiefs joined the revolt. The siege of Delhi, the massacre at Cawnpore, the relief of Lucknow, the Central India campaign, and all the heroism of that momentous time will never be forgotten. Although the control of Indian affairs was vested in the Cabinet through the Board of Control, the Great Mutiny was laid to the charge of the East India Company, whose eventful annals were brought to a close by the transfer of the entire administration of India to the Crown.

INDIA UNDER THE CROWN.—The "Act for the Better Government of India" established the authority of the Crown; and a Proclamation to the Princes, Chiefs, and People of India, dated the 1st Nov., 1858, announced the resolution of Her Majesty to assume the government of the territories in India "heretofore administered in trust by the Honourable East India Company." Legislative Councils were established in India. Lord Canning was succeeded in 1862 by Lord Elgin, who, however, died in Nov., 1863. Sir John (Lord) Lawrence (1864-69) took measures to reform the finances, which had been seriously burdened by the heavy military expenditure necessitated by the Mutiny. His administration was marked by the Bhutan War (1864), and by the terrible Orissa Famine of 1866. He encouraged irrigation. Lord Mayo (1869-72) effected many administrative reforms, instituted State railways, and inaugurated the system of provincial finance, which has since been extended. He promoted the construction of roads and canals. During the tenure of office of Lord Northbrook (1872-76) the late King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales, visited India. The Viceroy devoted attention to finance and to famine relief. In 1875 the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda was deposed for misrule and disloyalty. Lord Lytton's administration (1876-80) was made eventful by a terrible famine in Southern India, by the Second Afghan War, and by the Queen's assumption of the title of EMPRESS OF INDIA in 1877. He was succeeded by the Marquess of Ripon (1880-84), whose peaceful term was marked by the extension of local self-government, and by fiscal, judicial, educational, and other reforms. His successor was the Marquess of Dufferin (1884-88), during whose viceroyalty occurred the Third Burmese War, by which Upper Burma with the Shan States was added to the Empire. The N.W. frontier of Afghanistan was delimited, the frontier of India strengthened, and the army increased. The Marquess of Lansdowne (1888-94) continued his predecessor's policy of strengthening the army and extending and consolidating British influence on the frontier. The Indo-Afghan boundary was defined, and a serious outbreak in Manipur was suppressed. As regards domestic policy, he took the first step in currency reform by closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver. He also reconstituted the Legislative Councils in 1892 by introducing a more popular element, and conferring a limited right of interpellation and criticism in financial matters. The viceroyalty of Lord Elgin (1894-99) was full of events. In 1895 an outbreak in Chitral made necessary a large military expedition to relieve the garrison. Plague broke out in 1896, and has raged more or less severely ever since. In 1896-7 an area of 307,000 sq. ms., with a population of 70 millions, was visited by a grievous famine. In 1897 the tribes along the whole border from Chitral to Baluchistan rose against the British garrisons. In the Tirah Campaign that followed over 40,000 troops were employed. Several boundaries were settled under Lord Elgin, notably those with Russia on the Pamirs and with France on the Mekong; the frontiers of Afghanistan, Persia, and China were also defined. The general Customs tariff, abolished in 1882, was reimposed in 1894. Legislative Councils were created for the Punjab and Burma.

Lord Curzon (1899–1904, and 1904–5) succeeded Lord Elgin. In 1899 the pound sterling was made legal tender in India concurrently with the rupee, at the exchange of Rs. 15 to £1. India was thrice called on to defend Imperial interests by the despatch of troops to South Africa in 1899, to China in 1900, and to Somaliland in 1903–4. In 1899–1900 occurred one of the worst famines on record, the tracts affected covering 475,000 sq. ms. with a population of 60 millions, of whom more than a half were in native States. Lord Curzon's term of office was a period of reform and reconstruction. Among his measures for aiding cultivators were the institution of agricultural banks and departments, and reforms in revenue law and administration designed to free the cultivators from the moneylenders. The famine codes were amended. Better arrangements were made for controlling the tribes and for distributing the troops on the frontier, and a new province, under the direct control of the Governor-General in Council, was created, called the North-West Frontier Province (1901). The Aden and the Perso-Afghan boundaries were delimited. An Imperial Cadet Corps of native princes and nobles was inaugurated. The Viceroy appointed Commissions of Inquiry on irrigation, railways, universities, agricultural banks, excise, and police, all of which suggested important reforms. A Railway Board was constituted to administer the railways, and a Commerce and Industry Department, in charge of a new Member of Council, was created. Educational policy was reviewed and reforms introduced. The reform of the police was undertaken. Lord Curzon also secured a perpetual lease of Berar from the Nizam. In 1904 a mission with a military escort proceeded to Tibet, and secured a favourable treaty. Lord Curzon returned to England for a few months in 1904. During his absence Lord Ampthill occupied the post of Viceroy. Lord Curzon returned to India on reappointment in Dec., 1904. In 1905 the treaty with Afghanistan was renewed. The Viceroy reduced the dimensions of Bengal, which had become unwieldy for administrative purposes, and constituted a new province, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, by combining parts of Bengal with Assam. He carried out great reforms in the organisation of the Army in conjunction with Lord Kitchener (appointed Commander-in-Chief in 1902), but, differing from certain proposals made by the latter, and finding that he lacked the support of the Home Government, he resigned (Aug., 1905).

Lord Minto succeeded in Nov., 1905. The Prince of Wales (now H.M. King George), with the Princess, made a tour in India during the winter of 1905–6. There has been considerable agitation among Bengalis since 1905 owing to the partition of Bengal, and a Seditious Meetings Act was passed in Nov., 1907. In his Budget speech in 1907, the Secretary of State, Viscount Morley, foreshadowed important reforms in Indian administration, designed to bring all classes of the people into closer relations with the Government and its officers. He nominated two Indian members to his own Council, and an Indian member to the Governor-General's Council. He appointed Commissions to inquire into railways, into the possibilities of financial and administrative decentralisation, and into the conditions of factory labour, and action has been taken on their reports. In 1908 the unrest in Bengal assumed an anarchical character, and the laws relating to the Press and to explosives were strengthened. To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the transfer of India to the Crown a royal proclamation was issued in Nov., 1908, promising extended self-government. By the Indian Councils Act (1909) the Viceregal and provincial Legislative Councils were enlarged, their powers of interpellation and criticism enhanced, and the elective element extended, special provision being made for the representation of landholders, the professional classes, Muhammadans, and European and Indian traders and planters. The executive councils of Madras and Bombay were increased in size, and power was given to constitute executive councils in Bengal and other provinces (see also page 514). The Act became operative in Jan., 1910. Owing to the continued unrest in 1909 and 1910, a Press Act, to control printing presses, was passed, and the Seditious Meetings Act extended, in 1910.

Lord Hardinge succeeded in Nov., 1910.

IMPERIAL LEGISLATION.—The original charter of the East India Company was granted by Queen Elizabeth at the end of 1600. The Regulating Act (1773), which created the first Governor-General and his Council, was the first statute that recognised the East India Company as a ruling body. Pitt's India Act (1784) left the business and most of the patronage to the Court of Directors, but gave the supreme civil and military authority to a Board of Control, whose president represented India in the House of Commons. In 1793 the Company's charter was renewed; in 1813, on a further renewal of the charter, the trade of India was thrown open; while in 1833 the monopoly of the China trade was abolished. In 1853 the Company's charter was renewed for the last time, and the Indian Civil Service was thrown open to competition. By "An Act for the Better Government of India" (1858), which still regulates Indian affairs, all the territories governed by the East India Company were transferred to the Crown, and all the powers exercised by the Company and the Board of Control were vested in the Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council. Under this Act, as amended by Acts of 1889 and 1907, at least 9 members of Council must have resided in India for 10 years, and must not have left India more than 5 years prior to their appointment. The number of members may be 14. The term of office is now 7 years, with power of extension. In 1877 (under the Royal Titles Act) Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India.

The Government of India.

EMPEROR OF INDIA—H.I.M. GEORGE V.

Secretary of State—The Rt. Hon. the EARL OF CREWE, K.G.

H.M. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA is the head of the Indian Administration in England, and as a member of the Cabinet he is responsible to, and represents the supreme authority of, Parliament. In all matters the Secretary of State can impose his orders on the Government of India. No expenditure from the revenues of India is legal unless sanctioned by him and a majority of his Council. In matters requiring secrecy (e.g., foreign policy and the affairs of native States) the Secretary of State can act on his own authority without consulting his Council, and in most other matters can overrule the majority of his Council. Indian Government business in England is transacted at the India Office (see p. 188).

The King-Emperor appoints the Governor-General, the Governors of Madras and Bombay, the Commander-in-Chief, the Ordinary Members of the Councils of the Governor-General and of the Governors of Madras and Bombay, and the Judges in the High Courts. The appointments of Lieutenant-Governor are made by the Governor-General, subject to the Secretary of State's approval. The term of these appointments, except judgeships, is usually five years.

Subject to the Secretary of State's direction, the supreme executive authority in India, in both civil and military affairs, is the Governor-General in Council. The Governor-General's Executive Council now contains six ordinary members (of whom three must have served in India ten years), as well as himself and the Commander-in-Chief, who is an extraordinary member. The Governors of Bombay and Madras have each an Executive Council of three members. An Executive Council is to be created in Bengal. All acts of the SUPREME GOVERNMENT IN INDIA run in the name of "The Governor-General in Council"; ordinarily, the opinion of the majority prevails, but the Governor-General is empowered in special circumstances to overrule the majority. The Governor-General's Legislative Council, in accordance with the Indian Councils Act, 1909, consists of 28 official and 32 non-official members (including 25 elected), in addition to ex-officio members. There are similar Legislative Councils in Madras, Bombay, Bengal, Eastern Bengal and Assam, the United Provinces, the Punjab, and Burma. For the first five of these the maximum number of members is 50, and for the last two 30, in addition to ex-officio members. The Governor-General's Council has an official majority of three, while all the provincial councils have non-official majorities. Every Indian Act requires the Governor-General's assent, but the Crown may disallow it.

As the result of important changes in administration, business is now conducted by ten Departments—Finance, Foreign, Home, Legislative, Revenue and Agriculture, Public Works, Commerce and Industry, Railway, Army, and Education. Each Department is in charge of a Secretary to Government, and under the care of a member of the Supreme Council, who has authority to deal with affairs of minor importance, and to select what is worthy of the consideration of the Governor-General and his Council. The Governor-General himself superintends the Foreign Department. The Finance Department deals with public accounts, loans, taxation, opium, currency, banking, mints, &c. The Foreign Department conducts relations with Afghanistan, Nepal and other conterminous countries, and, through its Political Residents and Agents in the various native States, supervises their administration and regulates their relations with the paramount Power. Its Agents in the Persian Gulf, Muscat, and Turkish Arabia look after the commercial and political interests of India in those quarters. The Home Department deals with the civil service, ecclesiastical and judicial affairs, prisons, police, &c. The Legal Member of Council takes charge of Government Bills in connexion with the Legislative Department. The most important subjects that come before the Revenue and Agriculture Department are land revenue and surveys, forests, agricultural development, famine, and meteorology. The Public Works Department deals with irrigation, roads, buildings, &c. The recently created department of Commerce and Industry has been placed in charge of a special member. It deals with trade and shipping, customs, excise, salt, ports, post-office, telegraphs, mines, factories, statistics, &c. Railway administration is now entrusted to a Railway Department, which is in charge of the Commerce and Industry Member of Council, and controlled by a Railway Board. The Army is under the Army Department, of which the Commander-in-Chief has charge in Council. A new Education Department is being constituted to take from the Home Department the control of education, local government, sanitation, &c.

British India is no longer divided into three Presidencies, but into 13 Local Governments and Administrations, viz.:—Under Governors, Madras and Bombay, still termed Presidencies; under Lieutenant-Governors, the provinces of Bengal, Eastern Bengal and Assam, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab, and Burma; under Chief Commissioners, the Central Provinces and Berar, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, British Baluchistan, the North-West Frontier Province, and the Andaman Islands. The chief Local Governments enjoy a large measure of financial and administrative independence. Proposals for further decentralisation are under discussion. The Governors of Madras and Bombay have greater independence than the others, being alone permitted to communicate direct with the Secretary of State.

The unit of administration throughout British India is the District, the executive head of which is the District Officer, called Collector-Magistrate or Deputy-Commissioner, as the case may be. In subordination to a Commissioner, who corresponds direct with the Provincial Government, he has control in every department of administration, and is the responsible head of his jurisdiction. There are now 267 Districts in British India.

There are separate High Courts for both civil and criminal cases in Madras, Bombay, Bengal (with jurisdiction also over Eastern Bengal and Assam), and in the North-West Provinces. Appeals may be carried to the English Privy Council. The Punjab and Lower Burma have Chief Courts. The Central Provinces, Berar, Oudh, Sind, North-West Frontier Province, and Upper Burma have each a Judicial Commissioner's Court.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.*

(1) MADRAS (area, 141,726 sq. miles; pop. 38,209,436) was not only the oldest, but the most important, of the three original Presidencies before Clive's conquest of Bengal, but it was small in extent until the annexation of the Carnatic in 1801. With a coast-line of 1,730 miles the province has no good natural harbour, though an artificial harbour has been constructed at Madras at great expense. The province is not naturally fertile, but irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil, and have yielded a large profit to the State. Rice, millet, and other food-grains, oilseeds, cotton, indigo, spices, tobacco, tea, &c., are cultivated. Manganese ore is mined and exported. Madras is served by the South Indian and by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways, the latter connecting it with Bengal on the north and Bombay on the west. The people are chiefly Hindus. Many natives of Madras Presidency emigrate to Burma and Ceylon, some only temporarily. There are over one million native Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. The languages principally spoken are Tamil and Telugu. The Governor of Madras is assisted by an Executive Council, which now consists of three members. The Legislative Council consists of 48 members, 24 nominated (including not more than 17 officials) and 19 elected according to regulations made under the Indian Councils Act, 1909, in addition to 3 ex-officio and 2 extra members. Madura (105,984) and Trichinopoly (104,721), famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital.

CHIEF CITY, Madras. Population, 509,346.

(2) BOMBAY.—The Island of "BOMBAY was part of the dowry of the Infanta of Portugal (1662), and was made over by Charles II. to the East India Company in 1668. The greater part of the present territory was obtained by annexations from the Mahrattas, and by the lapse of the Satara State. Sind was conquered in 1843. The province (including Sind, but not Aden and Perim, which are also attached to it) contains 122,984 square miles (nearly equal in size to Prussia), with a population of 18,515,587. Eastern Sind is desert. The administration of Sind (which occupies about two-fifths of the Presidency) is in some respects separate. About 77 per cent. of the people of the Presidency are Hindus, and 20 per cent. Muhammadans. The Parsis, who are very prominent in trade, are mainly found in Bombay. The people have suffered greatly from plague and drought in recent years. Marathi, Gujarati, Sindhi, and Kanarese are the principal languages. Millet and other food-grains and oilseeds are cultivated. Cotton is largely produced for export and for manufacture in the constantly extending cotton-mills of Bombay and Ahmedabad. The chief railway systems are the Bombay, Baroda and Central India with the lines worked by it to the north, and the Great Indian Peninsula (now combined with the Indian Midland system) eastwards; south-eastwards is the Madras and Southern Mahratta system; while Karachi (Sind) is the port for the extensive North-Western Railway system. The Governor now has an Executive Council of three members, while the Legislative Council comprises 48 members, 21 nominated (including not more than 14 officials) and 21 elected, in addition to 3 ex-officio and 2 extra members. Ahmedabad (185,889), Poona (153,320), Surat (119,306), and Karachi (116,663), the capital and chief port of Sind, are important cities. For Aden and Perim, see p. 524.

* The areas and populations of the separate provinces are for British territory only. The populations are according to the census of 1901.

(3) BENGAL (reconstituted area, 115,819 sq. miles; pop. 50,722,067) was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor in 1854. The old Bengal Presidency included practically all Northern and Central India, but the present province comprises only a part of Bengal proper, with Behar, Orissa, and Chota Nagpur. Fifteen districts of Eastern Bengal were detached from the province in 1905 and combined with Assam, while one district from the Central Provinces was added to Bengal. Bengal occupies the Ganges Valley eastward of Benares, and extends from the Himalayas to the mouth of the Mahanuddy. Only 5 per cent. of the population live in towns. Nearly 78 per cent. of the population consists of Hindus. The principal languages are Bengali, Hindi, and Bihari. For the most part the province is a great alluvial plain, producing rice, and is the most populous and productive in all British India. Orissa and Chota Nagpur are ill-watered and liable to drought. The chief products of the province, besides rice, are opium, indigo, oilseeds, sugar, tobacco, silk, tea, and jute. In the hills bordering the great plain coal measures, yielding the greater part of India's coal output, are worked. The East Indian Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley. The Eastern Bengal Railway, running N. from Calcutta, is also important. Other extensive systems are the Bengal and North-Western in the north and the Bengal-Nagpur in the south. The Lieutenant-Governor, under the Indian Councils Act, is now assisted by a Legislative Council of 50 members, 22 nominated (including not more than 17 officials) and 26 elected, besides 2 extra members. An Executive Council is being created. Important cities are Patna (134,785) and Howrah (157,594), a great jute-manufacturing centre adjoining Calcutta.

(4) EASTERN BENGAL AND ASSAM (reconstituted area, 106,130 sq. miles; pop. 30,961,459). In 1905 this province was formed by the addition to Assam of 15 districts of Bengal, and was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor, with a Legislative Council. Under the Indian Councils Act this Council has 42 members, 18 elected and 22 nominated (including not more than 17 officials), besides 2 extra members. Assam had been constituted a separate administration in 1874, out of certain Bengal districts, most of which had been ceded by Burma in 1825. The High Court for the province is that of Calcutta. Much of the transferred portion of Bengal belongs to the great Gangetic plain. A range of mountains divides Assam into the Surma and Brahmaputra valleys, of which the chief towns are Gauhati and Sylhet respectively. The forest area is very large. The rainfall is abundant and well distributed. Rice, tea, jute, wheat, oilseeds, sugar, and tobacco are cultivated. About 58 per cent. of the people are Muhammadans, and 37 per cent. Hindus. Large towns are few. There is a great variety of languages, Bengali and Assamese being the principal. The Assam-Bengal and Eastern Bengal Railways traverse the province, and the former terminates at the growing port of Chittagong. The census of 1901 showed that Assam contained 775,844 immigrants from other parts of India, mostly coolies for tea-gardens.

(5) The UNITED PROVINCES of AGRA and OUDH, called "North-Western Provinces and Oudh" until 1902 (area, 107,164 sq. miles; pop. 47,691,782), form the upper part of the great Ganges plain to the W. of Bengal, lying between the Himalayas and the hilly border of the central plateau. In population they come next to Bengal. Originally these provinces (excluding Oudh) formed part of the Bengal Presidency, but in 1835 a separate administration was formed under a Lieutenant-Governor. OUDH was annexed in 1856 and placed under a Chief Commissioner. After 1877 the two administrations were combined. The chief staple is wheat, while rice, barley, pulse, tobacco, millet, cotton, sugar, and oilseeds are widely cultivated. About 85 per cent. of the population are Hindus and 14 per cent. Muhammadans. Hindi and Bihari are the chief tongues. The province is served by the East Indian, Oudh and Rohilkhand, and Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railways. In 1887 a Legislative Council was established. Under the Indian Councils Act it consists of 48 members, 26 nominated (including not more than 20 officials) and 20 elected, besides 2 extra members. Among the important cities may be named the ancient city of Agra (188,022), containing the Taj Mahal and other great works of architecture, the sacred Hindu city of Benares (209,331), the great manufacturing centre, Cawnpore (197,170), and Meerut (118,129).

(6) The PUNJAB (area, 97,209 sq. miles; pop. 20,330,339) occupies the N.W. angle of the great northern plain of India, and derives its name from the "Five Rivers" which, descending from the Himalayas, traverse the plain and unite in the Indus. It was annexed in 1849, and up to 1853 was under a Board of Administration. This Board was then superseded by a Chief Commissioner, who was made Lieutenant-Governor in 1859, when also the Delhi Division was transferred to the Punjab from the North-West Provinces. The Punjab is mainly agricultural, and, owing to the scanty rainfall, depends largely for its harvests on vast irrigation canals, which are still being largely extended, and are highly remunerative. The principal crops are wheat, millet, barley, maize, pulse, oilseeds, sugar, and cotton. The Punjab possesses rich deposits of rock-salt, which, with wheat and other grains and cotton, form the principal exports. Wood is scarce. More than half the population are Muhammadans, and more than a third are Hindus. Of the former, the Pathans are found chiefly in the north-western hill districts. The Sikhs number over 2,100,000 in the Punjab and Punjab States, to which they are mainly confined. Punjabi and Hindi are the chief languages. The various branches of the North-Western Railway serve the Punjab. In 1897 a Legislative Council was constituted, which, under the Indian Councils Act, consists of 26 members, 19 nominated (including not more than 10 officials) and 5 elected, besides 2 extra members. The ancient imperial city of Delhi, with 208,575 inhabitants, is the largest city; while Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs, has 162,429 people.

(7) BURMA is bounded by China, French Indo-China, and Siam on the east, by the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam on the north, and by the Bay of Bengal. It is the largest province of the Indian Empire, having a total area of 236,738 sq. miles, with a population of 10,490,624. These figures include the Shan States and Chin Hills. Many immigrants come from Bengal, Madras, and China. Tenasserim and Aracan were annexed after the first Burmese war in 1826, Pegu after the second war in 1852, and Upper Burma and the Shan States after the third war in 1885. The Shan States are administered by local sawbwas, or chiefs, under the superintendence of a political officer. The province is thinly peopled; but, owing to remarkable prosperity, the population is rapidly increasing. The inhabitants—of the common Indo-Chinese stock—belong to numerous tribes, who are distinguished by a variety of manners, languages, and religions. About 75 per cent. speak Burmese. Buddhism, now almost confined to Burma, is the religion of nearly 90 per cent. of the people. The Burmese are much better educated than the natives of India proper, education being conducted by Buddhist monks. The delta country of Lower Burma is flat, but above Prome there is upland, hilly country. Rice, the main product of the delta region, is largely milled at Rangoon and exported. The principal export after rice is teak, which comes from the extensive forests of Burma and the Shan States, and overland from Siam. Burma is fairly rich in minerals, especially petroleum, rubies, and jadestone; gold and silver are also known to exist. The Irrawaddy and its chief tributaries, the Chindwin, the Shweli, and the Myitnge, form important waterways. The main stream is navigable beyond Bhamo, 900 miles from its mouth, and carries much traffic. There are considerable exports by land to Western China. The Burma Railway has reached Myitkina on the Upper Irrawaddy, while a branch has been built to the Shan States, which lie in the Salwin basin. The Lieutenant-Governor of Burma has a Legislative Council consisting, under the Indian Councils Act, of 17 members, 14 nominated (including not more than six officials) and one elected, besides 2 extra members. The present capital, Rangoon, is fast increasing in population owing to commercial prosperity, while the old native capital, Mandalay, tends to decline.

(8) The CENTRAL PROVINCES and BERAR (reconstituted area, excluding Berar, given below, 82,635 sq. miles; pop. 9,237,654). The Central Provinces were formed in 1861 out of territory taken from the North-West Provinces and Madras, but originally belonging to the Mahratta Kingdom of Nagpur. One district was detached and added to Bengal in 1905. The country is hilly and forest-clad, and contains a large population of aboriginal tribes. A great deal of the waste land is covered with jungle. The people are mostly Hindus, and they speak mainly Hindi and Marathi. Much has been done by constructing roads and railways (belonging to the Indian Midland and Great Indian Peninsula and the Bengal-Nagpur systems) to open up the country, which possesses coalfields and manganese ore, and is an important producer of rice, wheat, millet, pulse, oilseeds, and cotton. There are cotton mills at Nagpur.

Since 1st October, 1902, BERAR has been amalgamated with the Central Provinces. Berar (area, 17,710 sq. miles; pop. 2,754,016), which lies to the north of Hyderabad, was placed in our hands by the Nizam in 1853, in payment of arrears, and its revenues were charged with the future cost of the Hyderabad Contingent. In 1902 Berar was leased in perpetuity to the Government of India on payment of £167,000 a year to the Nizam, who thus obtains an assured instead of a fluctuating income therefrom. Berar is purely agricultural. It is very fertile, and yields the finest cotton in India, besides millet, oilseeds, &c. The chief language is Marathi, and most of the people are Hindus.

There is no Legislative Council for the Central Provinces and Berar, and all legislation is done by the Governor-General's Council.

(9) The NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE (area, 16,466 sq. miles; pop. 2,125,480) was constituted on November 9, 1901, by the transfer from the Punjab of portions of the district of Hazara, and the Trans-Indus districts of Peshawar, Kohat, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan, and by the addition of the following Political Charges—Kurram, Malakand (Dir, Swat, and Chitral), Khaibar, Tochi, Gomal, and Shirani. The officer in charge is directly responsible to the Government of India. The people are chiefly Muhammadans. The province produces wheat, barley and other grains, oilseeds, cotton, &c. It has a considerable trade with Afghanistan.

(11) COORG (area, 1,582 sq. miles; pop. 180,607), annexed in 1834. The Resident at Mysore is ex officio Chief Commissioner and the chief executive and judicial authority.

Chief Commissioner, The Hon. Lt.-Col. H. Daly, C.S.I. ..... Rs. 4,000
Commr. L. T. Harris ..... Rs. 2,000

(12) BRITISH BALUCHISTAN (area, 45,804 sq. ms.; pop. 308,246) was constituted a separate administration in 1888, under the Governor-General's Agent in Baluchistan, who also controls the affairs of the rest of Baluchistan, including the native States of Kalat and Las Bela, up to the Persian frontier. The districts it comprises (namely, the Assigned Districts of Sibi, Pishin, Thal-Chotiali, Quetta, Nushki, Zhob, Chagai, Nasirabad, and the Bolan) were acquired partly from Afghanistan by the treaty of Gundamuk (1879), partly from the Khan of Kalat by arrangement. Baluchistan consists largely of mountains and sandy deserts, and is sparsely populated. About 44 per cent. of the people lead a pastoral, nomad life. In religion they are Sunni Muhammadans. The Afghan-Baluch frontier was demarcated in 1896–7. To Chaman, on this frontier, a railway runs through Baluchistan viâ Quetta. A new trade-route between India and Seistan, in Persia, viâ Nushki, in northern Baluchistan, was opened in 1896. A railway runs from Quetta to Nushki. The Khan of Kalat is the head of a loose confederacy, and is amenable in all important matters to the Governor-General's Agent. He receives about £11,000 per annum for quit-rents and subsidy. British troops occupy Quetta, commanding the Bolan Pass, and have the treaty right to occupy any other position.

Chief Commissioner of British Baluchistan, Lt.-Col. Sir A. H. McMahon, K.C.I.E., C.S.I. Rs. 4,000
Judl. and Rev. Commr., Lt.-Col. C. Archer, C.I.E. Rs. 2,500

(13) The ANDAMANS and NICOBARS (area, 3,143 sq. ms.; pop. 24,649) form a chain of islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal. The Andamans, in two groups, the Great and Little Andamans, are covered with luxuriant vegetation, and inhabited by a tribe of Negritos. The race is dying out. Since 1858 these islands have been used as a penal settlement by the Indian Government. Port Blair, with its safe and spacious harbour, on South Andaman, is the convict station. The number of convicts in 1908 was 13,300. Much valuable timber, worked by convict labour, is obtained. The Nicobar Islands, which lie almost due south of the Andamans, were first occupied by the British in 1869. They comprise 19 islands (seven uninhabited), of which the northernmost (Car Nicobar) contains half the population. The principal products are coco-nuts. The inhabitants, Malay in type, are indolent, and are becoming extinct.

Chief Commissioner and Superintendent (Port Blair), Lt.-Col. H. A. Browning..... Rs. 3,000

The Laccadive Islands comprise 14 islands (nine inhabited), distant 200 miles from the Malabar coast of the Madras Presidency, in which they are included. (Pop. 10,274.)

Aden, Perim, and Protected Chiefships.—From old time Aden, situated on a peninsula of volcanic origin, on the southern coast of Arabia and lying on the Red Sea trade-route between Europe and the East, has been an important trade centre. Aden trade decayed after the Portuguese discovery of the Cape route, but with the opening of the Suez Canal it regained more than its old importance. It was occupied by the British in 1839. It is now a great coaling-station and port of call, and an emporium for the trade of N.E. Africa and S. Arabia. It is the only fortified point between Egypt and Bombay, and may be regarded as an outpost of the Indian Empire. Aden and Perim—a small unfortified island serving as a coaling station at the southern entrance to the Red Sea, occupied in 1857—form part of the Bombay Presidency, and have an area of 80 square miles and a population of 43,974 (1901). Aden is a free port. The traffic in arms and ammunition is subject to special regulations. Aden serves as an entrepôt for the adjacent Arabian and African coasts. India, the United Kingdom, Austria-Hungary, and the United States have a considerable trade with Aden, the chief imports being cotton goods, grain, spices and sugar, and the chief exports salt, precious stones, and hides and skins. The total trade in 1908–9 was over £7,697,000. In 1907–8, 1,436 vessels entered Aden and 401 entered Perim. Aden has a Port Trust and a Chamber of Commerce. In the hinterland of Aden the British Government has treaty engagements with, and subsidises, the neighbouring Arab tribes, both inland and along the coast (Hadramaut), from the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb to Muscat territory at Ras Sair. As the result of an agreement arrived at in 1903-4 with Turkey, a line fixing the boundary of the tribes with which the British Government has treaty relations has been demarcated by a joint British and Turkish Commission from Sheikh Sayad, on the coast opposite Perim, to the river Bana.

The Kuria Muria Islands, to the S. of Omân, have been in British possession since 1854. In 1834 the East India Company occupied Sokotra (area, 1,400 sq. ms.), 150 miles from Cape Guardafui, which has a primitive, pastoral, Muhammadan population of 12,000, mainly Arabs. A formal protectorate was established in 1886. The Sheikh receives a small subsidy from the British Government in exchange for a pledge not to cede the island to any foreign Power.

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS.

The higher civil administration of British India is recruited from four sources—1. Open competitive examination in England. 2. The Indian Army. 3. The patronage of the Secretary of State. 4. The patronage of the Local Governments.

The Civil Service of India.—Important changes in the regulations took effect in 1906. The next examination will commence in London on 1st August, 1911, the number of appointments (usually about 50) depending on the requirements of the local Governments. Candidates must be over 22 and under 24 on that date, and of good health and character. Application for admission to compete must be made on or before the 1st July, on forms that can be obtained from the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, London, W. Examination fee, £6. The selected candidates will be on probation in England for one year, and will receive an allowance of £150 if they pass their probation at one of the Universities or Colleges approved by the Secretary of State for India, conduct themselves well, and comply with all rules laid down for their guidance. A final examination is held in Indian law, languages, history, &c. Seniority in the service depends on the order in which candidates stand in the list resulting from the combined marks of the open competitive and final examinations. Selected candidates must qualify in riding. Successful candidates are allotted to the various provinces upon a consideration of all the circumstances, including their own wishes, but always subject to the needs of the public service. Within a certain time of the candidate's arrival in India, he must elect to serve in the executive or the judicial branch of the administration, the summit of the profession in one branch being the Lieutenant-Governorship of a Province, in the other a Judgeship of a High Court. The salary of a covenanted civil servant commences usually at Rs. 4,800 (£320) a year. The number of civilians at present in the service is about 1,100.

Indian Army.—The Native Army absorbs the larger proportion of the officers; but a considerable number are selected for civil employment. A certain number of appointments in the Indian Army are offered to cadets of the Royal Military College, and a certain number to candidates from the Universities (regulations obtainable from War Office). All King's Cadets, British and Indian, and Honorary King's Cadets, nominated by the Secretary of State for India (rules on application to the Military Department, India Office), have the option, during their last term at the Royal Military College, of electing for appointment to the unattached list for the Indian Army or for appointment to commissions in the British Cavalry or Infantry. After the claims of these cadets have been satisfied, remaining appointments to the unattached list are allotted in order of merit to cadets who satisfy the requirements of the regulations respecting admission to the Royal Military College, and who elect to compete for such appointments, at each final examination at Sandhurst. Election is made during a cadet's last term at the Royal Military College, and is final, no transfer being subsequently possible except by exchange. On receiving his commission a successful candidate is gazetted as second lieutenant on the unattached list of the British Army, provided with a passage to India, attached to a British regiment (receiving Indian pay and allowances as an officer of the British Army) and, after one year's actual duty, transferred to a native regiment as second lieutenant. Unless he is found fit in every respect and passes certain language and professional tests within three years of the date of his admission to the Indian Army, he will be removed from the service. Any officers who may from time to time be required to supplement the direct supply from Sandhurst are drawn from the R.A. and Cavalry and Infantry of the Line serving in India, subject to certain conditions. On appointment to a native regiment a second lieutenant or lieutenant's initial pay is not less than Rs. 4,560 (£304) a year.

The Public Works Department includes a staff of engineers engaged in the construction and maintenance of State public works. They are recruited from the corps of Royal Engineers, from persons appointed by selection in the United Kingdom, and, in respect of natives, from the civil engineering colleges in India. Other qualified persons are occasionally admitted. In the summer of 1911 not less than 23 appointments of assistant engineers will be made by a Selection Committee including at least one eminent engineer. Candidates must be between 21 and 24 years of age on 1st July, 1911, must be of good health and character, be able to ride, have passed the A.M.I.C.E. examination, or have obtained a University degree or an equivalent diploma or distinction in engineering, and have had some experience of important work. Candidates should apply on a prescribed form to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, S.W., before 1st May, 1911. Assistant engineers in India commence at Rs. 4,560 (or £304) a year, and there is a prospect of pension and also a provident fund.

The Forest Department of India is recruited from this country. The Secretary of State, acting on the advice of a Selection Committee, will appoint a number of probationers in the summer of 1911. Candidates must be under 23 years of age on 1st July, 1911. Preference will be given to those who, in addition to a good general education, possess an honours degree in natural science. Selected candidates, if they succeed in passing a strict medical examination, will spend two or three years on probation and in training, including practical training in Germany, and they must obtain the Oxford Diploma of Forestry. They must be able to ride before going to India. Assistant Conservators commence at Rs. 4,560 (£304) a year. There is a prospect of pension and a provident fund. Candidates should apply to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, before 1st July, 1911.

Indian Police.—An examination is to be held in this country on 27th June, 1911, for about 32 appointments: Madras, 4; Bombay, 2; Bengal, 6; United Provinces, 4; Punjab, 5; Burma, 5; Central Provinces and Berar, 3; Eastern Bengal and Assam, 3. Candidates must be between 19 and 21 on 1st June, 1911, and applications must be sent before 1st May, 1911, to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, on a printed form to be obtained from him. There is a strict medical examination, and a riding test. Selected candidates "will be allotted as probationers to the various provinces upon a consideration of all the circumstances, including their own wishes." On passing the prescribed departmental examinations, which must be done within two years of arrival in India, and being found otherwise fit, a probationer is appointed an assistant-superintendent. The initial salary is Rs. 3,600 (£240) a year. There is a prospect of pension and a provident fund.

Indian Medical Service.—Examinations are usually held in January and July. The number of appointments offered is about 12 to 15. Candidates must be between the ages of 21 and 28, of good health and good character, and must possess a registrable qualification to practise both medicine and surgery in the United Kingdom and a certificate of ophthalmic instruction. They may be married or not. Successful candidates will be appointed lieutenants on probation, and required to attend courses of instruction at the Royal Army Medical College, Millbank, and Aldershot, during which period they receive pay and certain allowances to cover cost of maintenance. A final examination is then held, and an officer's position on the list of the service depends on the combined results of the preliminary and final examinations. Officers will be liable for military employment in any part of India, but, with a view to transfers to civil employment, they will stand posted to one of four civil areas, their allocation being determined on a consideration of all the circumstances, including their own wishes. Officers in one civil area are liable to be transferred elsewhere or recalled to military duty. Private practice is usually permitted. The commencing grade pay of a lieutenant is Rs. 5,040 (£336) a year. Full information can be obtained from the Military Secretary, India Office.

The patronage of the Secretary of State for India is small, and is chiefly dependent on the requirements of the Government of India in the Judicial, Educational, or Ecclesiastical Departments. Appointments, usually of distinguished graduates of British Universities with a knowledge of teaching, are made to the Indian Educational Service, which includes teaching and inspecting posts. Conditions of pay and service are the same for both. The age is usually from 23 to 30. Appointments are in the first instance for two years, the salary beginning at Rs. 500 a month, with annual increments of Rs. 50 a month to Rs. 1,000, with prospects of promotion if service is extended. The number of appointments varies from year to year, and is not large. The Ecclesiastical Establishment, which forms a civil department, consists of the Bishops of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay (others whose names are given on page 264 are not Bishops on the Establishment), and 150 Chaplains of the English and Scottish churches. Chaplains (who must be between 27 and 34 years of age) are on probation for three years after appointment, and receive a salary of Rs. 5,760 (£384) a year. Applications should be addressed to the Secretary of State, India Office. Certain allowances are also paid from Indian revenues to other clergymen, and to priests and ministers of other denominations when serving with British regiments.

Appointments are also made by the India Office to the Royal Indian Marine (limits of age for officers 17 to 22, for engineers 21 to 25), Bengal Pilot Service (age 18 to 22), Civil Veterinary Dept. (age not over 26), Indian Finance, Military Finance, and Customs Depts. (age 22 to 25), Indian Public Works Dept., Accounts Branch (age 22 to 25), Geological Survey Dept. (age not over 25), Imperial Customs (age 22 to 25), Agricultural Service (age 23 to 30), Assist. Supt., Traffic Dept., Indian State Railways (not over 25), Telegraph Dept., and Military Nursing Service (age 25 to 32).

The patronage of the Local Governments is considerable, but no one who is not a native, a covenanted civilian, or an officer of the Indian Army can be appointed to a post of over Rs. 200 a month without the sanction of the Government of India—the departments excepted from this rule being: Opium, Salt, Customs, Survey, Mint, Public Works, and Police.

Pay, Leave, and Pension Regulations of the Indian Services are contained in the Civil Service Regulations, of which a summary appears in the India Office List, published by Messrs. Harrison, 45, Pall Mall, S.W. This volume also contains the full regulations regarding Indian appointments.

* Certain heads in the above tables of gross revenue and expenditure and also the grand totals have been affected by recent changes in the form of the Indian accounts:
(1) Working expenses of railways are no longer treated as expenditure, but as a deduction from revenue;
(2) Transactions of District Boards and certain other local bodies are now excluded;
(3) Interest charges have been redistributed between ordinary and railway and irrigation debt;
(4) Marine receipts and charges, other than for Ports and Pilotage, have been transferred to Army Services.

GROSS AND NET REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.—The statement of Gross Revenue and Expenditure exhibits all revenue receipts and payments therefrom, except that railway working expenses are deducted from revenue. A clearer view of the financial position is obtained from the following statement of Net Revenue and Expenditure, in which departmental receipts, which are a set-off against expenditure, have been deducted, as also railway interest charges, interest charges and working expenses of irrigation works, refunds and assignments, cost of cultivating and manufacturing opium, &c.

In 1907-8 there was a surplus of Revenue over Expenditure of £306,000, in 1908-9 a deficit of £3,738,000, and in 1909-10 (revised estimate) a surplus of £290,000.

CAPITAL EXPENDITURE.—In addition to the expenditure from revenue there was a capital outlay in 1908-9, not charged to revenue, of £9,488,000 on State Railways, and of £983,000 on Irrigation Works.

BURDEN OF TAXATION.—If taxation proper be divided among the population of British India, without allowing for certain portions of Salt, Excise, and Customs duties which fall on persons in the native States, the burden in 1909-10 was 1*s.* 9*d.* per head, or, if land revenue (which is equivalent to rent) be added, 3*s.* 5½*d.* per head. In 1910 the burden of taxation was enhanced by additions to certain import duties and stamp duties.

DEBT AND ASSETS.—On 31st March, 1910, the debt of India amounted to £267,331,000, viz., Sterling Debt, £176,106,000, and Rupee Debt (converted into sterling at 1*s.* 4*d.* the rupee), £91,225,000. Miscellaneous obligations (Savings Bank balances, &c.) amounted in addition to about £22,825,000. Up to the same date the Indian Government had devoted £121,606,000 to the construction of railways and £32,258,000 to the construction of irrigation works. It had purchased from companies, by cash payments, annuities, or the issue of India stock, nine railways, on which, at the time of purchase, £108,092,000 had been spent. It had lent £12,805,000 to Native States, corporations, agriculturists, &c., and had advanced £12,137,000 to railway companies. Other assets were the Gold Standard Reserve of £18,764,000, and the cash balances in India and England, £12,347,000 and £12,799,000 respectively. The assets of India exceed the liabilities. In 1909-10 a 3½ per cent. loan of £7,500,000 was raised in England, at 96½, and a 3½ per cent. loan of 2½ crores (£1,667,000) in India, at about 94. These loans were for railway purposes.

LAND REVENUE.—This is the oldest and the most important source of revenue. The State is the paramount landlord in India, and the land revenue is the State's share in the rent of the soil. In most of Bengal, about one-fourth of Madras, and part of Assam the land revenue has been permanently fixed; elsewhere generally the assessments, or settlements, are revised periodically (usually once in 20 or 30 years). The nature of the settlements varies in different provinces. In parts of Bengal and Bombay, the greater part of the United Provinces, the Punjab, the N.W. Frontier Province, and the Central Provinces the settlement is with large proprietors or proprietary village communities (zamindari), and the estate is assessed as a whole. Elsewhere (especially in Burma, Berar, Bombay and Sind, Assam, and most of Madras) the raiyatwari tenure prevails, and each raiyat, or peasant proprietor, holds direct from the State. In temporarily settled zamindari districts the land revenue usually amounts to about 50 per cent. of the rental paid to the landlord by the cultivating tenant, while in temporarily settled raiyatwari districts the revenue varies from 20 per cent. of the gross produce down to much smaller proportions, averaging about 8 per cent. Private improvements are exempt from assessment. The gross land revenue paid to the State in 1908-9 amounted to £20,850,000, of which £1,091,000 was due to irrigation and credited under that head.

THE OPIUM REVENUE.—Poppy may be grown only in parts of Bengal and the United Provinces and in the Central Indian (Malwa) native States. Except in these States the manufacture is a Government monopoly. In 1908-9 45,900 chests of Bengal opium were sold for export. The monthly auction sales at Calcutta realised £4,481,983, the expenses of production, &c., were £1,232,900, and the net receipts £3,249,083. In addition £1,399,617 (net) was derived from the duty (Rs. 600 a chest) levied in Bombay on Malwa opium. Most of the opium produced is exported to China and the Straits Settlements. Duty and licence fees on opium consumed in India (credited to Excise) yielded about £990,000. The total net opium revenue, therefore, was about £5,639,000. It has been decided to restrict the cultivation of opium in India in order to reduce exportation to China, on the understanding that China will reduce her own output.

EXCISE.—Licence fees and duties are levied on the sale of intoxicating liquors and drugs. The revenue, owing partly to stricter administration, and partly to enhanced duties, has greatly expanded in recent years, and amounted to £6,314,000 net in 1908–9. Reforms in excise administration are being effected.

CUSTOMS.—The net revenue was £4,725,000 in 1908–9. (For tariff see page 531.) Certain import duties were enhanced in February, 1910. The export duty on rice yielded £545,000, and the countervailing duty on Indian cotton goods £236,000.

INCOME TAX.—This is levied on non-agricultural incomes of Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000 at about 2 per cent., and on those above Rs. 2,000 at 2½ per cent. It yielded £1,544,000 (net) in 1908–9.

STAMPS.—Stamps yielded £4,294,000 (net) in 1908–9. About two-thirds of the revenue is from court fee and one-third from commercial stamps. Certain stamp duties were enhanced in 1910.

SALT.—The salt duty, which was Rs. 2½ a maund (82 lb.) before 1903 over practically the whole of India, was then reduced to Rs. 2. In 1905 it was reduced to Rs. 1½, and in 1907 to Re. 1. The rate for Burma remains as before at Re. 1. The consumption of salt has increased, owing to the reduction of duty, to 1,682,000 tons, yielding a net revenue of £3,009,000 in 1908–9.

FORESTS.—Over 94,000 square miles of forests are reserved and scientifically worked by the State, while about 144,000 square miles besides are under State control. They produced in 1908–9 a net revenue of £1,692,000. A third of the revenue comes from Burma.

TELEGRAPHS.—The length of telegraph wires on 31st March, 1909, was 280,955 miles, and the number of messages sent was 13,007,000. They yielded in 1908–9 a revenue of 1·51 per cent. on their capital cost of £7,097,000. In addition the Indo-European Telegraph Department gave a profit of 2·85 per cent. on its capital of £998,000. The Telegraph Dept. was reorganised in 1910.

POST OFFICE.—The Post Office, which in 1908–9 conveyed 875 millions of letters, postcards, newspapers, &c., and issued 24 millions of money orders, was worked at a net loss to Government of £71,000. Reductions in postal rates have recently become operative, and inland letter rates are the lowest in the world.

RAILWAYS.—Nearly all the railways in India are owned by the State and administered by a Railway Board, though many are leased to and worked by companies. The mileage open for traffic on 31st December, 1909, was 31,490, while the mileage under construction or sanctioned was 2,957. Of the mileage open about 52 per cent. was on the standard gauge (5½ ft.), and about 42 per cent. on the metre gauge. Up to the end of 1909 there was a capital outlay on open lines of £286,550,000. The net earnings of the railways in 1909 amounted to £13,786,000, equivalent to a return of 4·81 per cent. on the capital outlay. The number of passengers increased to 329 millions, but the goods traffic fell to 61 million tons. The net gain to the State on the working of the railways was £114,000 in 1909, as compared with a loss of £1,557,600 in 1908, after charging to expenditure interest on capital outlay of lines under construction and annuity payments in redemption of capital. The total expenditure on railways in 1908–9 was £10,051,000. Rates are very low, third class passengers travelling on the average nearly five miles for a penny. In 1908 a special committee of inquiry into the railways recommended the raising of larger loans for construction and equipment, so that £100,000,000 may be expended in the next eight years.

IRRIGATION.—The total capital outlay on State irrigation works up to 31st March, 1909, was £34,543,000, which, apart from the advantages to cultivators and protection against famine, yielded a profit to the State of about 6¾ per cent. The area irrigated was over 21 million acres, while the annual value of the crops raised is estimated at about 108 per cent. of the capital outlay. The Irrigation Commission of 1901–3 recommended the construction of further works estimated to cost eventually nearly £30,000,000. Three large canals in the Punjab, besides less important works, have been put in hand. Two-fifths of the irrigation revenue comes from the Punjab.

HOME CHARGES.—The net expenditure in England, chargeable to Revenue, amounted in 1908–9 to £18,323,000:—Interest on Railway Debt and Annuities, £8,191,000; Interest on Irrigation Debt, £109,000; Interest on and Management of Debt, other than that for Railways and Irrigation, £1,897,000; Stores, £1,282,000, of which £741,000 was for Marine and Military Stores; payments for British forces, troop service, &c., £1,096,000; Army non-effective charges, £3,044,000; Civil annuities, pensions, &c., £1,399,000; Furlough payments, civil and military, £937,000. The expenditure of the Indian Government in England is met by bills or telegraphic transfers drawn on India by the Secretary of State, and sold by him in London for sterling.

CURRENCY.—The principal coin in use is the silver rupee, containing 180 grains of fine silver and 15 grains of alloy. Up to 1893 the Indian Mints were open by law for the unrestricted coinage of silver into rupees. Owing, however, to the almost continuous fall in the value of the rupee from 1871 to 1893, legislation in the latter year closed the mints to the public, with a view to eventually fixing the exchange. For a time the rupee continued to fall, but subsequently it rose, and since January, 1898, has been practically stable at 1*s.* 4*d.* This rate has now a legal sanction, since an Act of 1899 makes the British sovereign legal tender in India at the ratio of 15 rupees to the sovereign, the rupee, however, remaining also legal tender to any amount. At the present low price of silver, the rupee at 1*s.* 4*d.* is worth much more than the value of the silver which it contains. For some years after 1893 the coinage of Indian rupees almost ceased, but in the five years ended 1907–8 there were large coinages. From 1900–1 to 1906–7, the whole, and in 1907–8 one-half, of the profit on silver coinage has been held as a special reserve—now called the Gold Standard Reserve—which is partly invested in England in sterling securities, for the purpose of maintaining the rate of exchange between England and India. On 31st March, 1910, the investments of this fund in sterling Government stocks amounted to over £13,219,000 (cost price), while £2,534,000 was held in India in rupees, and £3,011,000 in cash in England. India has a paper currency. The 5, 10, and 50 rupee notes are legal tender everywhere in India, but other notes only within their circles of issue. A nickel anna piece, adopted in 1906, has become popular. Copper coins are being replaced by bronze.

ARMY.—The Army in India consists, first, of British troops, about 78,000; and, secondly, of the native troops (largely Muhammadans), about 160,000 (for details see page 519). In addition, the native Army Reserves number 35,700 men, and the Imperial Service Troops furnished by native States contribute 20,000, including cavalry, transport corps, and sappers. Further, there are 37,040 European and Eurasian volunteers (efficients). For police duties and frontier service the regular military is supplemented by frontier militia and local levies. During the period (1902–9) while Lord Kitchener was Commander-in-Chief, considerable changes were effected in the organisation and training of the Army. On 1st June, 1907, there was a redistribution of the Army of India, which now consists of the Northern and Southern Armies, each under a general officer and staff. The Northern Army includes five divisions and three independent frontier brigades, while the Southern comprises four divisions and the Burma and Aden garrisons. The artillery has been increased. Factories for making rifles, cordite, and gun carriages have been erected. The transport service has been improved. A Staff College has been established at Quetta. Additions to soldiers' pay and enlarged expenditure on artillery, barracks, coast and frontier defences, stores, transport, factories, &c., have increased the net military expenditure (including marine) from £15,474,000 in 1900–1 to £19,603,000 in 1908–9. During 1910–11 there will be increased expenditure on ammunition columns, re-armament of the artillery, formation of signal companies, purchase of short rifles, &c. A General Staff is in process of formation. The health of the Army has greatly improved in recent years. Ague is the chief cause of sickness among British troops, and enteric fever the chief cause of death. The trooping service between England and India is carried out by hired steamers, under the superintendence of the Admiralty.

The ROYAL INDIAN MARINE consists of the four troopships given below, four other steamers of about 1,000 tons each, and smaller craft for harbour and river navigation, surveying, and submarine mining. The principal officers and troopships of the R.I.M. are as follows:—

Director R.I.M., and Resident Transport Officer, Bombay, Capt. W. Lumsden, R.N., A.D.C. Rs. 2,500
Deputy ditto (Calcutta), Capt. G. S. Hewett.
Assist. ditto (Bombay), Capt. A. W. McArthur.

EDUCATION has benefited by larger grants for primary education. Increased attention is being given to primary, commercial, agricultural, and technical education. In State institutions education is secular. The institutions in 1908–9 numbered 168,129 and the scholars 5,981,146, including 783,514 females. Of the institutions, about 70 per cent. are maintained by the State or aided by grants, the remainder being private and unaided. There are five Universities, viz., those of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, and the Punjab. The Indian Universities Act of 1904 provides for a teaching system. Of the total expenditure on education in 1908–9, £4,397,552, £1,130,389 came from fees, and £2,364,414 from provincial revenues or local and municipal funds. The census of 1901 showed that only 1 male in 10 and 1 female in 144 can read and write.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT, municipal and rural, in its present form, is a product of British rule. The municipalities in 1908–9 were 717 in number, controlling a total population of 16,719,050, and receiving an income of £2,873,799 from rates and taxes (octroi, taxes on houses and lands, water, lighting, and conservancy rates, &c.) and £1,157,730 from other sources (excluding loans). The members of municipal bodies are chiefly natives and non-official. In almost all districts in British India there are local district boards, partly representative. Nearly one-half of their total expenditure of £3,618,549 in 1908–9 was devoted to civil works, over one-fifth to education, and the remainder largely to sanitation and hospitals.

JUSTICE, POLICE, AND PRISONS.—There are about 9,000 officers exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction. Many of the superior and the great majority of the inferior officers are natives. In 1908 3,004,500 civil cases were decided; while 1,844,207 persons were tried, and 860,065 convicted, in criminal cases, of whom 494 were sentenced to death, 2,023 to penal servitude, and 174,190 to imprisonment. The strength of the police in 1908 was 11,122 officers and 166,426 men. There were 753 prisons, with a daily average of 101,980 prisoners, in 1908. At the convict settlement of Port Blair (Andamans) there were 13,305 prisoners on 31 March, 1909.

VITAL STATISTICS.—The statistics of births and deaths are defective, and the apparent increase in mortality in recent years is really due to completer returns. The recorded death rate for British India in the decennium ended 1908 ranged from 29·45 per 1,000 in 1901 to 38·91 in 1900. In 1908 it was 38·21. Fevers of various kinds are by far the commonest cause of death, cholera, dysentery and diarrhœa, small-pox, and (since 1896) plague, being other chief causes. The reported deaths from plague up to the end of 1909 were about 6,364,000 in India as a whole. About 22,000 people are annually killed by snakes. In 2,593 hospitals and dispensaries, maintained mostly from public funds, 27,076,000 patients were treated in 1908. The number of persons vaccinated was 9,123,000. According to the census of 1901 there were 97,340 lepers.

SURVEYS.—The Survey Department superintends forest and cadastral surveys, as well as trigonometrical and topographical surveys, special explorations, and map production. Marine, geological, and botanical surveys are in operation, while the archæological survey has been recently extended. The Meteorological Department is of great service in forecasting rainfall.

Among the countries constituting the British Empire, India comes second to the United Kingdom itself in the volume of its sea-borne trade, which is greater than that of Canada and Australia combined. During the last five years both imports and exports have on the average been twice as great as they were 25 years ago. The ordinary course of Indian trade shows yearly a large net export of merchandise and a net import of treasure. The above table exhibits the leading figures for the last five years in thousands of pounds sterling.

It will be observed that the year 1909–10 showed a recovery after the serious fall in 1908–9 as regards exports, which were of unprecedented magnitude. Imports of merchandise were below the level of 1908–9, although imports of cotton goods were larger by £1,124,000, and sugar increased. The imports of these articles had also been specially heavy in 1907–8. Imports of metals and metal manufactures, machinery, mineral oil, woollen goods, cotton yarn, salt, and railway materials showed a decline. Imports of treasure were unusually heavy. The imports of Government stores are mainly railway materials and army stores.

In the export trade, as the result of abundant harvests, there were enormous increases in raw cotton, pulses and millets, seeds, wheat, and rice, and less notable increases in cotton cloth, hides and skins, tea, and raw wool. In raw jute there was a large decline.

As will be seen, the great bulk of the imports consist of manufactured articles, while nearly 70 per cent. of the exports consist of food and raw materials.

The following table shows the distribution of Indian sea-borne trade in 1909–10 :—

Countries.	Private Merchandise only.
	Imports.	Exports.
Total Value (000 omitted)	£78,038	£125,150
	Per cent.	Per cent.
United Kingdom	62·5	26·3
China (including Hong Kong)	1·9	9·9
Germany	3·6	9·5
United States	3·1	7·6
France	1·5	6·5
Belgium	3·9	5·4
Japan	2·1	6·7
Straits Settlements	2·5	3·3
Austria-Hungary	2·3	3·5
Java	6·8	0·8
Ceylon	0·6	3·8
Italy	1·0	3·2
Mauritius	2·1	0·5
All other countries	6·1	13·0

In imports, the United Kingdom comes easily first with nearly two-thirds of the total, while all others, except Java, sent less than 4 per cent. In exports the United Kingdom is much less prominent, on account of the wide demand for India's raw produce for food and manufactures.

About 65 per cent. of India's total trade is with Europe, and about 23 per cent. with Asia.

Customs Duties.—Under the Indian Tariff Act, most goods imported pay a duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem. Cotton yarn and thread are exempt from duty; but the tax on other cotton goods is 3½ per cent., a corresponding Excise duty being levied on those woven in Indian mills. There are special duties on arms and ammunition, which are taxed mainly for police purposes. Enhanced duties were imposed in February, 1910, on spirits, wines, tobacco, petroleum, and silver. Spirits pay generally Rs. 9.6 a gallon, salt Re. 1 a maund (82 lb.), and refined petroleum 1½ annas a gallon. Iron and steel goods pay one per cent. Silver is dutiable at 4 annas an ounce. Machinery, coal, raw cotton and wool, grain, oilcake, manures, living animals, unmanufactured tobacco, quinine, gold, precious stones and pearls, and a few other articles are duty-free. There is an export duty of 3 annas per maund on rice. The Government of India have adopted an attitude of strong opposition to preferential tariff proposals. They point out that two-thirds of India's imports come from the United Kingdom, while among the remainder are many articles which this country cannot produce. The exports are chiefly commodities that are untaxed or lightly taxed in foreign countries, and if retaliatory imposts were levied on these India's trade would decline and her capacity to meet her financial obligations abroad would be impaired.

Shipping.—In 1909–10 the number of vessels which entered from and cleared to foreign countries rose to 8,042, with a tonnage of 14,597,091 tons. Of this tonnage, approximately three-fifths was from or to the United Kingdom and British possessions; and 80 per cent. of the total trade of India was under the British flag.

Ports.—The chief ports are Calcutta and Bombay, which together do about 70 per cent. of the foreign trade. Next come Rangoon, Karachi, Madras, and Chittagong. These ports are administered by port trusts having wide powers, but subject to Government supervision.

Foreign Land Trade of India.—As registration is difficult, the statistics are of doubtful accuracy, and they include much that is really trade with border tracts administered by, or States subject to, the Indian Government. The most important countries are Afghanistan, Nepal, and the Shan States. The total frontier trade in merchandise and treasure has been as follows :—

	Imports. 000 omitted.	Exports. 000 omitted.	Total. 000 omitted.
1908–9	5,526	4,640	10,166
1909–10	5,638	4,545	10,183

Agriculture is by far the most important occupation of the people of India. Out of a surveyed area of 623 million acres in British territory in 1908–9, 268 millions were cropped or fallow, 113 millions cultivable waste, 158 millions not cultivable, and 82 millions under forests. The total area cropped was 246 million acres, of which about 8½ per cent. was under wheat, 30 per cent. under rice, and 41 per cent. under other food-grains and pulses, 6 per cent. under oilseeds, and 7 per cent. under cotton, jute, and other fibres. The area under wheat has been considerably increased by the aid of irrigation in the Punjab and United Provinces. The cultivation of jute has been extraordinarily profitable. Sugar, spices, tea, opium, and tobacco are other important crops. The cultivation of indigo has greatly declined. The agricultural departments (central and provincial), which have been much developed since 1906, supply information as to crop prospects, new staples, manures, crop experiments, implements, cattle-breeding, &c., and distribute seeds. Owing to the increasing world demand for raw cotton, great efforts are being made to cultivate a superior long-stapled cotton in India.

Minerals.—The output of the coal mines in India in 1909 was 11,890,000 tons. The production has much increased in recent years. Eleven-twelfths of the total comes from Bengal. The production of crude petroleum in India (chiefly Burma) has increased from 19 million gallons in 1898 to 230 millions in 1909. The production of salt in 1909 was 1,189,000 tons. The output of manganese ore in recent years has been much increased, but there was a fall in 1908 to 431,000 tons. About 20,000 tons of saltpetre are produced annually and exported. The yield of gold (nearly all from Mysore) was about 674,000 oz. in 1909. There is a considerable output and export of mica, and a fluctuating output of rubies and jade stone.

Manufactures.—In India the ancient village handicrafts still survive, though they suffer more and more from the competition of machine-made goods. Cotton-weaving is by far the most important hand industry. Power mills have grown up under European auspices, but are now largely owned by natives. The 232 cotton mills at work in 1908–9, mostly in Bombay and Ahmedabad, representing a capital of about £13,682,000, contained 5,945,000 spindles and 74,000 looms. Up-country cotton mills have increased. The production in 1908–9 was 658 million lb. of yarn (mostly of low counts) and 192 million lb. of woven goods. There is a tendency to produce finer yarns, and to pay more attention to weaving. The 52 jute mills, situated in or near Calcutta, with a capital of £7,414,000, contained 607,358 spindles and 29,525 looms. There were, in 1908, 5 woollen and 9 paper mills, 24 breweries, and various other factories. Owing to complaints of long hours in mills a new Factory Bill has been introduced, restricting the hours of adult males to 12, of women to 11, and of children to 6 per day.

NATIVE STATES OF INDIA.

THE Native or Feudatory States, whose chiefs are in subordinate alliance with, or under the suzerainty of, the King-Emperor, comprise about two-fifths of the area, but only one-fifth of the population of India. Their administration, with a few unimportant exceptions, is not under the direct control of British officials, but it is subject, in varying degrees, to the Supreme Government. The chiefs are entitled to British protection, but have no power of making war and peace, or of sending ambassadors to one another or to foreign States; the military force they maintain is strictly limited; no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction; and in case of misrule the Supreme Government can dethrone the chief or temporarily suspend him from the exercise of his powers. In matters of Imperial interest, trade, main lines of railway, &c., the Supreme Government has jurisdiction. Some States pay tribute, most do not. Generally speaking, the States are governed by their native Princes, Ministers, and Councils, with the advice of a political officer of the Supreme Government. This officer may have charge, as British Resident, of one large State, or may be the Agent for a group of States. A common characteristic of all native States, important or insignificant, is that in their territory British Indian law does not run. For them the Legislative Councils of the Governor-General or of the Provincial Governments cannot legislate; and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces have no jurisdiction.

The Assigned Districts of Mysore (Bangalore), Kalat (Quetta and Pishin), and Berar are still technically Native States territory. The Shan States, on the other hand, are technically part of British India, though administered by local Sawbwas or petty chiefs. Excluding these territories, the native States have a combined area of 679,393 square miles, and a population of 62,461,549. The aggregate revenues of the chiefs are about £15,000,000, out of which a tribute of £589,636 (£233,000 from Mysore) was paid to the Government of India in 1908-9. They maintain troops of inferior military organisation to the aggregate number of 85,000 men in addition to their Imperial Service troops, numbering

* The present chief has a personal salute of four, or, in the case of Palanpur, two, additional guns.

20,000 in 1910. Many treaties provide that States shall furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of native States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century. The States vary greatly in size and importance. Hyderabad is as large as Italy, and the Nizam enjoys a very large revenue. On the other hand, in Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom has led to minute subdivision, there are many chiefs of single villages. In the case of such petty estates the nominal chief may have some very limited magisterial powers, but the administration is regulated and carried on by the Supreme Government in its executive capacity. The amount of control thus exercised over a native State in its internal affairs depends on a number of considerations, and varies from State to State. The rulers have not necessarily any religious or tribal connexion with the majority of their subjects. Thus the Nizam of Hyderabad is a Muhammadan, but most of his people are Hindus. Although the native States, large and small, number 680, only about 200 are of any real importance. The majority represent the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Moghul Empire in the 18th century. The rulers of Gwalior, Indore, and Baroda are all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power. Most of these States are of more recent origin than the British power in India. Lord Curzon reformed the Chiefs' Colleges and inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles.

The salutes enjoyed by the native princes indicate their relative importance. Those with eleven guns or more are addressed as His Highness. On pages 532–3 are the names of 71 ruling chiefs who have salutes of eleven guns or more, with some particulars of their States. In each group the States are given in alphabetical order. Some well-known Indians of title, such as H.H. the Maharaja of Benares, G.C.I.E. (who is entitled to a salute of 13 guns), H.H. the Agha Khan, G.C.I.E., the Maharaja of Darbhanga, K.C.I.E., the Maharajah of Burdwan, K.C.I.E., and the Nawab of Dacca, K.C.S.I., are not ruling chiefs.

The native States may be thus classified:— 1. The Indo-Chinese group of States, and the numerous hill tribes of the N.E. frontier. 2. The aboriginal Gond and Kol tribes, under petty princes of aboriginal or Rajput blood, in Chota Nagpur, Orissa, the Central Provinces, and the Jaipur (Vizagapatam) Agency. 3. The Himalayan Hill States, west of Nepal (including Kashmir). 4. The numerous Afghan and Baluch tribes of the N.W. frontier, inhabiting the mountains from the north of Peshawar to the base of the Suleiman range, a distance of 800 miles. The names of some of these tribes, Waziris, Orakzais, Afridis, &c., have become familiar owing to the many expeditions against them. 5. Kalat (including Makran and Kharan) and Las Bela, with tribal areas in the possession of the Marri and Bugti tribes. 6. The Sikh States, in the Sirhind plain, south of the Sutlej. 7. The three northern Muhammadan States of Khairpur (Sind), Bahawalpur, and Rampur, from which Warren Hastings expelled the Rohillas in 1774. 8. The ancient sovereignties of Rajputana, lying between Sind and the United Provinces. 9. The States of Central India, lying to the north of the Nerbudda, and to the south and east of Rajputana. 10. Gujarat, including Kutch and the numerous petty chiefships of Kathiawar. 11. Baroda. 12. The Southern Mahratta States. 13. Hyderabad. 14. Mysore. 15. The Malayalim States of Travancore and Cochin, lying together in S.W. India.

The States of Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, and Kalat, and those belonging to the Rajputana and Central India Agencies, 175 in all, are under the direct supervision of the Governor-General in Council. Numerous minor States are under the supervision or control of various Provincial Governments. The States of first magnitude, which have a superior Resident, are Hyderabad, Mysore, Kashmir, Jaipur, Udaipur, Gwalior, Indore, Baroda, and Travancore and Cochin. Hyderabad is the premier State in India. Its capital, Hyderabad (448,466), is the fourth city in India in population. The important frontier State of Kashmir (capital, Srinagar, 122,618) was granted to Ghulab Sing by Lord Hardinge, after the First Punjab War (1846). It comprises Jammu, Kashmir, Ladakh, Gilgit, and Baltistan. The administration of the State has been much improved under the advice of the British Resident. A British force stationed at Gilgit watches the northern passes and controls the feudatory chiefships of Hunza and Nagar; while on the west the subordinate chiefship of Chitral is occupied by British troops, depending for their support on the Peshawar border. Of the Sikh States the most important is Patiala. Rajputana (pop. 9,723,301) extends some 460 miles from north to south, and is 530 miles in breadth. About half of the area is desert. It comprises 19 States of varying size and importance. Of these 16 are ruled by hereditary Rajput chiefs, two by Jat chiefs, and one by a Muhammadan. The Governor-General's Agent's headquarters are at Ajmer; he has under him Residents for Eastern and Western Rajputana, and about twenty other officers, distributed among the States to supervise the administration, and give advice when it is required. The most important States are Jodhpur (Marwar), Udaipur (Mewar), and Jaipur. The Rajput dynasties, the most ancient in India, go back before the Moghul Empire, and resemble feudal monarchies. A large part of the area of Jodhpur, Bikaner, and Jaisalmir is desert. The Central India States, although in the aggregate one-third less in extent than those of Rajputana are nearly four times as numerous. All but 11 are petty chiefships. The most important are Gwalior and Indore, which include between them one-half of the whole area. The 31 minor States of Bundelkhand (largest, Rewa) are in political relation with the Central India Agency. Bhopal, one of the principal Muhammadan States in India, is now for a fourth generation under female rule. In 1875 the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda was deposed, but the native administration was continued under an adopted heir. In 1881 Mysore, which had been administered by the Indian Government since 1831, was restored to native rule. The important States of Travancore and Cochin, attached to Madras Presidency, represent ancient Hindu dynasties. The former stands third in population among the native States, and is exceedingly prosperous. Their Christian population numbers about 900,000. Sikkim, a frontier State situated on the borders of Tibet, between Nepal and Bhutan, acknowledged the British protectorate in 1890, when also the boundaries of Tibet were defined by the Sikkim-Tibet Convention.

Countries within the Indian Sphere of Influence.

THE native States of Nepal and Bhutan, though in India, enjoy a large measure of independence, and may be most conveniently treated as within the Indian sphere of influence. Outside India, but within its sphere of influence, is Afghanistan. Great Britain declared in 1910 that no administrative changes in Tibet would be allowed to affect the integrity of Nepal or Bhutan, whose interests and rights England is prepared to protect. For French and Portuguese possessions in India, see pages 617 and 644.

Sovereign, H.H. Maharaja Dhiraja Prithvi Bir Bikram Jang Bahadur Shah Bahadur Shamsher Jang, b. 1875; succ. 1881. Salute in British territory, 21 guns.

Nepal (500 miles long by 100 miles broad; area, about 54,000 sq. miles; pop. about 4,000,000) lies between British India and Tibet on the S. slopes of the Himalayas, and includes, among other lofty peaks, Mt. Everest (29,141 ft.). Amid the wild, sterile mountains lie many fertile valleys. The lower hills are covered with jungle, in which wild animals abound. Rice, wheat, &c., are grown. Nepal is divided into four provinces and fifteen districts. In 1909-10 its exports to British India were £2,192,000, while its imports amounted to £1,076,000. The principal trade route is that between Katmandu and the Bengal frontier (76 miles). Nepal exports rice and other grains, oilseeds, ghi, cattle, jute, &c., and imports cotton goods and yarn, sugar, salt, spices, metals, &c. The revenue, realised chiefly from land rent, forests, customs, &c., is over £1,000,000. The aborigines are Mongolian in type, and their religion is Buddhism. The country was conquered in 1769 by the Gurkhas, who are Hindus and claim to be Rajputs. Their frequent aggressions led to a war with the British in 1814-6. Relations have now long been friendly. The policy of seclusion is, however, consistently followed by the native rulers. The real political power rests with the Prime Minister, who paid a most successful visit to England in 1908. The British Political Resident does not interfere in internal affairs, but the Indian Government control foreign relations. The army numbers about 45,000. By arrangement with Nepal, India obtains many fine recruits for its Gurkha regiments.

BHUTAN.

Bhutan (area, about 20,000 sq. miles; pop. about 250,000, mainly Buddhists) also lies on the S.E. of the Himalayas, and its products resemble those of Nepal. In 1863, owing to outrages on British subjects, portions of it were annexed to India, an annual allowance being paid by the Indian Government as compensation. By a treaty in 1910 this allowance was fixed at £6,667, and Bhutan agreed to be guided in its external relations by the advice of the British, who, however, will not interfere in its internal affairs. The former dual government of a spiritual chief and a temporal chief came to an end when the chief councillor and virtual ruler, known as the Tongsa Penlop (Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, K.C.I.E.), was chosen hereditary Raja in 1907. Bhutan's total trade with India in 1909-10 was £23,000. There is no British Resident.

CAPITAL, Punakha.

AFGHANISTAN.

Amir of Afghanistan and its Dependencies, His Majesty Siraj-ul-millat-wad-din Amir Habibullah Khan, G.C.M.G.; b. 1872, succ. October 7, 1901. Salute in British territory, 21 guns.

Afghanistan (called Khorassan by the natives) lies on the N.W. frontier of India. Its area is estimated at 246,000 sq. miles, and its population at 5,000,000. It is bounded on the W. by Persia (boundary fixed 1857 and 1904), on the S. by Baluchistan (boundary fixed 1896-7), on the N. by Asiatic Russia (boundary fixed 1886-7 and 1893-5), and on the E. by the Punjab and N.W. Frontier Province (boundary fixed 1895). The northern boundary runs from Zulfikar on the Persian frontier to Kushk, the Russian railway terminus on the branch line from Merv, and thence N.E. to the Oxus, which forms the boundary from Khamiab to Lake Victoria, whence the line to the Chinese frontier was fixed by the Pamir agreement of 1895. The Indo-Afghan frontier was settled by the Durand agreement of 1903. On this frontier from the Pamirs to the Gomal Pass are many Pathan tribes, who are much influenced by mullahs.

Mountains, chief among which are the Hindu Kush, cover three-fourths of the country, the elevation being generally over 4,000 feet. There are three great river basins, the Oxus, the Helmand, and the Kabul. The climate is dry, with extreme temperatures in winter and summer. The population is very mixed. The Afghans (or Duranis) have been predominant since 1747, especially in Kandahar; next come the Ghilzais (military and commercial) and the Tajiks (aboriginals, who are cultivators or retail traders). All are Sunni Muhammadans, except the Hazaras and Kizilbashes, who belong to the Shiite sect. The national tongue is Pushtu.

Afghanistan is divided into six provinces, Kabul, Kandahar, Herat, Turkestan, Farrah, and Badakshan (with Kafiristan and Wakhan), which are under governors, with subordinate nobles and judges, police, and revenue officers. The late Amir (1880-1901) established a strong central government, and introduced a regular civil and military organisation, including offices for public works, posts, police, finance, trade, &c. He first formed a national army, paid and controlled by himself, with transport services, &c. It comprises about 70,000 regulars and 20,000 irregulars, but lacks discipline and cohesion. Considerable quantities of rifles and artillery have been purchased in Europe under arrangements made with the Government of India. Factories for guns, rifles and ammunition, and for various commercial products, have been erected in Kabul. The Afghan laws are Islamic sacred laws, tribal laws, and those of the Amir, who is the Court of Appeal. The law is bulky and the criminal law severe. Recently steps have been taken to develop education, hitherto controlled by the Mullahs. Most of the people are industrious cultivators, and the country has become fairly settled, peaceful, and prosperous. There is excellent irrigation and all profitable soil is utilised. There are generally two crops a year, one of wheat (the staple food), barley, or lentils, the other of rice, millet, maize, and dal. Afghanistan is rich in fruits. Sheep and transport animals are bred. Silk, woollen, and hair cloths and carpets are manufactured. Salt, copper, coal, iron, lead, rubies, and gold are found. The roads are generally unsuitable for wheeled traffic, but have lately been improved, particularly where they may serve military purposes. Goods are conveyed by pack-animals. The trade of Afghanistan with India in 1909–10 was over £2,261,000. The exports to India are mainly fruits and nuts, raw wool, and ghi; while the imports therefrom are chiefly cotton yarn and piece goods, metals, leather goods, tea, and sugar. The Afghan customs duties are heavy. The chief trade routes to India are the Khaibar Pass, from Kabul to Peshawar (191 miles), and the road from Kandahar to Quetta (125 miles). The Sind-Pishin railway terminates at Chaman, on the frontier, 65 miles from Kandahar, from which a fine road of 318 miles runs to Kabul. There is a large export of wool to Persia and Russia, cotton and silk goods, sugar, &c., being taken in exchange. Russia gives bounties and rebates. The annual revenue is unknown, and consists largely of payments in kind. It may amount to £900,000, including the subsidy of £120,000 a year from the Government of India. There are taxes on land, a grazing tax, customs duties, stamps, fines, poll-taxes, receipts from State lands, monopolies, and factories, and mining royalties.

By agreement with the Amir, the "buffer State" of Afghanistan has no foreign relations with any Power except the Government of India. In all other respects it is independent, and the rule of the Amir despotic. The modern history of Afghanistan dates from 1881, when Abdurrahman, the late Amir, was recognised as ruler. As the result of a British mission to Kabul in 1904–5 the engagements which had existed with the late Amir since 1880 were renewed by the treaty of 21 March, 1905. Under this treaty the British Government engaged to refrain from interference in internal affairs, but promised to preserve the safety and integrity of Afghanistan against any unprovoked attack, provided that the Amir acted as a friend and ally, and followed unreservedly the British Government's advice in all his external relations. The Amir visited India in 1907. By the Anglo-Russian Convention of August, 1907, Russia declared Afghanistan outside the Russian sphere of influence, and engaged to conduct all her political relations with Afghanistan through Great Britain. Great Britain declared her intention not to change the political status of Afghanistan, to exercise only a pacific influence, and not to take or encourage measures that might threaten Russia. After reciting the treaty with the Amir in 1905 Great Britain engaged not to annex or occupy any part of Afghanistan in contravention of that treaty. It was agreed that specially designated Russian and Afghan frontier officials might establish direct relations for settling local non-political questions, and that Great Britain and Russia should enjoy equality of commercial facilities.

There is a native British Agent (a Muhammadan) at Kabul. The Amir has an agent with the Government of India, and an agent at Peshawar, and also commercial agents in England and India.

CAPITAL, Kabul (about 150,000). The chief commercial centre is Kandahar (30,000). Other provincial capitals are Herat (12,000) and Tashkurgan (17,000).

Foreign Countries Contiguous to India.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—For three centuries England has taken the lead in Persian Gulf trade. She has suppressed piracy, slavery, and inter-tribal warfare on land and sea, made surveys, and laid down buoys and cables. England and India still have the lion's share of the trade, though there has recently been German competition. The bulk of the trade is conducted by Indians, who make Bombay their entrepôt. The Arabian shores are low-lying deserts, the Persian coasts mountainous; while at the head of the Gulf are great alluvial plains. The heat is intense in summer. Natural harbours are few. The southern shores are Turkish from Katif Town up to the vicinity of Koweit, and beyond those limits as far as Basra.

Bahrein (capital, Manama), governed by Sheikh Esa and under the protectorate of the Indian Government, is the largest of a group of islands half-way up the Gulf, near the Arab coast (El Katr). It is the head-quarters of extensive pearl fisheries, and a distributing centre for the adjacent mainland. Pearls are the only notable export; rice, cotton goods, dates, and spices the chief imports. In 1909–10 the value of the exports was £1,170,000, and of the imports £1,895,000. The people (about 90,000) are Muhammadans. The Sheikh has been in treaty relations since 1820 with the Government of India, which has a Political Agent at Bahrein. In 1880 he engaged not to make treaties with any other State.

The independent tribes on the Pirate (Arab) Coast from Ras-el-Kheima to Odeid are bound under treaties with the Indian Government (dating from 1820, and confirmed in 1853 by a Treaty of Perpetual Peace) to maintain a maritime truce for the prevention of piracy and slavery, and for the cessation of hostilities at sea. Hence their chiefs are sometimes called the "Trucial" chiefs. The British Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, stationed at Bushire, is the recognised arbiter and adviser of these tribes, and peace is maintained by the British flag. The trade of the Arab coast ports largely consists in exports of pearls to India vid Lingah and Bahrein.

Important caravan routes converge at Koweit, the proposed terminus of the Baghdad railway, which has an excellent harbour, recently buoyed by the British India Steam Navigation Company, whose steamers call fortnightly. The Sheikh of Koweit (Mubarak bin Sabah) is under treaty obligations with the Indian Government in respect of Koweit and its vicinity.

The Sultan of Omân (Muscat) is in treaty relations with, and subsidised by, the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at his Court (see page 639).

In the negotiations connected with the Anglo-Russian Convention of 1907 the policy of Great Britain was declared to be the preservation of the status quo and the maintenance of British trade, and Russia did not deny the special interests of Great Britain in the Gulf.

PERSIA borders on Baluchistan and Afghanistan. The demarcation of the Perso-Baluch frontier, partially carried out in 1872 and 1895, was completed in 1905 by Col. McMahon. A railway was opened in 1905 from Quetta to Nushki, whence there is a caravan route (478 miles), with wells, rest-houses, telegraph, &c., to Persian Seistan, but traffic is small. In Persia consular officers representing British and Indian interests work side by side. By the Anglo-Russian Convention of August, 1907, S.E. Persia, east of a line drawn from the Afghan frontier, viâ Gazik, Birjand, Kerman, and Bunder Abbas, is assigned as a region in which Russia will not seek political or commercial concessions (for railways, &c.), or oppose similar concessions supported by the British Government (see also pp. 640–642).

ASIATIC RUSSIA.—A portion of the Russian Empire, including the vassal State of Bokhara and part of the Pamir Region, is conterminous with Persia and Afghanistan. The Anglo-Russian Convention of 1907 recognises N.W. Persia as a region in which Russia has special interests, while Afghanistan is declared to be outside the Russian sphere of influence. The Russian Trans-Caspian Railway runs from Krasnovodsk, on the Caspian, viâ Merv, to Samarkand and Andijan, with a branch to Tashkent. The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kuskh on the Afghan frontier, opened in 1898, brings the Russian railways within 70 miles of Herat, and within 450 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railways. Another important strategic line connects Tashkent directly with the main Russian system at Orenburg. The Amu-Darya, or Oxus, which separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles, is navigated by Russian steamers. Russian territory stretches into the Pamir Region—the "Roof of the World"—a wind-swept, icy mountain-land, snow-bound for half the year. Its southern boundary was fixed in 1895 by the Anglo-Russian Pamir agreement.

CHINA.—India is in contact with two dependencies, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet, and one province, of China, Yunnan.

Chinese Turkestan is surrounded by the mountains of Tianshan, the Pamirs, and Kuenlun. There are three difficult passes into Russian Turkestan and two still more difficult ones into India. The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkestan has not been officially defined. Russia has special treaty rights in the dependency. There is a British consul at Kashgar (G. Macartney, C.I.E.). Trade with India, which has increased, is chiefly carried over the Karakoram Pass (18,500 feet) viâ Ladakh, in Kashmir.

Tibet, a plateau seldom lower than 10,000 feet, forms the northern frontier of India, from Kashmir to Burma, but is separated therefrom by the Himalayas. India imports from Tibet wool, borax, salt, living animals, and musk, in exchange for cotton and woollen goods, coral, and grain. The total trade in 1909–10 was about £201,000—a serious decline on 1908–9, due to political troubles. Trade passes from Bengal (through Sikkim) and from the Punjab and the United Provinces. Under the Anglo-Chinese Sikkim Convention of 1890, a trade mart was opened at Yatung; but as the Tibetans persistently disregarded the Convention, a political mission was despatched from India, with a military escort. It reached the capital, Lhasa, after a very arduous march and sharp fighting, on 3 August, 1904. A new Convention was signed (7 Sept.), providing for the erection of boundary pillars between Sikkim and Tibet; for trade marts, with British and Tibetan agents, at Gyantse and Gartok as well as at Yatung, and for unrestricted traffic by existing routes; and for payment of an indemnity. The Tibetans pledged themselves not to alienate any territory or grant concessions to, or permit the intervention of, any foreign Power. By the Convention of Peking (April, 1906) China accepted the Conventions of 1890 and 1904, and declared that no foreign State should interfere in Tibet, while England also undertook not to interfere in the administration of Tibet or annex territory. By the Anglo-Russian Convention of Aug., 1907, both Powers recognised the suzerain rights of China in Tibet, agreed to maintain its territorial integrity, to refrain from intervention in its internal administration, to treat with Tibet only through the Chinese Government, not to send representatives to Lhasa, not to assign any territory to either Power, and not to obtain railway, mining, or other concessions; but direct relations between British commercial agents and Tibetan authorities under the Conventions of 1904 and 1906 are permitted. The new trade marts have been opened and trade regulations signed (1908). In Dec., 1905, the ruler of Tibet, the Tashi Lama, visited the chief cities in Northern India. The Dalai (or Sacred) Lama, who fled before the British advance on Lhasa, returned to Tibet in Jan., 1910. The Chinese had meanwhile strengthened their hold over the administration, despite the opposition of the Lamas, or monks, who resented the loss of their former seclusion and authority. In Feb., 1910, the Dalai Lama fled to India, pursued by Chinese troops. He was then deposed by the Chinese Emperor. The British Government refused the Dalai Lama's appeal for their intervention, but allowed him to remain at Darjiling.

Yunnan is a Chinese province to the N.E. of Burma. By Anglo-Chinese agreements of 1894 and 1897, a boundary was fixed between Burma and Yunnan, and arrangements were made about trade, extradition, &c. The boundary towards Assam is undefined. By an agreement of 1896 Great Britain and France agreed to share equally all privileges or advantages that might be conceded by China in Yunnan. Trade with Yunnan is chiefly by a difficult route from Bhamo, in Upper Burma. The direct trade was about £523,000 in 1909–10. Burma imports from Yunnan hides, &c., and exports raw cotton, cotton goods, and jade. A railway from Bhamo to Tēng-yuēh (130 miles) is under consideration. Tēng-yueh and Ssumao, near the Burma frontier, are treaty "ports." There are British consuls at Tēng-yuēh and Yunnan-fu (see p. 607).

FRENCH LAOS.—Through the cession of a portion of Laos by China in 1894, France obtained access to the left bank of the Mekong at a point where this river forms the boundary of the Shan States of Burma. The territory forms part of French Indo-China (see p. 618).

SIAM (see pp. 649–650) marches with Burma for many hundreds of miles through mountainous country, and considerable trade is carried on over this frontier, chiefly with Chiengmai, the imports being chiefly teak, cattle, and raw silk, and the exports cotton and silk goods. In 1909–10 the value of the total trade was £578,000. The boundary of Burma and N.W. Siam was demarcated in 1892–3. France in 1904 recognised the portion of Siam west of the Menam basin, including the Malay peninsula and adjacent islands, as within the British sphere of influence.

Imperial British Dominions.

THE following accounts of the Imperial Dominions have been revised by the various Governments, to whom the Editor begs to return his warmest thanks. He is also indebted to the valuable information contained in the "Colonial Office List." The Dominions are arranged Geographically, according to their position in Europe, Asia, Africa, North and South America, or Australasia.

Europe.

THE British Dominions in Europe, exclusive of the United Kingdom, the Isle of Man, and the Channel Islands, are Gibraltar, Malta, and Cyprus, and have a total area of about 3,700 square miles, and a population of nearly 500,000.

GIBRALTAR,

a rocky promontory, 3 miles in length and ¾ of a mile in breadth, and 1,439 feet high at its greatest elevation, near the southern extremity of Spain, with which it is connected by a low isthmus. It is about 14 miles distant from the opposite coast of Africa. Gibraltar was captured in 1704, during the war of the Spanish Succession, by a combined Dutch and English force, under Sir George Rooke, and ceded by the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713. Since that time it has remained continuously in possession of the British. Of the many attempts to retake it, the most celebrated was the great siege in 1779–83, when General Elliott, afterwards Lord Heathfield, held it for 3 years and 7 months against a combined French and Spanish force. The town stands at the foot of the promontory on the N.W. side. Gibraltar is a free port, and enjoys the advantages of an extensive shipping trade. During the year 1909 3,360 vessels entered, with a total tonnage of 4,896,174. The chief sources of revenue are the port dues, the rent of the Crown estate in the town, and duties on wine, spirits, tobacco, and beer. An enclosed harbour with three graving docks, capable of accommodating the largest battleships in the British Navy, has been completed. The estimated civilian population (1909) was 18,351.

The Governor is in command of the garrison, and exercises all the functions both of government and legislation; there being no executive or legislative council.

MALTA,

an island in the Mediterranean Sea, 58 miles from Sicily and about 180 from the African coast, about 17 miles in length and 9 in breadth, and having an area of 91½ square miles. The colony include also the adjoining island of Gozo, with an area o 24¾ square miles; COMINO—the site of the Sultan's disaster in 1889 and now a sanitar station—and several islets. The civil popula tion of the whole group, 1 April, 1910, wa estimated at 215,879. In religion the Maltese ar Roman Catholics. The lower orders are mainl Punic in race. The Maltese dialect, which i generally spoken, is of Semitic origin, and is hel by some to be derived from the Carthaginian an Arabic tongues. The upper classes are mostl descendants of those who sought the protectio of the Order of St. John during the Middl Ages, from all parts of Southern Europe. The speak English and Italian. There is a Maltes order of nobility consisting of 29 families. Th islands are highly cultivated. The chief produc are corn, oranges, melons, grapes, forage, cummi seed, onions, and potatoes; figs and honey ar plentiful. It was estimated that in 1909–10 th area under cultivation in Malta and Gozo w about 41,037 acres. On census day, 1901, 5,4 females were employed in making lace. Th principal occupation of the people is in conne tion with shipping. In 1901 there were 30,7 persons living in Valletta, but the total popul tion of the colony was 1,671 to the square mil

The principal harbour is one of the finest in the world; it is very deep, and large vessels can anchor alongside the shore. It is an important port of call for vessels passing to and from the East and the Suez Canal, being about half-way between Gibraltar and Port Said. There is an extensive arsenal and important dockyard, Malta being the headquarters of the Mediterranean Fleet; and an additional graving dock was opened on Feb. 12, 1892. There is also a hydraulic dock, originally constructed by private enterprise, which has been taken over by the Admiralty. Two new dry docks and both arms of the breakwater at the mouth of the principal harbour have now been completed. The island is strongly fortified, and has a garrison which, on 31 March, 1910, consisted of 8,000 officers and men. The military expenditure for 1909–10 amounted to £513,636, of which £5,000 was contributed by the colony. The climate, although not tropical, is very hot in summer. The mean temperature for the summer months (June, July, August and September) is 75·7°. In winter the range is from 51·3° to 58°. In 1909–10 the highest temperature in the shade was 93°, and the lowest 42·2°. Citta Vecchia, the former capital of the island, contains the ancient palace of the courts of justice, the Cathedral, and the Seminary; its population has now dwindled to about 300, but its suburb, Rabato, had 7,194 inhabitants in 1901. Citta Vecchia has been entirely eclipsed in importance by the modern capital of Valletta, which was founded in 1566. Malta possesses a University and Lyceum; 99 elementary schools, 2 secondary schools, and 38 night schools, maintained at a total cost to the Government of about £40,400; in addition to which there are garrison schools, a Dockyard school, and about 120 private schools which receive no grants-in-aid from the Government.

The island of Malta is said to have been converted to Christianity on the occasion of the shipwreck of St. Paul in 58 A.D. In the Dark Ages it was taken by the Moors, its commerce was destroyed, and it was used mainly as a base for piratical expeditions. In 1090 it was again brought under Christian rule, being conquered by the Norman Count Roger of Sicily. For 440 years it followed the fortunes of that kingdom, but was in 1530 handed over to the Knights of St. John, who made of it a stronghold of Christianity. In 1565 it sustained the famous siege, when the last great effort of the Turks was successfully withstood by Grand Master La Vallette. The Knights expended large sums in fortifying the island and carrying out many magnificent works, until they were expelled by Napoleon in 1798. The Maltese rose against the French garrison soon afterwards, and with the assistance of some British and Neapolitan troops, compelled the French to capitulate in 1800. The islands were then ceded to Great Britain, the cession being confirmed by the Treaty of Paris of 1814. The government is administered by a Governor, who is usually a distinguished General, assisted by an Executive Council consisting of 11 official and 2 unofficial members, and by a Legislative Council, called the Council of Government—10 official and 8 elected members. The Governor is President in both.

In 1909–10 the Port of Valletta was entered by 2,992 vessels (tonnage, 3,755,095).

CYPRUS

is an island in the Mediterranean Sea, between N. lats. 34° 30′ and 35° 41′, and E. long. 32° 15′ and 34° 35′. It is about 60 miles distant from the nearest point of Asia Minor; and 41 miles from Latakia on the Syrian coast. The distance to Port Said, at the entrance of the Suez Canal, is 238 miles. The larger part of the island is an irregular parallelogram, 100 miles long and 60 to 30 broad; from which a narrow peninsula, 5 or 6 miles wide, runs out for 40 miles towards the north-east. The area is about 3,584 square miles. The population in 1901 numbered 237,022, of whom 21·64 per cent. were Mohammedans, and the remainder mostly members of the Orthodox Greek Church. Estimated population (1910) 261,587. The principal productions are grain of various kinds, sesame, linseed, wine and spirits, silk, olives, locust-beans (carobs), cotton, wool, hides, aniseed, sponges, sumac leaves, terra umbra, gypsum, and salt. The fertility of the soil has for centuries been proverbial. In 1909 the wine export was 974,850 gals., and that of spirits 67,216 gals., the bulk of wine going to Egypt and the spirits to Turkey. The climate varies in different localities. In the plains the summer heat is very great, and the British troops suffered when first stationed in the island. Excellent summer quarters were, however, found in the hills; and, owing to the enforcement of various sanitary measures, the death-rate of the whole island is nearly as low as that of any European country.

Cyprus still forms part of the Ottoman Empire; but by virtue of a treaty made between England and the Porte, dated 4 June, 1878, the government is administered by England for so long a time as Batoum and Kars may be kept by Russia. The inhabitants have been granted a political franchise, every man paying direct taxes having a vote. The government is administered, under the Colonial Office, by a High Commissioner, assisted by a Legislative Council composed of eighteen members, six being official and twelve elected. The island is divided into three electoral districts, each returning one Mohammedan and three Christian members.

For administrative and legal purposes it is divided into six districts. In each district the executive government is represented by a commissioner; and each has a Court of Law presided over by an English judge, who is assisted by two native judges, one being a Christian and the other a Mohammedan. There is also a Supreme Court for the whole island, consisting of two English judges.

The amount payable to the Sublime Porte yearly is £87,800 for revenue, £5,000 in compensation for State lands, and 4,166,220 okes of salt in kind (an oke = 2·8 lb.). This sum is not actually paid to the Sultan, but is retained as part payment of the loss sustained by England and France in paying the deficiency on the Guaranteed Turkish Loan of 1855.

The capital is Nicosia (Lefkosia), near the centre of the island, with a population of 16,227 in 1910; the other principal towns are Larnaca (population 8,760), Limassol (9,127), Famagusta (4,253), Kyrenia (1,469), and Papho (3,447).

Important works at Famagusta have rendered the inner harbour accessible to steamers, and a narrow-gauge railway connecting the harbour with the capital (36 miles) was opened in 1905, and has been extended westwards to Morphou, a total of 60 miles. There is a regular service of steamers from Egypt, leaving Port Said every Wednesday.

Asia.

THE Imperial British Dominions in Asia include the Empire of India and its Dependencies (see pp. 505–537), and the following Islands and Settlements.

CEYLON,

an island in the Indian Ocean, to the south-east of the peninsula of Hindustan, is situated between 5° 53½′—9° 50′ N. lat. and 79° 48′—81° 52′ E. long. Its area is (with outlying islands) 25,481 square miles, or more than three-fourths of that of Ireland. Its greatest length is from north to south, 270 miles; and its greatest width 140 miles.

The climate varies with the altitude of the district; but on the whole, though tropical, it is healthy, except in the low-lying jungle. The coolest months are December and January; the hottest are April and May.

The estimated population on December 31, 1908, was 4,038,456, the most important element being the Sinhalese, descendants of colonists from the valley of the Ganges, who first settled in the island about B.C. 543. In 1507 the Portuguese landed in Ceylon and formed settlements along the coast; but about 150 years later they were dispossessed by the Dutch. In 1796 the British took possession of the Dutch settlements on the island, and annexed them to the Presidency of Madras; but five years after, in 1801, Ceylon was erected into a separate Crown colony. In 1815 the King of Kandy was deposed and banished; and his dominions, which had up to that time maintained their independence of European rule, were annexed to the British Crown.

The staple products of the islands are agricultural. The most important for home consumption is rice in its two forms of padi and dry grain. The principal exports are tea, coffee, and products of the coco-nut palm, cinchona, rubber, cocoa, cinnamon, cardamoms, ebony, and a little vanilla.

About one-fourth of the island is under cultivation, and the leading areas in 1909, in acres, were:—Rice, 678,194; other grain, 104,554; tea, 535,691; coffee, 1,769; coco-nuts, 1,035,863; rubber, 154,460; cinchona, 263; cinnamon, &c., 47,906; cocoa, 36,324; and tobacco, 15,108. Among the more important native industries are gold, silver, ivory and tortoise-shell work, pottery, mats, fans, and wood-carving. Ceylon is famous for precious stones, especially cateseye, rubies, &c.; and the pearl fishery in the Gulf of Mannar, off the N.W. of the island, yielded a revenue of Rs.2,405,645 in 1905. The manufacture of salt is a Government monopoly, and yielded in 1909 a revenue of Rs.1,520,647.

There are 567 miles of railway open, 500 being 5 ft. 6 in. gauge and 67 miles 2 ft. 6 in.; and in 1909 the post and telegraph offices numbered 417, there being 4,292 miles of telegraph wire.

The Government of Ceylon is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 5 members, and a Legislative Council of 18 members, including the Governor and the Executive Council. The Legislative Council contains representatives of the principal races and interests in the island.

For administrative purposes the island is divided into 9 provinces, at the head of each of which is a Government agent. The larger towns have municipalities or local boards; and in the country districts the natives retain their village councils and tribunals for matters of minor importance.

The MALDIVE ARCHIPELAGO lies to the S.W. of Ceylon, a few degrees north of the equator. Malé, the seat of government, is about 400 miles distant from Ceylon, to which the islands have always been nominally tributary. The Sultan acknowledges his allegiance by sending an annual embassy to Colombo. The natives are Mohammedans. The islands are unhealthy, and the main exports are dried fish, cowry shells, 0000-nut coir, and tortoiseshell.

Colombo, distant 6,300 miles; transit, 16 days.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

The Settlements forming what is known as the Colony of the Straits Settlements have an entire area of about 1,660 square miles. The population in 1901 was 572,249, exclusive of Labuan, Cocos, and Christmas Island (Singapore, 228,555; Penang, Prov. Wellesley and Dindings, 248,207; Malacca, 95,487). The great bulk of the population consists of Chinese and Malays. On March 10, 1909, the former Siamese States of Kelantan, Trenganu, Keda, and Perlis were transferred to the British Government and annexed to the Straits Settlements, in return for the abrogation of certain extra-territorial rights in Siam. These States have an area of about 15,000 square miles and a population of close on 500,000.

The Government consists of a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council of 7 members, and a Legislative Council of 8 official and 7 unofficial members, appointed by the Crown. Two of the unofficial members are nominated by the Chambers of Commerce at Singapore and Penang respectively. The Resident Councillors of Penang and Malacca have seats in both Councils. The law of the colony is the common and statute law of England as it was in 1826, qualified by Indian Acts until 1867 and since then by local ordinances. The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and four puisne judges, and constitutes also a court of appeal, from which there is yet another appeal in certain cases, viz., to the Privy Council. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court includes that of a Colonial Court of Admiralty. There are also in each Settlement and in Labuan district courts with limited civil and criminal jurisdiction, and the usual police magistrates' and coroners' courts.

The climate of the colony is almost uniform throughout the year, and foliage is perennial. The rainfall in 1908 amounted in Singapore to 85·44 inches, in Penang to 111·26 inches, and in Malacca to 72·2 inches.

The exports comprise—gutta-percha, gambier, pepper, india-rubber, horns, hides, canes, sugar, rice, sago, tapioca, spices, dye-stuffs, copra, rattans, coffee, tobacco, gums, tin, &c.

The chief imports are rice, cotton piece goods, opium, petroleum, and coal.

SINGAPORE is an island situated off the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula, from which it is separated by a narrow strait about three-quarters of a mile in width; its length is about 27 miles, and its breadth 14 miles; it comprises, with the adjoining islets, an area of 206 square miles. It was first occupied in 1819, and formally ceded to the British Government by the Sultan of Johore in 1824. The seat of government for all the settlements is the town of Singapore, situated on the south side of the island in lat. 1° 16′ N. and long. 103° 53′ E., with 228,500 inhabitants in 1901. The harbour, in the extent of its shipping, is one of the greatest ports in the world, being a port of call for vessels trading between Europe or India and the Far East, the North of Australia, and the Netherlands Indies, and is strongly defended. The Tanjong Pagar docks and wharves were taken over by Government in 1905 at a cost (fixed by arbitration) of $29,000,000, and extensive works for their improvement and for the improvement of the harbour are now in progress. The trade returns for 1908 (including inter-settlement trade) amounted to $422,071,477, the value of exported tin being $33,477,542.

The number of merchant vessels entered and cleared in 1908, exclusive of native craft, was 10,348, with a tonnage of 13,933,205. The total for the whole colony was 18,495, with a tonnage of 21,750,245. The total native craft entered at all four ports, Singapore, Penang, Malacca, Labuan, during the same year was 17,747 (tonnage, 723,536). The climate is fairly healthy for Europeans, except for the absence of any marked change of temperature throughout the year. It is a free port; no duties are levied upon anything except opium, spirits, wines, and beer consumed in the colony. The opium and spirit trades are farmed out to Chinese, and the Chinese element is conspicuous among the trading classes.

LABUAN is an island of the Malayan Archipelago, situated about 6 miles off the north-west coast of Borneo, in 5° 16′ N. lat. and 115° 15′ E. long., and forms part of the Settlement of Singapore. Its area is about 31 square miles; and its population is 8,286. It was ceded to Great Britain by the Sultan of Brunei in 1846, being at that time uninhabited. The island has a fine harbour, and possesses extensive coal-mines, which are now being developed, the annual export being nearly 50,000 tons. The exports consist of cloth, rice, sago, earthenware, brassware, &c. Victoria Harbour, in the south-east, is the principal inlet, and affords good anchorage. There is a cable station of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company on the island. Imports (1908) $1,129,278; exports, $1,146,327.

Resident, M. S. H. McArthur.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND, in the Indian Ocean, about 200 miles South-west of Java, and 700 miles East of the Cocos-Keeling Islands, has an area of about 56 square miles and a population about 1,200. A District Officer is stationed on the island, which contains enormous phosphate deposits worked by the Christmas Island Phosphate Company. The amount exported in 1908 was 109,097 tons.

THE COCOS-KEELING ISLANDS are a group of about 20 small islands about 700 miles South-west of Sumatra, and form part of the settlement of Singapore. The population is about 700, and the island exports about 800 tons of copra. There is a station of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company on Direction Island.

PENANG is the northernmost of the Settlements. It includes Penang or Prince of Wales's Island (population, 1901, 128,830), on the eastern side of which is Georgetown, the port and capital, and the strip of mainland opposite, known as Province Wellesley (population 1901, 115,264), and the Dindings. Penang Island, about 15 miles long and 9 broad, is situated off the west coast of the Malay Peninsula, in lat. 5° 28′ N., long. 100° 21′ E., and was ceded to the Government of India in 1786 by the Raja of the neighbouring territory, Kēdah. Area, 107 square miles. At the time it was founded, Penang was the only British settlement in further India; now it is the emporium for all the trade of the northern and more prosperous parts of Sumatra and the Malay Peninsula. Its aggregate trade for 1908 (including inter-settlement trade) amounted to $185,882,347; the export of tin from the port being $38,255,694 in 1908.

PROVINCE WELLESLEY is a strip of coast about 45 miles in length with an area of 288 square miles, ceded by the Raja of Kēdah in 1798, with some land S. of the Krian river acquired more recently. The province is in a high state of cultivation as compared with the neighbouring territory, containing rice, sugar, spices, tapioca and rubber plantations.

THE DINDINGS TERRITORY (area 260 square miles, population in 1901 4,113) is at present little developed; but it contains what is considered the best natural port on the western side of the peninsula. The headquarters are at Lumut, where a District Officer is stationed, and steamers call regularly at Pangkor. The territory comprises a group of islands (of which Pangkor is the largest); and a strip of the mainland on the west coast of the peninsula, cut out of the State of Pērak, and measuring about 22 miles long by about 10 miles in width.

MALACCA, the largest of the Settlements, situated on the western coast of the peninsula, between Singapore and Penang, and about 110 miles to the N.W. of Singapore, comprises an area of about 659 square miles. It is one of the oldest European settlements in the East, having been taken possession of by the Portuguese in 1511, and held by them till 1640, when the Dutch drove them out. In 1795 it was captured by the British, and retained till 1818, when it was restored to the Dutch; it finally became a British possession, in pursuance of the treaty with Holland, 17 March, 1824, being exchanged for the British settlements in Sumatra.

Aggregate trade, 1908 ..... $8,853,068
(Including tapioca, $1,473,423, exported in 1908.)
Singapore, distant 8,700 miles; transit, 22 days.
Penang, 20 days; and Malacca, 23 days.

THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES.

These States are situated on the mainland of the Malay Peninsula, and are closely connected with the Straits Settlements; they consist of the States of Pērak, Sēlangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, which have by treaty (1895) renewed their engagements with the British Government, and are administered under the advice of a British Resident General, who controls the Residents subject to the instructions of the High Commissioner, who is also Governor of the Straits Settlements.

The first three States are on the west coast, and extend from the border of Province Wellesley to that of the independent State of Johore. Pahang is on the east coast. All are governed by their native rulers under the above-mentioned control.

There are 590 miles of railway all constructed from revenue, including the Johore State Railway (120½ miles), which was opened for traffic on July 1, 1909, thus establishing through communication between Penang and Singapore. There are 2,100 miles of road, and 5,054 miles of bridle-paths, while the principal rivers are navigable for small boats. The chief export and source of revenue is tin, of which about seven-tenths of the world's supply is produced. Coffee, coconuts, sugar, rice, and rubber are extensively cultivated. The climate is very uniform, and may be described as hot and moist. There is no well-marked dry season, and the rainfall in the low country is about 95 inches. The average maximum shade temperature is 90°, and the minimum 70°.

The States maintain a highly efficient regiment of Sikh troops (the Malay States Guides), and are policed by a mixed force of Indians and Malays, officered by Europeans.

HONG KONG.

The Crown Colony of Hong Kong consists of a number of islands situated off the south-eastern coast of China, at the mouth of the Canton River, in 22° 10′—22° 34′ N. lat. and 113° 52′—114° 30′ E. long., and of a portion of the mainland.

Hong Kong was first taken possession of by Great Britain in January, 1841, and was formally ceded by the Treaty of Nankin in 1842, British Kowloon being subsequently acquired by the Peking Convention of 1860; and the "New Territories," being the southern part of the Kwangtung province, by a lease signed June 9, 1898. It is a military and naval station for the protection of British commerce. The island is about 10 miles long and from 2 to 6½ miles broad, with an area of rather more than 29 square miles; the whole colony comprises an area of about 390 square miles. The island lies close to the mainland, being separated at one point by a narrow strait (Lyeemoon) not more than a quarter-mile wide. The city of Victoria lies along the northern shore of the island, facing the mainland; and between the mainland and the city is the harbour, which is one of the finest in the world, with a water area of some 10 square miles. The port is free, and is fortified. It possesses excellent docks, capable of holding the largest vessels for the purposes of repair. There is a considerable ship repairing and construction industry. Shipping entered (1907) 18,013,307 tons; (1908) 17,323,965 tons; (1909) 17,379,143 tons.

The island is broken in shape and mountainous, the highest point being Victoria Peak, which is about 1,770 feet high. The Peak District is a favourite place of residence, and is reserved for Europeans. The hot season lasts from May to October. During the winter months, from November to March, the climate is cooler, drier, and more invigorating. The average daily maximum temperature ranges from 87° in July to 62° in February, and the average daily minimum temperature from 78° in July to 54° in February. The average annual rainfall is 85 in., of which not less than 65 in. are received between May and September, when the S.W. monsoon prevails.

Hong Kong is the centre of a vast trade in many kinds of produce, chiefly sugar, opium, flour, oil, amber, cotton, ivory, betel, sandal-wood, rice, tea, woollens, silks, salt, &c.

The population of the colony in 1909 was 428,883, of whom 408,409 are Chinese. The white residents, including naval and military, numbered 11,390.

Much encouragement is given by the Government to education in the colony. In 1908 there were 73 schools subject to Government supervision, attended by 6,178 pupils. A University is about to be established.

Hong Kong is a Crown colony, and its government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 8 members, together with a Legislative Council of 14 members, including himself and a representative from the Chamber of Commerce. There is also a Sanitary Board, partly elected, which controls all sanitary measures.

WEIHAIWEI.

The territory of Weihaiwei was leased to Great Britain by China by a convention made on the 1st day of July, 1898, and lies in latitude 37° 30′ N., longitude 122° 10′ E. It is situated in the Chinese province of Shantung, and comprises the island of Liu Kung, all the islands in the Bay of Weihaiwei, and a belt of land 10 English miles wide along the entire coast-line, with a total area of about 285 square miles, and an estimated population of 150,000, in which are included 4,000 resident on the island of Liu Kung. In addition to the leased territory there is a sphere of influence which comprises that portion of the province of Shantung lying east of the meridian 121° 40′—an area of 1,500 square miles. The winter is cold, but dry and bracing. The summer heat is not excessive, and the rainfall is, as a rule, small.

The Government is administered by a Commissioner, who discharges his functions under the Weihaiwei Order in Council of 24th July, 1901, by which he is empowered to make ordinances, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the administration of the territory, and provision is made for a High Court, in which all jurisdiction, civil and criminal, is vested, subject to an appeal to the Supreme Court of Hong Kong, and for District Magistrates' Courts. The village communities are administered through their headmen. Weihaiwei is a port of call for steamers running to and from the North of China, and there is regular steam communication with the port of Shanghai.

Commissioner, Sir J. H. Stewart Lockhart, K.C.M.G.

BORNEO.

Borneo was discovered by the Portuguese in 1521, and is situated in the Eastern Archipelago, extending from lat. 7° 4′ N. to 4° 10′ S., and from long. 108° 50′ to 119° 20′ E. It is about 850 miles in length and 600 in breadth, and contains an area of 280,000 square miles, divided by the equatorial line into two nearly equal portions. The population is probably about 1,846,000, consisting chiefly of Dyaks, Malays, Kyans, Papus or Negritos, Chinese, Bajaus, Dusuns, Musuts and Bugis (the aboriginal Celebes). Rather more than two-thirds of the island is now included within the Dutch possessions in the East Indies. The remainder of the island is under British protection.

The British North Borneo Company.

The territory of British North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island of Borneo, with a total area of about 31,000 square miles, and a coast line of over 900 miles. The population is about 175,000, consisting mainly of Mohammedan settlers on the coast, and aboriginal tribes inland, with some Chinese traders and artisans. The interior is mountainous, Mount Kinabalu being 13,700 feet high, and is densely timbered.

The chief town is Sandakan, on the north-east coast. The appointment of the Governor is subject to the approval of the Secretary of State. For administrative purposes the whole district is divided into ten provinces. The laws are based on the Indian codes of criminal and civil procedure, amended and adopted by local proclamations. There is an Imam's Court for Mohammedan law.

The chief products are timber, tobacco, sago, rice, gums, gutta-percha, coco-nuts, rattans, and all varieties of jungle produce. The country is suitable for the cultivation of sugar, tapioca, rubber, pepper, and gambier on a large scale. Coal and gold have been found. Exports of leaf tobacco, (1907) $2,459,122; (1908) $2,772,172; (1909) $2,521,901. A railway has been constructed from Weston to Beaufort (20 miles) where it connects with the line from Jesselton (56 miles), which has been extended to Tenom (33 miles). A further extension has been completed to Melalap (10 miles).

There is a native military force of 650 men under European officers, with one machine and four mountain guns. There is a Church of England and a Roman Catholic mission, and churches at Sandakan, Kudat, and Jesselton.

Brunei.

Sultan, H.H. Mohamed Jemal-ul-alam, succ. 11 May, 1906.

A native State on the north-west coast of the island of Borneo. The total area exceeds 3,000 square miles. The territory was placed under British protection in 1888, and on Jan. 1, 1906, the Sultan accepted by treaty a British Resident to assist and advise him in the administration. The chief town, Brunei, has a population of nearly 10,000, and is built entirely on the water, communication being possible only by boat.

High Commr., The Governor of the Straits Settlements.
British Resident, Brunei, M. S. H. McArthur (Harvey Chevallier, acting).

Brunei is 5 hours by steamer from Labuan, and communication is now regularly maintained.

The Sarawak territory lies on the west coast of Borneo, with a seaboard of 400 miles, an area of about 50,000 square miles, and a population of about 600,000, composed of various races. The government of this district was obtained in 1842 from the Sultan of Borneo by the late Sir James Brooke, who became well known as Raja Brooke of Sarawak, and was uncle of the present Raja. Other concessions have been made in 1861, 1882, 1885, 1890, and 1904, when the Limbang River was obtained. The Lawas River was purchased from the B. N. Borneo Co. in 1906. The country produces sago, gutta-percha, india-rubber, beeswax, birds'-nests, gold, silver, diamonds, antimony, quicksilver, tobacco, rice, rattans, coal, gambier, and pepper. Gold exports, (1907) $1,513,800; (1908) $1,130,760; (1909) $1,139,440.

Africa.

THE Imperial British Dominions in Africa include the whole of the sub-continent, part of which forms the Union of South Africa, and portions of the Central, Eastern, and Western districts of the Continent. In addition, the Sudan is under Anglo-Egyptian administration, and the semi-independent Turkish tributary State of Egypt is "occupied" by a British force.

THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

The total area is nearly 470,000 square miles, with a population of 5,200,000 (1,120,000 white and 4,080,000 coloured).

The Union of South Africa is constituted under the South Africa Act, 1909 (9 Edw. VII., cap. 9), passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom on September 20, 1909. In terms of that Act the self-governing Colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony became united on May 31, 1910, in a legislative Union under one Government under the name of the Union of South Africa, those Colonies becoming original Provinces of the Union under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State, respectively.

The Act constituting the Union provides for the appointment by the Sovereign of a Governor-General, who, with an Executive Council (of which the members are chosen and summoned by him), administers the executive government of the Union as the Governor-General in Council. Departments of State are established by the Governor-General in Council, the Governor-General appointing not more than ten officers to administer them. Such officers are King's Ministers of State for the Union and members of the Executive Council. Justice is administered by a Supreme Court and by lesser Courts.

The Senate consists of 40 members. For ten years after the establishment of Union eight are nominated by the Governor-General in Council and 32 are elected, eight for each Province. The first election was made prior to the establishment of the Union by the two Houses of each of the Colonial Legislatures sitting as one body, and a vacancy will be filled by the choice of the Provincial Council in respect of whose Province a vacancy occurs.

The House of Assembly consists of 121 elected members, 51 of whom represent the Cape of Good Hope, 17 Natal, 36 Transvaal, and 17 the Orange Free State. Members of both Houses must be British subjects of European descent.

A Provincial Council in each Province has power to legislate by ordinance on certain subjects specified in the Act, and on such other subjects as may be delegated to it. All ordinances passed by a Provincial Council are subject to the veto of the Governor-General in Council. Members of the Provincial Council are elected on the same system as members of Parliament, but the restriction as to European descent does not apply. The number of members in each Provincial Council are as follows:—Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 25; Transvaal, 36; Orange Free State, 25.

The Union Government is seized of all State property, and the Railways, Ports, Harbours, and Customs are administered by Union Commissioners for the benefit of a Consolidated Revenue Fund. The former debts of the Provinces are administered by and form a first charge upon the funds of the Union. Provision is made in the Act of 1909 for the admission to the Union of Rhodesia, and for the transfer to the Union Government of the administration of protected and other native territories. The Union was inaugurated by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G., in 1910.

The seat of the Government is Pretoria; the seat of the Legislature is Cape Town.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN CUSTOMS STATISTICAL BUREAU.

As a result of the conference of Customs Officers, held in March, 1904, the various Governments in the then existing Customs Union agreed to the establishment as from July 1, 1905, of a South African Customs Statistical Bureau, whose headquarters are at present in Cape Town. This Bureau compiles all statistics relating to the imports into and exports from the Union of South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, and North-Western Rhodesia. The Bureau is also charged with the allocation of Customs Duties in respect of duty-paid goods removed from the Union to either of the Rhodesias, or vice versâ, and is now under the direct control of the Department of Commerce and Industries of the Union of South Africa.

The PROVINCE of the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, in which are included the Diamond Fields, the Transkei territories, Bechuanaland, and Pondoland, is washed by the Atlantic and Indian Oceans on the west and south and south-east, while upon the north and north-east it is bounded by the German Protectorate and each of the other Provinces of the Union. It reaches in S. lat. from 26° to 34° 50′, and in E. long. from 16° 25′ to 30°. Its extreme length from E. to W. is nearly 750 miles, and its breadth 550 miles, with a coast-line of nearly 1,200 miles, and an area of 276,995 square miles, or 177,376,660 acres, according to the latest estimate (1908), of which 42,210,382 acres were not disposed of in 1908. The territory of Walfish Bay, on the west coast, is also a portion of the Province.

The Province is divided, geographically, into two parts by the main range of mountains, which follows the coast at a distance of 100 to 150 miles from the sea; and the southern portion is divided again by two other ranges which run across from W. to E., and are not quite so high as the first. Between the mountains and the sea, in the south-western portion of the Province, are the chief grain and wine producing districts; in the south there are extensive forests; and along the south-eastern coast, where there are summer rains, tobacco and maize are successfully cultivated. Between the two upper ranges of mountains is an elevated tract known as the Great Karroo, which extends from W. to E. for 300 miles, and has a breadth of 70 miles. During a great portion of the year the Karroo is, as its name implies, a dry and barren district, but after rain it is covered with luxuriant vegetation, and supports countless flocks of sheep and many cattle and horses. It is here also that the important industry of ostrich-farming is carried on. The country to the north of the mountains is still more elevated, forming part of the great South African table-land. It supports, like the rest of the Province, large numbers of sheep, and contains the chief mineral districts. The rivers flow in deep and precipitous ravines, and, except when swollen by the rains, are merely shallow torrents, even the largest having only sufficient water for the smallest craft, or bars at their mouths which render entrance both difficult and dangerous. The climate is healthy, and its peculiar dryness and the uniformity of the temperature cause it to be much favoured by Europeans suffering from pulmonary complaints. The principal native flora are heaths, proteæ, and stapelias (or carrion flowers), and dense thorny thickets of what is called bush, in which are several species of aloe. Elephants and buffaloes are still found on the south coast, and springbok abound.

The Population numbered 2,409,804 on 17 April, 1904, inclusive of the native territories, Griqualand West and Pondoland, the European population then being 579,741 (318,544 males and 261,197 females). The births registered in 1908 were 60,524; the deaths, 33,967. The Dutch preponderate in the western and the English in the eastern districts.

Education.—The number of schools in operation (June 30, 1909) was 3,681, attended by 172,225 children. There are also five colleges, with 842 students, and a University, where 9,063 students have matriculated and 1,070 have taken direct degrees. The expenditure under the Education Vote in the year ended June 30, 1908, was £578,528.

Commerce and Industry.—The principal industries are the production of wool, wine, and ostrich feathers, and the rearing of horses and cattle; but great attention is paid to the culture of wheat, barley, and oats. The principal imports (1908) were: animals, living, £141,585; agriculture, articles for use in, £246,251; food and drink, articles of, £3,952,861; raw materials for manufactures, £1,830,725; manufactured articles, £9,381,987. The principal exports (1908) were: diamonds, £4,796,655; gold, £30,992,137; and other produce, £6,222,790.

Minerals, &c.—There are important mines of copper in Namaqualand, the ores being of the richest kind, and yielding a percentage of from 32 to 36. Gold is found in the Knysna division, and manganese in the Paarl. Coal of considerable value is also raised, the output in 1908 being 122,865 tons. The value of diamonds found at Kimberley in 1908 was £2,685,150.

Railways.—The railways are mostly the property of the Union Government. On Dec. 31, 1908, 3,265 miles were Government owned and worked, and 977 miles of private lines in the Province and elsewhere were worked by Government. The Cape to Cairo Railway scheme places Capetown in communication with Bulawayo, the commercial centre of Rhodesia; Salisbury, the capital of Rhodesia; Beira, the Victoria Falls, and Broken Hill. To the 31st Dec., 1908, the capital expended was £32,155,156. The returns for 1908 show a profit of £1 17s. 8d. per cent. per annum on the capital expended.

Posts and Telegraphs.—There were (1908) 1,065 post offices open, and 64,461,573 letters, &c., were conveyed; money and postal orders issued, £1,376,953; savings bank deposits, £2,654,062; telegraph offices, 586, with 31,836 miles of wire; telephone wires, 5,751 miles, with 4,560 sets of instruments; postal revenue, £380,707; telegraph and telephone (1907) £191,441. There is cable communication with Europe viâ West Coast, viâ St. Helena and overland, and a direct line to Australia viâ Natal.

Harbours and Works.—There are magnificent harbours at Table Bay (Cape Town), Port Elizabeth, East London, and Mossel Bay. There are electric tramways in Capetown, Port Elizabeth, East London, and Kimberley.

The Province is administered by an Administrator, appointed for five years by the Governor-General, aided by a Provincial Council (elected for three years). There is an Executive Committee of four members.

CAPITAL, Capetown. Pop., 1904, 77,668 (with suburbs 169,641); Grahamstown, 13,887; Port Elizabeth, 32,959; Kimberley, 34,331; East London, 25,220; Beaconsfield, 9,378.

Administrator, His Hon. N. F. de Waal.

Secretary, N. Janisch.

Capetown is 5,979 miles from Southampton; transit, 16 days.

The PROVINCE of NATAL comprises an area of 35,371 square miles, with a seaboard of 376 miles. No less than 35 distinct rivers run through it into the Indian Ocean, but not one of them is navigable. As in the Cape Province, the country rises from the sea to the mountains by a series of terraces.

Population.—The estimated population at 31 December, 1908 (exclusive of military), was: Europeans or whites, 91,443; mixed and others, 7,386; Indians and Asiatics, 116,679; natives, 990,878—a total of 1,206,386.

Production, &c.—The coast region, extending about 15 miles inland, is highly fertile, and has a semi-tropical climate. Maize is the most generally cultivated crop throughout the Province, and sugar, coffee, arrowroot, ginger, tobacco, bananas, vegetables, and pepper thrive in the coast region, and the pineapple ripens in the open air. Tea is also grown, and its cultivation has become a thriving industry. The midland district is more adapted for cereals and other European crops. The upper district is chiefly grazing land, and sheep-farming is the principal occupation of the inhabitants; horses and cattle are also reared in large numbers. The coalfields of the Province are of large extent, and are connected by rail with the seaport of Durban; the output for 1908 was 1,669,774 tons, and for 1907 1,530,043 tons; there is a considerable export trade in coal, 710,777 tons being bunkered and 553,157 tons exported in 1908, in addition to 254,166 tons consumed by the railway department. Asbestos, copper, fireclay, gold, graphite, gypsum, iron, lead and silver, limestone and marble, manganese, molybdenum, nickel, nitre and tin are also found. In the immediate vicinity of Pietermaritzburg iron ores, some of very high grade, have been found in immense quantities, and iron of excellent quality is being produced at a cost which ensures the establishment of an important industry. The coke used is manufactured on the premises, while fireclay, ganister, and remarkably good moulding-sand are obtained on the estate. Large forests of valuable timber abound in the kloofs, and many tracts along the coast are also well wooded. Cotton growing is being tried, and promises well. The chief exports are coal, wool, mohair, wattle bark, tea, sugar, tobacco, maize, fruit and preserves, hides and skins.

Education.—There are 2 Government high schools, at Pietermaritzburg and Durban; 41 primary schools, 2 art schools, 5 Indian schools, and 2 Government schools for coloured children; there are also 47 private Government-aided European, native, Indian and coloured schools.

Railways.—There are 935 miles of railway open. The total cost of construction of the railways up to the end of 1908 was £13,989,202. The receipts for 1908 were £1,832,862, and the expenditure £1,240,319. The net receipts were equal to £4 s. 8·57*d.* per cent. upon the capital expended on open lines.

Zululand, annexed in 1897, comprises about two-thirds of the country formerly under Zulu kings, and is bounded on the south and south-west by the Tugela River; on the south-east by the Indian Ocean; on the north by the Portuguese possessions; and on the west by the new territory (formerly Utrecht and Vryheid districts of the Transvaal) and Swaziland. The Amaputaland Protectorate, created by proclamation of 22 Nov., 1897, was annexed to Zululand on 27 Dec., 1897, and now forms part of the Province. The Northern Districts territory (consisting of the Magisterial Divisions of Vryheid, Utrecht, Paulpietersburg, and Babanango) was annexed to Natal on 27 January, 1903.

The government is administered by an Administrator, aided by a Provincial Council (elected for three years). There is an Executive Committee of four members.

PIETERMARITZBURG, the capital and seat of government, is situated about 54 miles inland from Port Natal. Population, exclusive of military (estimated at 31 Dec., 1908), 31,230.

In Durban (pop. 60,244, including 27,327 Europeans, 1,960 mixed and others, 15,900 natives, and 15,057 Asiatics as estimated 31 Dec., 1908), or Port Natal, is the only harbour of any importance on the south-east coast. The entrance is now safe and navigable for any vessel at any time; the average low-water depth at the entrance, the bar being no longer existent, for 1908 being 33 ft. 7 in.

Natal, 6,800 miles; transit, 20 days.

The PROVINCE of the TRANSVAAL has a total area of 110,425·78 square miles, about 20,000 sq. miles lying within the tropics.

The larger portion lies to the west of the Drakensberg (Mt. Mauch, 8,725 feet) and slopes down to the Limpopo River and Bechuanaland; a smaller section lies to the east of that range towards the Indian Ocean, and along the greater part of its eastern frontier is closed in by Portuguese territory from having direct access to the sea.

Steppes and bush predominate and favour pastoral industries, whilst agriculture labours under many drawbacks. Gold, first discovered in 1871, constitutes the wealth of the country; diamonds, coal and silver are also found, whilst iron ores and other metals are known to exist. The Central South African Railways, which include the lines of the late Netherlands South African Railway, the Orange Free State Government Railways, and the line known as the Pretoria-Pietersburg Railway, connect the Province with Delagoa Bay, Durban, and the Cape; the total length open for traffic at the end of 1908 was 2,627¾ miles, and 64½ miles were under construction.

The population numbers about 1,400,000, of whom 350,000 are whites and 1,050,000 coloured races.

Year.	Fine Oz.	Year.	Fine Oz.
1898	3,823,367	1904	3,773,517

The PROVINCE of the ORANGE FREE STATE has a total area of 50,392 square miles, with a population at the census of 1904 of 387,315, of whom 142,679 were whites (males 81,571, females 61,108).

It is essentially a pastoral country, but the eastern part is also admirably adapted for the cultivation of grain. Diamonds, garnets, and other precious stones are found, and rich coal-mines exist, while there are indications of gold. The chief exports are wool, ostrich feathers, hides, diamonds, grain, &c.

The government is administered by an Administrator, aided by a Provincial Council (elected for three years). There is an Executive Committee of four members.

BLOEMFONTEIN, the Capital and seat of Government, had a population of 13,512 whites, 3,487 troops, and 16,033 natives in 1905. A new sewerage system and an additional water supply are in successful operation. Six new bridges of masonry, 85 ft. span, have been built over the Bloem Spruit, which has been straightened to avoid a repetition of the serious flood of Jan., 1904.

Other towns are Kroonstad (2,454 whites and 3,343 natives), Ladybrand (2,333 whites and 1,515 natives), and Harrismith (2,238 whites and 3,068 natives).

BASUTOLAND.

Basutoland is an inland Native Territory, lying between 28° 45′ and 30° 40′ South latitude and 27° and 29° 30′ East longitude, with a computed area of 10,293 square miles. The census of 1904 showed 347,731 natives and 895 whites.

The territory is well watered, and enjoys a delicious climate. It is one of the finest grain producing districts in South Africa, and the abundant grass enables the Basutos to rear immense herds of cattle. The Maluti Mountains, forming a part of the great Drakensberg chain, occupy most of the country, which is elevated, broken, and rugged.

The territory is governed by a Resident Commissioner under the direction of the High Commissioner for South Africa, the latter possessing the legislative authority which is exercised by proclamation. The chiefs adjudicate on cases between natives, with a right of appeal to the magistrates' courts, where all cases between Europeans and natives are brought. The revenue arises from the Customs dues, the Post-office, native hut-tax, and the sale of licences. Telegraph offices have been opened at Leribe, Maseru, Teyateyaneng, Morija, Mafeteng, Mohale's Hoek Quthing and Peka in connection with the Cape Colonial system. There are 254 schools, with 13,000 scholars, a large proportion being in the schools of the French Protestant Mission. Grants in aid of education to the extent of £9,100 were made in 1909–10. The chief articles of export are grain, wool, cattle, and horses, the imports being chiefly blankets, hardware, and groceries.

THE BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE.

The Protectorate is bounded on the south and east by the Provinces of the Union, on the north by Rhodesia and the Zambesi, and on the west by German South-West Africa. It is about 400 miles long and 450 miles broad; area about 275,000 square miles, and population about 134,000, of whom 1,000 are whites.

The climate is healthy during part of the year, but malarial fever is prevalent during February, March, and April. The country is essentially pastoral, although Kaffir corn is sown and when the rainfall is adequate crops are reaped. Cattle thrive and are numerous. Much of the country is thick bush. The High Commissioner for South Africa has the power of making laws by proclamation for the Protectorate, where he is represented by a Resident Commissioner. The population is almost entirely a native one, the principal tribes being those of Khama (Bamangwato), of Linchwe (Bakathla), of Sebele (Bakweni), of Gasietsiwe (Bangwaketsi), of Baitlotle (Bamalete), and of Mathibe (Batawana).

The railway from Kimberley to Vryburg and Mafeking traverses the Protectorate on its way to Rhodesia. There is a telegraph line from Cape Colony through from Mafeking, viâ Gaberones, and Francistown to Bulawayo and Salisbury. The chief European centres are Gaberones, Francistown, and Serowe, whither the Chief (Khama) and all his people moved a few years ago from Palapye. The headquarters of the Protectorate Administration are at Mafeking, Cape Province.

Northern Rhodesia.

This territory, first opened to British influence by Dr. Livingstone, is divided into North-Eastern and North-Western Rhodesia, which are still occupied by the native tribes living under their own chiefs. Extensive mineral deposits, copper in particular, have been discovered. Indigenous india-rubber is found in large areas. Timber, cattle, and all agricultural produce abound.

Southern Rhodesia.

Railways.—The main arteries of communication are the Mashonaland and the Rhodesia Railways. The latter is a continuation of the line from Cape Town to Vryburg, vid Kimberley, and was opened to Bulawayo in November, 1897, the distance from Cape Town being 1,362 miles. A line to connect Salisbury with Bulawayo (300 miles) was completed in Oct., 1902. From Salisbury the Mashonaland Railway runs eastwards to Umtali and thence to the port of Beira (Portuguese), a distance of 375 miles. The section from Bulawayo vid the Wankie coalfields to the Victoria Falls (281 miles) was completed in June, 1904. The line crosses the Zambesi at the Falls, and has been opened to the Rhodesian border in N.W. Rhodesia, and has been extended in Congo territory as far as Elizabethville (Star of the Congo Mine). The distance from the Victoria Falls to the border is 507 miles. A light railway (2 ft. gauge) has been completed between Salisbury and the Ayrshire Mine (84 miles), with a branch to the Eldorado Mine (12 miles). A line connects Gwelo with Selukwe (about 23 miles); a line from Bulawayo vid Gwanda to West Nicholson (119 miles), opens up the gold and coal areas lying to the south-east; and a branch to the Matopos, where the founder of Rhodesia is buried, was opened on Nov. 1, 1903. A further branch line from Lyndhurst Halt (near Gwelo) to Umduma, in the Blenkwater district, a distance of 50 miles, was opened in June, 1909.

The African Transcontinental Telegraph Line ("Cape to Cairo") has been constructed as far as Ujiji in German East Africa, about 3,250 miles from the Cape.

Industrial Progress.—Southern Rhodesia is rich in mineral deposits, and it abounds in traces of the ancient gold-workers. Though the climate is sub-tropical, the average altitude makes it well suited to European fruit-trees, cereals, and vegetables, in addition to the indigenous products of the country—e.g., tobacco, rubber, cotton, and all kinds of grain. The country is being re-stocked, and inoculation upon a large scale is stamping out various descriptions of veterinary disease.

The first regular crushing returns began in September, 1898, and the gold produced to the 30th Sept., 1910, has an estimated value of £16,348,430. The output for the year ended 31 December, 1909, was valued at £2,623,708, an increase of £97,701 in value over the returns for 1908. The gold output for the nine months ended 30 Sept., 1910, is valued at £1,893,200. Silver, copper, coal, diamonds, lead, chrome, iron, asbestos, and other minerals have also been produced in considerable quantities.

Constitution.—Southern Rhodesia is administered by the Company under the Charter of 1889, as amended by the Orders in Council of 1894, 1898, and 1903. The Administrator is advised by an Executive Council of not less than four members, and there is a Legislative Council, consisting of the Administrator, the Resident Commissioner (ex officio), and 14 members, seven of whom are elected by the registered voters of Mashonaland and Matabeleland, and seven nominated by the Company with approval of Secretary of State.

The laws in force in the Cape Colony up to June 10th, 1891, have continued in force in Southern Rhodesia, so far as they are applicable; whilst from 1891 to 1899, when the Legislative Council was first convened, laws were amended or enacted by the ordinances of the Directors, the regulations of the Administrator in Council, and the proclamations of the High Commissioner. Municipal self-government has been established in Bulawayo and Salisbury. Administrative Revenue, 1908-9, £551,789; exp., £524,471.

The total white population of Southern Rhodesia at the census of 1907 was 14,007, but is now estimated to exceed 18,000. A census will be taken during 1911. At the end of 1909 the native population was estimated to be 697,200.

The political capital is SALISBURY, 4,880 ft. above sea-level, the chief town of Mashonaland (white population in 1907, 1,684). BULAWAYO, 4,469 ft. above the sea-level, the chief town of Matabeleland, is the commercial centre, with a white population of 3,491 in 1907.

PRECEDENCE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The King has approved of the following table of precedence for the Union of South Africa:—

The Governor-General.
Naval Commander-in-Chief on the Station.
General Officer Commanding the Troops in South Africa.
The Prime Minister.
The Chief Justice of South Africa.
Executive Councillors.
Privy Councillors.
Administrators of the Provinces.
President of the Senate.
Speaker of the House of Assembly.
Judges of the Supreme Court of South Africa.
Knights of the various Orders.
Members of the Senate.
Members of the House of Assembly.
Members of the Executive Committees of the Provinces.
Chairmen of Provincial Councils.
Members of Provincial Councils.
Mayor of the Capital of the Province in which the function is held.
Mayors of other Provincial Capitals.
Wives of the foregoing to enjoy the precedence of their husbands.

WEST AFRICAN DOMINIONS.

THE partition of West Africa among the various European Powers is now complete, and the British territories therein consist of the Colonies and Protectorates of the Gambia, Sierra Leone, the Gold Coast, and Southern Nigeria, which are all situated upon the coast of North-Western Africa, between the mouth of the river Senegal and the Cameroons, and of the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria. These territories were not originally colonies in the strict sense of the word, but merely trading settlements in which the products of the neighbouring countries were collected and exchanged for European goods with as little outlay as possible; but of late years a great part of the revenue has been expended on the development of the territories, the advancement of the education of the natives, and on the encouragement of the cultivation of natural produce. The climate is such that Europeans cannot live there permanently, and even the native inhabitants suffer from malarial fever. The West Coast of Africa has, however, been eagerly frequented by European traders since it was first explored by the Portuguese in the latter part of the 15th century, just before the discovery of America by Columbus. In the 17th century all the chief maritime nations of Europe, except the Spaniards, had forts or factories established on the coast, from which they used to supply slaves to their plantations in the West Indies and on the mainland of America. The importance of the coast was much diminished when these same nations agreed, at the commencement of the nineteenth century, to join in putting down the slave trade, and the Dutch and the Danes relinquished their possessions; but a healthier interest in the West Coast has since arisen in the development of a legitimate trade in tropical products, of which palm oil is the most important, to take the place of the trade in slaves. The Germans possess the territory of the Cameroons and Togoland, in the immediate neighbourhood of the British possessions; and, more to the south, the Congo Free State has been founded by the King of the Belgians. British authority has been extended by the gradual addition of Protectorates as dependencies to the Colonies above mentioned, and through the action of the Royal Niger Company, which exercised all the functions of government until the territories under its control were incorporated with Southern and Northern Nigeria in 1900.

GAMBIA.

The river Gambia was discovered by the Portuguese in 1447; and in 1588, the year of the Spanish Armada, Queen Elizabeth, being then at war with Spain and Portugal, gave a charter to a British Company to trade with the Gambia, and as early as 1618 an effort to do so was made, but it was not successful. In 1686 a fort was built upon a rocky island, and, in honour of the new King, was named Fort James; but the English merchants had formidable rivals in the Portuguese and French, and it was not until 1783 that the river was recognised, by the Treaty of Versailles, as British. It had no regular political institutions until 1807, when it was put under the Government of Sierra Leone. The Colony of the Gambia was created in 1843, and was constituted a separate government in 1888. The colony now consists of the Island of St. Mary, British Combo, Albreda, the Ceded Mile, Macarthy's Island, and various other islands and territories on the banks of the river. The population (1 April, 1901) was 13,456 (excluding Protectorate, 140,000). The climate is unhealthy during the rainy season, viz., from June to October; but during the rest of the year it is fairly healthy. The chief export is ground nuts, which form nearly eight-tenths of the total exports. They are sent chiefly to Marseilles, where the oil is extracted and used for the same purpose as olive oil. Beeswax, rubber, and hides are also exported; and rice, cotton, maize, and a kind of millet called kous are produced in the countries bordering the Gambia, but not in sufficient quantities for export. The chief imports are cotton goods, kola nuts, rice, and tobacco. A Company of the W.A.F.F. (3 officers and 120 non-commissioned officers and men) is stationed in the Colony, and there is an armed police force in the settlement (numbering 72 men), which performs both civil and military duties. There is also a volunteer artillery corps consisting of 3 officers and 25 rank-and-file. The government, which is that of a Crown Colony, is now vested in a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, consisting of 3 official members (besides the Governor), and by a Legislative Council of 5 official members and 4 unofficial members, nominated by the Crown.

THE GOLD COAST COLONY.

This colony comprises the coast of the Gulf of Guinea from about 3° 7′ W. to 1° 14′ E. of Greenwich, with a protectorate extending inland to an average distance of 440 miles, or to the 11° of N. latitude, bounded on the west and north by the French colonies of the Ivory Coast and French Soudan, and on the east by the German colony of Togoland. The population of the colony is estimated at 895,350 (exclusive of Ashanti and the Northern Territories), of whom about 1,000 are Europeans. The natives are almost all Pagans, but the number of Mohammedans and Christians is steadily increasing. The Castle and settlement of Elmina was founded by the Portuguese and taken from them by the Dutch. In 1618, some English merchants built a fort at Kormantyne, and subsequently many forts and factories were established, not only by the English and Dutch, but also by the French, the Danes, and the Germans, for the purpose of supplying slaves to their West Indian and American possessions. The first English Company to trade with the Gold Coast was chartered in 1662. This was succeeded in 1672 by the Royal African Company, which enlarged and strengthened Cape Coast Castle until it was the best on the coast, and also built forts at Dixcove, Sekondi, Kommenda, Anamabo, Winneba, and Accra. This was again succeeded in 1750 by the African Company of Merchants, which was constituted by Act of Parliament, with liberty to trade and form establishments on the West Coast of Africa between 20° N. and 20° S. lat. The settlements were in 1821 transferred to the Crown, and placed under the government of Sierra Leone, from which they were finally separated in 1874 under the title of Gold Coast Colony. The Dutch and English forts were intermingled until 1867, when an exchange was effected which gave all those on the west of the Sweet River to Holland and those on the east to Great Britain. In 1872 the Dutch transferred all their forts to Great Britain, which had previously, in 1850, bought the Danish forts. It was out of this transfer that the Ashanti war of 1873–4 arose, as the King of Ashanti, who had always been on good terms with the Dutch, feared that he would be cut off from the sea. In this war, as in those of 1896 and 1900–1, the British arms were completely victorious, and the kingdom of Ashanti has now been added to the dominions of the British Crown.

The produce of the Gold Coast is chiefly sent to Great Britain. Gold is found in considerable quantities, and rubber, ivory, gum-copal, cocoa, cotton, lumber, Guinea grains, and oil are also exported to England. The principal exports in 1908 were: Gold £1,008,006, rubber £263,694, palm oil £120,978, palm kernels £112,425, and cocoa £755,347. The chief imports are textiles, alcohol, and hardware. The climate is damp, hot, malarious, and unhealthy. The Government assists the Roman Catholic, Wesleyan, and German missionaries in educational matters, and great efforts are being made to improve the sanitary condition of the coast towns. The Government has established schools of its own; the principal towns are lighted and policed. 1,433 miles of telegraphs have been established in the colony, of which 290 miles are in Ashanti and 135 miles in the Northern Territories. The Government railway from Sekondi through Tarkwa, the centre of the gold-mining industry, to Kumasi (168 miles), has been completed and opened for traffic. Another railway is being constructed from Accra into the interior.

The seat of government is Accra (population 17,892). The other principal towns are Cape Coast (28,948), Ada (13,240), Elmina (3,000), Sekondi (4,095), Tarkwa (4,000), Kwitta (3,018), and Axim (2,189). The Legislative Council consists of 6 official and 4 unofficial members.

SIERRA LEONE.

The peninsula of Sierra Leone (Lion Mountain) was ceded to Great Britain in 1787 by the native chiefs, to be used as an asylum for the many destitute negroes then in England; and great numbers of liberated Africans from North America and the West Indies, besides those taken in slavers on the coast, have from time to time been settled there. In this respect Sierra Leone is really a colony, while it is also of commercial importance. The extreme length is about 185 miles, with an estimated area of 4,000 sq. miles. The population in 1901 amounted to 76,655, of whom 493 were resident Europeans. Of the rest, more than half were liberated Africans and their descendants, while the remainder belonged to the neighbouring tribes. The liberated Africans were brought from all parts of Africa, and as the result no less than 60 different languages are said to be spoken in Freetown. The exports are palm-oil, palm-kernels and kola nuts; but benni-seed, cocoa-nuts, ginger, ground nuts, india-rubber, gum-copal, hides, beeswax, and rice are also exported. The principal imports are cotton goods, coal, apparel, hardware, provisions and tobacco. A railway (227 miles) has been constructed from Freetown into the interior, with terminus at Baiima near the Liberian frontier.

A Protectorate was proclaimed on August 31, 1896, over territory between 7° and 10° N., and 11° and 13° W., being bounded on the N. and N.E. by French Guinea, and on the S. and S.E. by Liberia. It has an area of about 30,000 square miles and a population estimated at 1,000,000. For administrative purposes it is divided into 5 districts under District Commissioners; the principal peoples being the Limbas and Kurankos in the north, the Timinis in the centre, and the Mendis in the south. The principal products are rubber, gum, palm-oil and palm-kernels, benni-seed, rice, ground and kola nuts.

SOUTHERN NIGERIA.

The Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria now includes the territories situated on the Bight of Benin, between Dahomey on the West to the Cameroons on the East, the amalgamation of the administrations of Lagos and of the Protectorate previously styled "Southern Nigeria" having been carried out on May 1, 1906. The whole territory is now divided into three Provinces, of which the Western coincides with the former Colony and Protectorate of Lagos, and the Central and Eastern with the former Protectorate of Southern Nigeria. The headquarters of the Government are at Lagos, and the area of the whole territory is 77,260 sq. miles.

The chief industry is agriculture, and crops consist of maize, plantains, earth-nuts, yams and cassava, while cocoa, coffee, and cotton are also grown. The natural products exported are palm oil and kernels, ivory, gum copal and rubber, and the export of cotton and maize is steadily increasing. A railway has been constructed from Iddo Island viâ Ilorin to Jebba on the Niger, a distance of about 306 miles, and is now being extended through Zungeru, the capital of Northern Nigeria, to join the railway from Baro to Kano in that Protectorate, which is now under construction. Centres of trade are Lagos, Calabar, Opobo, Bonny, New Calabar, Brass, Benin, Warri, Sapele, Akassa, and Forcados, the two last named being situated at the Forcados and Nun mouths of the Niger, which, with the rest of the territories south of Idah on the Niger, passed on January 1, 1900, from the administrative control of the Royal Niger Company to that of Southern Nigeria.

The principal imports are cotton goods, cooper's stores, hardware, cutlery, and spirits.

This Protectorate was established on January 1, 1900, and includes the northern portion of the territories formerly administered by the Royal Niger Company. It is bounded on the south by Southern Nigeria, to the west and north by the French possessions in the hinterland of Dahomey and the Soudan, and on the east by Lake Chad and the German territory of the Cameroons.

Since the occupation of Kano and Sokoto in February and March, 1903, steps have been taken for the establishment of administrative control over the whole of the Protectorate, of which the area is about 255,700 square miles. The population has been estimated at about 8,000,000. The centre of administration is Zungeru, near the Kaduna River, a tributary of the Niger, and the Protectorate is divided for administrative purposes into 13 Provinces. The frontiers to the North and East were delimited during 1903 by Anglo-French and Anglo-German Boundary Commissions, and a further delimitation of the northern frontier in accordance with the Anglo-French Convention of May 29, 1906, has recently been completed. The frontier with the German possessions has recently been surveyed by a joint Commission, and further negotiations are pending. The imports are much the same as in Southern Nigeria, and the principal exports are shea butter, shea nuts, and tin. The importation of spirits is prohibited. There is telegraphic communication from Lagos to Jebba, Zungeru, and Lokoja, and the line has been continued along the Benue, as well as in other directions. The construction of a railway from Baro on the Niger to Kano, viâ Zaria, has been completed for over 150 miles. Steam communication with England viâ Forcados.

The grant-in-aid from Imperial funds to N. Nigeria amounted to £237,000 in 1909–10, and to £200,000 in 1910–11. In addition, Southern Nigeria contributes £70,000 annually.

BRITISH EAST AND CENTRAL AFRICA.

A LARGE portion of the East Coast and of the Centre of the Continent is under British protection and is administered directly by the Imperial Government, through the Colonial Office, which took over the administration of the E. Africa, Uganda, and Somaliland Protectorates on April 1, 1905. British Central Africa, now styled Nyasaland, was similarly transferred on April 1, 1904. The only Protectorate in Africa now under the control of the Foreign Office is Zanzibar and Pemba. Just as on the West Coast, the rivalry of European Powers has resulted in the division of the territory on the East into "spheres of influence," the definition of whose boundaries has given rise to much diplomatic negotiation, and is not yet finally completed. From the boundary of Amatongaland northward to Cape Delgado is Portuguese; from Cape Delgado to the river Umba is German East Africa; the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba form a British Protectorate; and the East Africa Protectorate extends from the Umba to the river Juba, which forms the southern boundary of the Italian Sphere extending northward as far as the British Protectorate on the Somali Coast. It will be observed that on this portion of the African Continent the French have made no acquisitions, but their annexation of the great island of Madagascar places them in a position of importance on the East Coast, although their influence does not extend to the mainland. The history of the European occupation of East Africa may be briefly stated thus:—The Portuguese acquired their rights by discovery and conquest. The Germans obtained a footing on the mainland opposite Zanzibar between 1880 and 1885, at which latter date the Sultan of Zanzibar recognised their Protectorate over Usagara, and in the same year they declared a Protectorate over Witu. In 1888 the Imperial British East Africa Company received a Royal Charter, having been granted a few years previously by Seyyid Barghash, Sultan of Zanzibar, administrative rights over his mainland possessions. In 1890 the respective spheres of Great Britain and Germany were settled by agreement. Zanzibar became a British Protectorate, and Germany withdrew from her Protectorate over Witu in favour of Great Britain. The boundaries of the Italian Sphere were agreed upon in 1891. The Imperial British East Africa Company transferred the administration of their territories to the Imperial Government in 1895, having done much to promote the advance of civilisation in the large tract of country now known as the "East Africa Protectorate."

THE SOMALILAND PROTECTORATE.

In 1884 a Protectorate was declared over part of Somaliland, a country now subject (except where reserved by Great Britain and Italy) to Abyssinia, and forming the north-eastern horn of the African continent. The British Protectorate contains about 68,000 sq. miles. The population, mainly consisting of Somalis, a Mohammedan tribe, is estimated at 300,000. The boundaries are defined by treaty with Abyssinia and Italy; the northern coast as far as 49° E. and the 8th parallel of N. latitude are the limits on the north and south.

The PRINCIPAL TOWNS are Berbera, Bulhar, and Zeyla.

The Protectorate was transferred in 1898 from the administration of the India Office to that of the Foreign Office, and on April 1, 1905, to that of the Colonial Office.

The Imperial British East Africa Company was incorporated by Royal Charter, dated September 3, 1888; and under the control of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, exercised sovereign jurisdiction over the territories leased to it by the Sultan of Zanzibar, or acquired by treaties entered into with native Chiefs. A British Protectorate was announced over these territories on June 18, 1895, and the Company handed over the administration on July 1, 1895.

These territories are now comprised under the name of "The East Africa Protectorate," and include the whole of the coast from the Umba to the Juba River, granted on a 50 years' lease by the Sultan of Zanzibar, as also the vast territories in the interior bounded in part by international conventional lines. The southern boundary was defined by the Anglo-German conventions of 1886, 1890, and 1893; that on the east (along the Juba) and north-east, by an agreement with Italy (1891). On the west the Protectorate adjoins that of Uganda. The administration of the Protectorate is carried on under the Colonial Office.

The title of "Commissioner" was changed to "Governor" in 1907, and Legislative and Executive Councils were instituted.

A great portion of this vast region consists of pasture lands or barren wastes, but there are not lacking extensive districts of great natural fertility on the coast, as well as in the interior. The Protectorate is divided for administrative purposes into seven provinces, which are subdivided into districts and sub-districts: (1) Seyidie, (2) Ukamba, (3) Tanaland, (4) Jubaland, (5) Kenya, (6) Naivasha, (7) Nyanza, of which the centres of administration are respectively Mombasa, Nairobi, Lamu, Kismayu, Fort Hall, Naivasha, and Kisumu. Of the seven provinces Ukamba and Naivasha are best suitable to colonisation by Europeans. There is also a considerable region within the boundaries of the Protectorate which is still undeveloped, and has not yet been included in any administrative district, although the recent formation of the so-called Northern Frontier District has greatly reduced the extent of this undeveloped area. The population of the Protectorate has been estimated lately at 4,000,000, but no census has ever been taken.

The East Africa Protectorate also includes the Witu Protectorate, a small tract of country at the mouth of the river Tana. The British Protectorate was proclaimed Nov. 19, 1890. In March, 1891, the Imperial British East Africa Company undertook the administration of the country, from which they withdrew on July 31, 1893. Witu is now regarded for administrative purposes as part of Tanaland.

Mombasa, which is connected with Europe by telegraph, possesses perhaps the finest harbour on the east coast of Africa (population, about 30,000, of whom 200 are Europeans). There is also telegraphic communication along the coast between Mombasa and Lamu, and between Mombasa and Entebbe, the capital of the Uganda Protectorate. There are also extensions to Kiambu, Nandi, Wadelai on the Nile, and Fort Hall. The Uganda Railway has its terminus at Mombasa, which is connected with the mainland by a railway bridge 1,732 feet in length. Nairobi, the capital of the Protectorate, and central station of the Uganda Railway, has a population of about 14,000, of whom 800 are Europeans. There are also some 400 European farmers in the immediate neighbourhood of Nairobi.

The principal exports are ivory, grain, rubber, fibre and copra; the principal imports are piece-goods, rice, grain and flour, building materials, European provisions, &c.

The importation of arms and ammunition is prohibited, except under the most stringent regulations, and the introduction and local manufacture of spirits is also heavily checked.

A British Protectorate over the territory o Uganda was proclaimed in the "London Gazette" of June 19, 1894, and included only the country subject to King Mwanga, known as Buganda bounded by the territories known as Busoga Bunyoro, Ankole and Toro. This Protectorat has since been extended over Bunyoro an Busoga (see notice in "London Gazette," July 3 1896). Buganda lies on the N.W. shore o Lake Victoria, between 500 and 600 miles in direct line from the nearest point on the Eas Coast of Africa. It is situated on and to the N of the Equator. Bunyoro lies further to th North, on the E. shore of Lake Albert. Busog is to the E. of Uganda, and extends to Lak Kioga, Mt. Elgon, and the N.W. boundary o the East Africa Protectorate. Toro is to th W. of Buganda, and Aukole to the S.W. Th Protectorate is now divided into five provinces The total population of the Protectorate may b roughly estimated at between 2 and 3 millions.

The capital town of Buganda is Kampala, bu the centre of the Protectorate Administratio is the neighbouring settlement of Entebbe. Th population of the Uganda Protectorate is est mated at over 2,000,000. The principal export are ivory, skins, chillies, cotton, rubber, an sim sim. The export of cotton has increase from 858 cwt., valued at £1,089. in 1905-6, 41,232 cwt., valued at £59,596, in 1909-1 Coffee is also exported. Principal imports ar cotton cloths, prints, groceries, &c. Uganda connected by telegraph with Mombasa (E. Afric Protectorate), and there are four Governme steamers on Lake Victoria, two of them of 6 and one of about 1,000 tons displacement. The are also steamers on Lakes Albert and Kioga.

A railway of about 40 miles in length is und construction between Jinja, in Busoga, an Kakindu, a point on the Nile below the rapids

In July, 1897, Mwanga left Uganda and heade an insurrectionary movement in Buddu, whi was suppressed. He then fled to the neighbou ing German territory, and his infant son w declared King of Uganda, with a native coun of regency. King Mwanga died in May, 190 In Sept., 1897, a mutiny broke out among t soudanese troops in the Protectorate, which was only suppressed after several months' fighting, in circumstances of great difficulty and danger, in which several British officers lost their lives (Parly. Paper, Africa, No. 10, 1898). The military forces have since been completely reorganised.

The Uganda Railway.—A survey of the route to be followed by a railway to connect Uganda with the coast at Mombasa was made in 1892. In 1895 construction was commenced, and the last rails were laid at the terminus on Victoria Nyanza (584 miles) on December 20, 1901, on which date the first locomotive completed the journey from the sea to the lake. The administration of the railway is controlled by the Government of the East Africa Protectorate. A three-wire telegraph line has been erected along the railway, and there is also telegraphic communication from the terminus on the lake to Nimule, on the Nile (a distance of about 500 miles), and this will shortly be extended to Gondokoro on the frontier of the Sudan. Messages are accepted for Nimule, and sent thence to stations further inland by post. A volunteer corps has been organised.

THE ZANZIBAR PROTECTORATE.

Sultan, H.H. Ali bin Hamoud, succeeded his father, bin Mohamed, July, 1902.

Legal Member of Council and Attorney-General, P. Shearman Turner.

The Zanzibar dominions became independent in 1856 under the rule of Seyyid Majid, a son of Seyyid Said, Sultan of Muscat and Zanzibar. They formerly extended along the mainland as far south as Tunghi Bay and north as Warsheikh; but since the cession of the coast-line from Ruvuma to Wanga, including the island of Mafia, to Germany in 1890, and of the Benadir coast to Italy in 1904, they are now confined to the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba, a ten-mile coast-line from Wanga to Kipini, the islands of Lamu, Manda, Patta, and Siwa, together with the port of Kismayu, with a radius of 10 miles. As far as the mouth of the Juba, the Zanzibar dominions on the mainland are under the administration of H.M. Government through the Governor and Commander-in-Chief in the East Africa Protectorate (see p. 557). Zanzibar has been a British Protectorate since November, 1890.

By a decree of Sultan Hamoud (1897) the legal status of slavery ceased to be recognised in the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba.

The City of Zanzibar, on the island of the same name, is the largest in East Africa, and possesses a magnificent harbour, which presents great facilities for shipping and trade generally. The population of Zanzibar and Pemba is about 200,000.

The principal imports are piece-goods, ivory, hides, rice, and coal; the exports are ivory, cloves, copra, rubber, gum-copal, and many minor articles. The largest proportion of imports (£389,492 in 1909) comes from British India, £144,521 from the United Kingdom, £128,819 from German East Africa, £45,778 from the United States, and £40,984 from Germany. The largest exports are made to British India, which in 1909 accounted for £198,006, the principal other participators being German East Africa (£196,673), France (£128,267), and the United Kingdom (£89,900). These figures refer to the port of Zanzibar, and not to the trade of the Zanzibar dominions. The large quantities of goods which pass through Zanzibar in mail and other steamers, and those which are transhipped to and from the coasting vessels in the harbour without being landed, are not included in the statistics from which the above figures are taken, which do not, therefore, give an adequate idea of the importance of the port of Zanzibar as the centre of trade in E. Africa. There is direct communication with the United Kingdom by the Union Castle and Ellerman-Harrison Lines, and also a monthly cargo service by the British India Steam Navigation Company. There are through steamers to and from Europe of the Messageries Maritimes and the Deutsche Ost Africa Linie; and a three-weekly service to and from Bombay by the latter company.

The number of ocean-going steamers which entered the port in 1908 was—German 121, British 53, French 25, and other nationalities 3, the total tonnage being 445,350. This does not include the coasting and dhow traffic, which is a very large one, extending to Bombay, Arabia, the Comoro Islands, and Madagascar.

This country was proclaimed a British Protectorate on May 14, 1891. The Protectorate comprises the eastern portion of British Central Africa, and the control of the administration was transferred from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office on the 1st of April, 1904. The remainder of the territory is administered by the British South Africa Company.

The population of the Protectorate is estimated at, roughly, 1,000,000, including 587 Europeans and 435 Asiatics.

The principal exports are coffee, cotton, chillies, and tobacco. The cultivation and export of cotton and tobacco are considerable, and there are prospects of a steady development of these industries. Ivory, tea, ground nuts, and rubber are also exported. The principal imports are soft goods, provisions, and hardware. On Lake Nyasa there are seven steamers. There are also twenty-two steamers on the Zambesi and Shiré rivers. At Chinde, situated in Portuguese territory at the mouth of the Zambesi, is a piece of land leased from the Portuguese Government, where goods intended for the Protectorate may be transhipped free of duty.

Chief towns:—Blantyre (population about 200 Europeans and 6,000 natives) and Zomba, the headquarters of the Government. Communication is maintained between Chiromo (at the junction of the rivers Ruo and Shiré), and Chinde by the African Lakes Company's steamers and the British Central Africa Co.

Between Chinde and Europe, the means of communication are Messrs. Rennie's line viâ Natal, the British India Steam Navigation Co., and the German East Africa S.S. Co.

A railway, 113 miles in length, connecting Port Herald (the nearest port to the coast) with Blantyre, is open for traffic, and will probably be extended to Lake Nyasa viâ Zomba. The Protectorate is connected by telegraph overland with the Cape, viâ Fort Salisbury; and, with the Portuguese wires, to Chinde and Quilimane. The African Trans-Continental Telegraph Company's line has now been extended northwards as far as Ujiji on Lake Tanganyika.

MAURITIUS.

Mauritius is an island lying in the Indian Ocean, 500 miles east of Madagascar, between 57° 18′—57° 49′ E. long. and S. lat. 19° 58′—20° 32′, and comprising an area of 720 square miles. The population at the census of 1901 was 375,385, of whom 261,191 were Indians (the majority originally Coolies imported for working the sugar estates), and the remainder mainly of French or mixed descent. The whole island is practically given up to producing sugar for export, and the necessaries of life have all to be imported from abroad. Rice and grain are obtained from India, flour and frozen meat from Australia, oxen from Madagascar, and minor imports from South Africa and elsewhere. The chief trade of the island is with India. Being just within the tropics it has a hot climate; but, except in Port Louis and some of the low-lying districts, it is not unhealthy. The island is subject to cyclonic disturbances, and a hurricane in 1892 was particularly severe.

Mauritius was discovered about the year 1507 by the Portuguese, but they never formed any settlement on it. The Dutch visited it in 1598, and named it Mauritius, in honour of the Stadtholder, Prince Maurice of Nassau. In 1644 they established a small colony on the shore, but in 1710 or 1712 they abandoned the island, and in 1715 the French took possession of it and changed the name to Ile de France. Under the French it became a great centre of trade, but in 1789 the seat of French Government in the East was removed to it from Pondicherry, and it was taken by a British force in 1810. The French language and French law have been preserved under British rule when the ancient name, Mauritius, was restored. There is an excellent harbour on the N.W. coast, on which the capital, Port Louis, stands, and the annual trade of the island passes almost entirely through Port Louis. In 1909 there were 129½ miles of railway (119½ of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge and 10 of 2 ft. 6 in.), 63 post-offices, 57 telegraph and 13 telephone offices in the island, with 341 miles of telegraph and 86 miles telephone wires (Government).

The Government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 5 official and 2 elected members, and a Legislative Council of 27 members, 8 being ex-officio, 9 nominated by the Governor, and 10 elected by a moderate franchise. Port Louis has 2 members, and each of the country districts 1.

The inhabitants of European descent are mostly Roman Catholic. Education has two branches:—(1) Superior or Secondary Instruction, to which is attached the Government Royal College with its Schools; (2) Primary Instruction, consisting of the Government schools and the grant-in-aid schools. The total expenditure on education in 1909 amounted to Rs. 605,911. Of the pupils in the Government and aided schools, 64·71 per cent. are Roman Catholics, 2·62 per cent. Church of England, and 1·02 per cent. other Christian denominations; 9·65 per cent. being Mohammedans and 21·99 per cent. Hindoos and others. The troops in the Colony on 31 December, 1908, numbered 1,513.

DEPENDENCIES OF MAURITIUS.

(1.) RODRIGUES, 350 miles almost due east of Mauritius. Population (Census 1901) 3,762. Area, between 80 and 90 square miles. Cattle, beans, salt fish and goats are the principal exports. The island is under the administration of a magistrate who takes his orders from the Governor of Mauritius.
Magistrate, E. Rouillard Rs.7,000

(2.) OTHER DEPENDENCIES. Most of the scattered groups of coral islands belonging to Great Britain in the Indian Ocean are administered by the Mauritius Government, being visited periodically by two magistrates, whose duty it is to enquire into the condition of the labourers, and settle any disputes which may be referred to them. The chief product is cocoa-nut oil. The most important is Diego Garcia (pop. 1901, 489), one of the Chagos Archipelago, which lies on the direct route from the Red Sea to Australia, and, as it possesses a good harbour, has been much used of late years as a coaling station. The total population of the "Other Dependencies" (1901) is 1,697.

Transit, Mauritius, 27 days.

THE SEYCHELLES ISLANDS.

By letters patent of Sept., 1903, these islands, which number altogether 89, were erected into a separate colony. The principal islands of the group are Mahé, Praslin, Silhouette, Curieuse, and La Digue, and the total area of the islands, with dependencies, is estimated at 148½ square miles, of which, according to a recent survey, Mahé occupies nearly 56 square miles. The island of Coëtivy, formerly under Mauritius, was transferred to the Seychelles Government by Letters Patent in 1907. The seat of government is at Victoria, the capital, on the N.E. side of Mahé, which has an excellent harbour, and is constantly visited by men-of-war of all nations. The Admiralty have made Victoria a coaling station, and a depôt for patent fuel; quarantine regulations are on a reasonable footing, and the harbour dues light. The Seychelles Islands were occupied by the French about 1742, captured by a British ship in 1794, and were finally assigned to Great Britain in 1814. Although only 4° S. of the Equator, the islands are very healthy, the death-rate in 1908 being 15·48 per 1,000. The population of all the islands on May 31, 1901, was 19,237 (Mahé 15,166, Praslin 1,621, and La Digue 1,074), an increase since the census of 1891 of 2,526. The estimated population, December 31, 1909, was 22,409. There are 24 Roman Catholic and Church of England primary schools, and a grant-in-aid of Rs.10,000 was voted for 1909. In addition there is a Government school (the "Victoria School"), maintained at an annual cost of nearly Rs.14,000, where education of a higher class is provided.

The principal exports are vanilla, cocoa-nuts, cocoa-nut oil, tortoise-shell, cacao, soap, and guano. Aldabra, one of the dependencies of the Seychelles, and about 680 miles from Mahé, is famous for the gigantic land tortoises, whilst the unique double cocoa-nut, Coco de Mer, is found in Mahé, and, in larger quantities, in Praslin, where there is a famous valley. Mahé is in telegraphic communication with all important parts of the world viâ Mauritius and Zanzibar. The Government, which is that of a Crown Colony, is vested in the Governor, assisted by an Executive Council composed of 3 ex-officio members, and by a Legislative Council consisting of 3 official and 3 unofficial members. The Governor is President of both Councils.

ASCENSION,

an isolated Island in the South Atlantic (3,417 miles from Plymouth, 760 from St. Helena, and 900 from Cape Palmas on the African Coast), is of volcanic origin, the peak rising to the height of 2,820 feet, situated 7° 55′ 55″ S. lat., and 14° 25′ 5″ W. long. It is said to have been discovered by a Portuguese named João de Nova Gallego, on Ascension Day, 1501, and two years later was visited by Alphonse d'Albuquerque, who gave the island its present name. Its extreme length is 7½ miles, and extreme breadth 6 miles, with a circumference of 22 miles and an area of about 38 square miles, and being situated in the heart of the S.E. trade winds, its climate is dry and salubrious up to 1,800 feet, but above that height to its limit it is damp and foggy. It remained uninhabited till 1815, when the English took possession of it. It now possesses a steam factory, while there is also an excellent hospital and sanatorium. Partridges are being preserved for sporting purposes, and steps are being taken to exterminate the rabbits, which were formerly preserved and now prove a pest. The island is visited by the sea-turtle from January to May, which lay their eggs in the sand, 200 being "turned" during 1908, their weight being from 500 to 800 lb. The sooty tern, or "wide-awake," use the island as a nesting-place about every eighth month, their eggs being much appreciated by the inhabitants. In 1907 there were about 15 acres of ground under cultivation, producing vegetables and a small quantity of fruit, and there is also a small amount of pasturage for sheep and cattle. The island is under the Board of Admiralty, by whom an officer is appointed as commandant. The inhabitants consist of officers and their families, seamen, marines, and Kroomen; a limited number of men also have their families with them, the full complement of the island being about 80 (exclusive of 22 members of the Eastern Telegraph Co.) with about 25 women and children. Georgetown, the garrison settlement, is situated in a small bay on the N.W. coast. The island is fortified, and is connected by the Eastern Telegraph Co. with St. Vincent, St. Helena, Sierra Leone and Buenos Ayres.

is the chief of a group of islands of volcanic origin lying in lat. 37° 6′ S. and long. 12° 2′ W., discovered in 1506 by a Portuguese admiral, after whom they are named. The population numbers about 100, and the inhabitants are said to be very long-lived.

INACCESSIBLE ISLAND is a lofty mass of rock with sides 2 miles in length; the island is the resort of penguins and sea-fowl.

THE NIGHTINGALE ISLANDS are three in number, of which the largest is 1 mile long and ¾ m. wide, and rises in two peaks, 960 and 1,105 ft. above the sea-level respectively. The smaller islands, Stoltenhoff and Middle Isle, are little more than huge rocks. Numbers of seals and sea-elephants visit these islands.

FALKLAND ISLANDS.

These, the only considerable cluster in the South Atlantic, lie about 300 miles east of the Straits of Magellan, between 51° 15′—53° S. lat. and 57° 40′—62° W. long. They consist of East Falkland (area 3,000 sq. miles), West Falkland (2,300 sq. miles), and upwards of 100 small islands (islets, rocks, and sandbanks), comprising in the aggregate 6,500 sq. miles, and a population in 1908 of 3,610. Mount Adam, the loftiest peak in the colony, rises 2,315 feet above the level of the sea. The Falklands were discovered by Davis in 1592, and visited by Hawkins in 1594. After having successively belonged to France and Spain, they were given up to Great Britain about 1771, but not actually occupied. In 1820 the Republic of Buenos Aires established a settlement in these islands, which was destroyed by the Americans in 1831. In 1833 they were again taken possession of by the English for the protection of the whale-fishery, and colonised, and from that time to the present have so continued, being, as a whole, the most southerly organised colony of the British Empire. The climate, though somewhat bleak, is usually considered healthy, and the temperature is on the whole equable, the thermometer ranging in winter from 20° to 50°, and in summer from 40° to 65°. The islands are chiefly bog-land, and have proved suitable for sheep; kitchen-gardens occupy the only cultivated part. The population is mainly British, and is principally engaged in sheep-farming and seafaring industries. The chief exports in 1908 were wool (£105,495) and sheepskins. The total tonnage of vessels entered in 1908 was 281,351. There are three places of worship (one Church of England, one Roman Catholic, and one Baptist). The only important settlement is Port Stanley, at the head of Port William, on the coast of East Falkland.

There is a volunteer force of about 120 men.

SOUTH GEORGIA, an island 800 miles east-south-east of the Falkland Group, with an area of 1,000 square miles, is a dependency of the Falkland Islands. Among other dependencies are the South Shetlands, Graham's Land, the South Orkneys (on which the Argentine Government have, with the permission of H.M. Government established a meteorological station), and the Sandwich Group.

ST. HELENA,

probably the best known of all the solitary islan in the world, is situated in the South Atlant Ocean, 955 miles S. of the Equator, 760 S. of Ascension, 1,140 from the nearest poi of the American Continent, and 1,800 from t coast of S. America, in 15° 55′ S. lat. and 5° W. long. It is 10½ miles long, 6½ broad, a encloses an area of 47 square miles, with population in 1909 of 3,577. St. Helena of volcanic origin, and consists of numero rugged mountains, the highest rising to 2,7 feet, interspersed with picturesque ravines. T climate vies with that of Madeira in point salubrity and evenness of temperature. Althou within the tropics, the south-east "trade keep the temperature mild and equable. T thermometer goes up to 84° in the town at t sea-level; but in the country, 1,800 feet above t sea, the maximum is about 74°, and the me temperature ranges from 57° in September to in March, there being very little differen between night and day; the lowest temperatu in winter is 51°, and the total rainfall (1909) 42·3 inches. St. Helena was discovered by the P tuguese navigator, Juan de Nova Castella, 21 May, 1502 (St. Helena's Day), and remain unknown to other European nations until 15 when it was visited by Captain Cavendish on return from his voyage round the world. remained uninhabited until the Dutch colonis it circ. 1645. The English East India Compa seized it in 1651; but it was retaken by t Dutch in 1672. In 1673 it was again taken fr the Dutch by Capt. Munden, of the English Na and was held by the East India Company, w had obtained a charter for its possession fr Charles II., until 1834 (with the exception of t period 1815 to 1821, during which the Brit Government held it as a residence for Napole onaparte, who died there 5 May, 1821), when was ceded by them to the Crown. In 1900 he island was used as a place of internment for risoners of war from South Africa, the first etachment (consisting of General Cronje and ,000 officers and men) arriving in April of that ear. It was formerly an important station on the oute to India, but its prosperity received a fatal low by the cutting of the Suez Canal, and it is now requented only by a few sailing ships homeward ound from the East Indies. The tonnage dues n calling ships were abolished in 1882, and the ort is now free to all ships except when bringing r taking cargo to and from the port; the number hich called in 1909 was 59. The phormium inustry and lace-making, both under Government ontrol, were established during 1907. It is of trategical importance as a coaling station, and as recently been fortified by the Imperial overnment. St. James's Bay, on the northest of the island, possesses a good anchorage. he garrison was withdrawn in October, 1906.

The government is administered by a Governor, with the aid of an Executive Council of 3 members, the Governor alone making all ordinances.

The Imperial Currency Decimalised

THE following table shows with what very slight changes the present coinage might be placed n decimal series :—

	Decimals.	£	s.	d.
Bronze :—
1 Cent, or "farthing"	·01	less than		¼
2 cents, or "halfpenny"	·02			½
4 cents, or "penny"	·04		1
Aluminium (perforated) :—
5 cents, or "half dime" } new	·05			1½
10 cents, or "dime" } coins	·10			2½
Silver :—
25 cents, or "tester" (old name)	·25			6
50 cents, or "shilling"	·50		1	0
"Florin" of 100 cents, or farthings	1·00		2	0
One florin twenty-five, or "half crown"	1·25		2	6
One florin fifty (new coin)	1·50		3	0
Double florin, or British "dollar"	2·00		4	0
Two florins fifty, or "crown"	2·50		5	0
Gold :—
5 florins, or "half-sovereign"	5·00		10	0
10 florins, or "sovereign"	10·00	1	0	0
20 florins, or "royal" } seldom used	20·00	2	0	0
50 florins, or "imperial" }	50·00	5	0	0

Table: 10 cents (or farthings) = 1 dime (or enth); 10 dimes = 1 florin.

While the pound sterling would remain the gold standard and essential unit, the florin would be the acting unit or integer and chief coin of account, by which two decimal places only for the fraction would be necessary; whereas, were the pound made the integer, three places for the fraction would be necessary, which in daily practice would be intolerable.

Pounds could be recognised at once by "inspection," i.e., at sight; as all figures to the left of the first figure of the integer would represent this denomination thus: fl. 254·25 = £25 + fl. 4·25.

Articles now sold at per dozen would be sold at per ten or half a score. As a dozen articles at 20*s.* = one at 20*d.*, so ten at 8 florins (fl. 8·00) would = one at 80 dimes (fl. 0·80); and as it will be seen that the reduction in the price of ten articles to one can be arrived at by simply moving the decimal point one place to the right, so multiplication can be arrived at by moving the point to the left thus: ten at fl. 8·00 = 100 at fl. 80·00, and 1,000 at fl. 800·00.

The two new coins of aluminium, if 1·50 mm. larger than the farthing and halfpenny, would be so much less than the shilling and florin, and would by their size, perforation, and smooth edges be readily distinguishable from the silver coins.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

A MEETING of the Imperial Conference will ake place on May 22, 1911, and the growg importance of this body may be gauged by he fact that the President is to be the Prime inister, in place of the Secretary of State.

resident, The Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.
hairman (in the absence of the President), The Secretary of State for the Colonies.
Other Members, the Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada; the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of Australia; the Prime Minister of the Dominion of New Zealand; the Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa; The Prime Minister of Newfoundland.
Secretary, H. W. Just, C.B., C.M.G.
Senior Assistant Secretary, W. A. Robinson.
Junior Assistant Secretary, A. Berriedale Keith.

THE Imperial Dominions in North America include the whole of the northern part of that continent, excepting Alaska, and the small islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off the coast of Newfoundland in the Atlantic Ocean, and extend from the northern boundary of the United States to the Arctic Ocean. They also include the oldest British Dominion Newfoundland; the Bermudas; and the British West India Islands.

THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

From a physical point of view Canada may be divided into an eastern and a western division, the Red River Valley, in long. 97°, forming the separating line. The eastern division comprises three areas, presenting radically distinct aspects:—(1) The south-eastern area, bounded by the line of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, from Belle Isle to Quebec, thence by a line running directly south to Lake Champlain, which is generally hilly, and sometimes mountainous, with many fine stretches of agricultural and pastoral lands. (2) The southern and western area, presenting, in the main, a broad, level, and slightly undulating expanse of generally fertile country, with occasional step-like ridges or rocky escarpments. The main hydrographical feature is the chain of lakes, with an area of 150,000 square miles, contributing to the great river system of the St. Lawrence. (3) The northern area, embracing nearly two-thirds of the Dominion, with an average elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, pre-eminently a region of waterways, and including the great Laurentian mountain range. In this area are found the other great river systems, the Nelson and the Mackenzie. The western division referred to may also be said to possess two areas equally distinct in character. The first stretches from the Red River Valley to the Rock Mountains. Here, between lat. 49° and 54°, is the great Prairie Region, rising to the west in three terrace-like elevations, the lowest of which is 700 feet, and the third about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. North of the 54th parallel the country passes again into forest. The second area, from the western edge of the Prairie to the Pacific coast, is a distance of 400 miles, and contains the Rocky Mountains and the Gold and Cascade Ranges, whose summits are from 4,000 to 16,000 feet high, the country being on the whole densely wooded. The climate in the eastern and central portions of the Dominion presents greater extremes of cold and heat than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months' duration, and the winter four to five months. The country possesses great mineral wealth; coal, gold, silver, copper, nickel, lead, and asbestos are produced, and Canada is the principal oil-producing country in the British Empire; while iron, phosphates, salt, graphite, &c., occur; the total value of the minerals produced in 1909 was $90,415,763. The soil is generally fertile; all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated, and Canada, with its vast wheat-growing belt in the provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, justifies its claim to be "Britain's Granary."

The Dominion of Canada includes the various Provinces of North America formerly known as Upper and Lower Canada (now Ontario and Quebec respectively), New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, and the territories of the Hudson Bay Company, now styled Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, the North-West Territories, and the Yukon Territory; in fact, the whole of British North America except Newfoundland and Labrador. This territory, nearly as large as Europe, stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, and is estimated to contain a total area of 3,729,665 square miles, and an estimated population of 7,489,781 (31 March, 1910). The descendants of the French colonists reside chiefly in the Province of Quebec, where, out of a total population (1901) of 1,648,898, 1,429,260 are Roman Catholics, the majority of whom still very generally use the French language. A Religious Census of Canada was taken in 1901, and the numbers were:—Roman Catholics 2,229,600, Methodists 916,886, Presbyterians 842,442, Church of England 680,620, Baptists 316,477, Congregationalists 28,293, and Lutherans 92,524. Canada possesses an Active Militia numbering 51,560 men (including infantry, cavalry, and artillery), and a reserve estimated at 1,030,000. The table on page 566 shows the expansion of the revenue, particulars being given for 1868, 1878, 1888, 1898, and 1905-1910. The revenue has increased from $13,687,928 in 1867-8 to $101,503,711 in 1909-10, and there has been a total net surplus since Confederation of $153,483,704. The population has increased from 1,538,500 in 1841 to 5,371,315 in 1901, and 7,489,781 (estimated 31st March, 1910), the intermediate enumerations being (1851), 2,380,988; (1861), 3,182,412; (1871), 3,635,024; (1881), 4,324,810; and (1891), 4,833,239. In 1881 there were 14 cities and towns of 5,000 inhabitants and upwards, having a total population of 660,040; in 1901 there were 62 of such cities and towns, and their total population was about 1,330,000. Montreal has a population of nearly 600,000 (with suburbs), and Toronto the capital of Ontario, has over 380,000 inhabitants (including suburbs). Ottawa, the politic capital, has, in 1910, 90,000 inhabitants (100,000 including suburbs); Winnipeg, in Manitoba, from 241 in 1871, had grown to 42,300 in 1901, and now is estimated to exceed 130,000. Vancouver, in British Columbia, which had no existence in 1885, numbers over 110,000. The city of Dawson, the "business centre" of the Klondyke gold region, was a barren waste in 1897, and in 1901 had a population of 9,142. The general rate of increase throughout the Dominion in the last decade was a little over 11 per cent.

Canada was originally discovered by Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first settlement (Quebec) was founded by them in 1608. In 1759 Quebec succumbed to the British forces under General Wolfe, and in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858, having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of DOMINION OF CANADA, and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other provinces and territories of British North America. In 1870 the Province of Manitoba was formed, and, with the remainder of the Hudson Bay Territory, then known as the North-West Territories, admitted into the Dominion. In 1905 the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta were created, having previously formed part of the North-West Territories. British Columbia was admitted to the Dominion in 1871, and Prince Edward Island in 1873. By chaps. 3 and 27 of the Acts of 1905, the four provisional districts of Alberta, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, and Athabaska were formed into the two Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and were admitted into the Dominion on the 1st Sept. 1905. Yukon was made a separate territory by Chap. 6, Acts of Canadian Parliament, 1898. Newfoundland remains a separate colony.

GOVERNMENT.

Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief, Right Hon. the Earl Grey, P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. (appointed 1904 for five years, and since extended) £10,000
Aides-de-Camp, Capt. the Earl Percy, G. Gds.; Viscount Lascelles; Lt. R. C. Bingham, 1st L. Gds. ..... each 205
Governor-General's Secretary, Dougal Orme Malcolm, M.A. 750
Comptroller of the Household, Lambert Middleton.
Private Secretary, Arthur F. Sladen.

The executive government and authority are vested in the King, and exercised in his name by the Governor-General, aided by a Privy Council. The legislative power is a Parliament, consisting of an Upper House, styled the Senate, and a House of Commons. The Senate consists at present of 87 members, distributed between the various provinces thus: 24 for Ontario, 24 for Quebec, 10 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 3 for British Columbia, 4 for Manitoba, 4 for Alberta, and 4 for Saskatchewan. The members of the Senate are appointed for life by the Crown on the nomination of the Ministry for the time being; each nominee must be thirty years old, a resident in the province for which he is appointed, a naturalborn or naturalised subject of the King, and the owner of a property qualification amounting to $4,000. The House of Commons is chosen every five years at longest, and the newly-elected Parliament consists of 221 members; 86 being elected for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 18 for Nova Scotia, 13 for New Brunswick, 10 for Manitoba, 7 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 7 for Alberta, 10 for Saskatchewan, and 1 for Yukon. The House of Commons is also composed of natural-born or naturalised subjects of the King; no property qualification is necessary, and its members are elected upon a very wide suffrage. For electoral purposes each province is divided into districts, each of which returns a member on a majority of votes taken by ballot. The members of the House themselves elect their Speaker, and twenty, including the Speaker, form a quorum. Each province has also a separate Legislature and administration, with a Lieutenant-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General, at the head of the Executive. Justice is administered, as in England, by judges, police magistrates, and justices of the peace, of whom the first named are appointed by the Governor-General, for life, from among the foremost men at the Bar in the several provinces. The highest court is the Supreme Court of Canada, composed of a Chief Justice and five puisne judges, and holding three sessions in the year at Ottawa. The only other Dominion Court, viz., the Exchequer Court of Canada, is presided over by a separate judge, and its sittings may be held anywhere in Canada. The Provincial Courts include the Court of Chancery, Court of King's Bench, Court of Error and Appeal, Superior Courts, County Courts, General Sessions, and Division Courts. The duties of coroners are generally analogous to those in force in England, as are also methods of civil and criminal procedure, while trial by jury prevails.

THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO contains a total area of 222,000 sq. miles, and a population of 2,167,978, according to the census of 1901.

The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly composed of 106 members elected for four years (no property qualification being necessary), representing 102 electoral districts into which the Province is divided, but which differ from those sending members to the Dominion Parliament. The Executive Council consists of eleven members, eight of whomact as the Ministry of the Province, and three are without portfolio; the legislature meets every year at Toronto. The principal cities are Toronto, the capital of the Province, with great shipping interests on the Lakes, and the chief centre of industrial and commercial activity (population, 375,000); Hamilton, the "Birmingham of Canada" (70,221); Ottawa, the Federal capital, with a large lumber trade and woodenware manufactories (83,360); London (49,507), Kingston (19,193), Belleville (10,012), Chatham (10,220), Stratford (14,779), Guelph (14,789), St. Catharines(12,307), Brantford (20,721), St. Thomas (14,578), Windsor (16,142).

In 1909 the total area of cleared land was 14,257,169 acres, of which 9,103,793 acres were under crops, the total value of the land being $680,789,629. The total area under pasture was 3,180,780 acres, with 336,398 acres of orchards and vineyards. Average production in bushels per acre: Fall wheat, 24·1; spring wheat, 16·5; barley, 27·0; oats, 33·5; rye, 16·6; peas, 20·0; corn, 70·1; buckwheat, 24·2; beans, 18·4; potatoes, 145; turnips, 447; hay (tons), 1·20. 1,161 cheese factories produced 125,611,359 lb. of cheese, valued at $14,193,918, and 109 creameries made 9,015,206 lb. of butter ($2,175,954). There were 728,308 horses, 2,668,584 cattle, 1,130,667 sheep, 1,551,187 pigs, and 12,086,580 poultry in 1909. Fruit is grown on an extensive scale; there are vineyards and peach orchards of 50 or 60 acres in extent, and innumerable apple orchards. The Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph supplies a general education, together with a technical training in agriculture. The students meet part of their expenses by labouring on the experimental farm, the annual balance of cost for board, washing, and tuition being from £10 to £15 for natives and from £20 to £30 for students from other parts. Free grants of land are obtainable in this Province, and improved farms can also be bought at advantageous rates.

THE PROVINCE of QUEBEC contains an area estimated at 346,928 square miles, and a population (census 1901) of 1,620,974.

The Government of the Province is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Council, consisting of 24 members appointed for life, and a Legislative Assembly of 74 members elected for five years to represent the same number of electoral districts in the Province. The principal cities are Quebec (population, 78,000), the capital of the Province, with a large export timber trade, and the great seaport town of Canada; and Montreal (population, 389,837), the commercial metropolis, and the principal centre of the grain export trade north of New York, situate at the confluence of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers. Other important cities are Three Rivers (8,334), Hull (17,000), Sherbrooke (15,000), St. Hyacinthe (10,016), Levis (7,302). Ocean-going steamers ascend the St. Lawrence as far as Montreal. In 1905 1,228,200 tons of ocean-going shipping entered, and 1,256,930 tons cleared at Montreal.

The lumber industry is still by far the most important trade, but the settled portion of the country has been too much denuded of wood, and the provincial Government has found it necessary to organise an effective service of rangers to prevent the destruction of trees by forest fires. The forest lands cover an area of over 100,000,000 acres, of which 45,000,000 are under licence to cut timber. The wood-pulp industry is assuming great importance; several large factories have recently been built, and the value of the output, which was only $800,000 at the last census, is now probably ten times that amount. Improved farms may often be obtained in the eastern townships, largely occupied by settlers from Great Britain, at from £4 to £6 per acre, including dwelling-house, outbuildings, and fencing; while unimproved lands may be bought from the Government at from 20 to 60 cents per acre, and the purchase-money paid in five instalments. The area of land subdivided for the purpose of settlement unsold on 30 June, 1909, was 6,238,099 acres. In 1906 there were 1,392 cheese factories, 627 butter factories, and 736 butter and cheese factories combined.

Quebec is 2,634 nautical miles from London.

NOVA SCOTIA, a Province of the Dominion, is a peninsula between 43° 30′—47° N. lat. and 60°—66° 15′ W. long., and is connected with New Brunswick by a low fertile isthmus about thirteen miles wide. It comprises an area (with Cape Breton Island) of 20,600 square miles, one-fifth part of which consists of lakes, rivers, and inlets of the sea; of the whole, about 10,000,000 acres are fit for tillage—that is, over half the entire area—and the soil in the western half of the Province, particularly in the Annapolis Valley and around the Basin of Minas, is unsurpassed for fertility, owing to the rich marine deposits left on the shore-land by the tides of the Bay of Fundy. The climate is delightful, and the winter is not so cold as in other parts of the Dominion. The population of the entire Province in 1901 was 459,574. In 1908 there were 5,064,968 acres of land occupied (2,219,573 improved), of which 892,900 acres were under crop, 1,282,050 acres in pasture, and 54,051 acres in gardens and orchards, the remainder being woodland. Hay is the most important crop of the Province, occupying one-fourth of all the improved land, and yielding over 1,000,000 tons. Fruit is extensively cultivated, and Nova Scotia apples are claimed to be the best in the world (2,000,000 bushels in 1908), the principal district being the Annapolis Valley. Halifax, the capital, is one of the terminals of the Intercolonial Railway, and has a magnificent harbour covering ten square miles, which is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and the entrepôt of a large trade with the West Indies and South America, with a dockyard and a dry dock which can accommodate the largest vessels afloat.

The coal deposits are extensive and of good quality, 6,299,282 gross tons were produced in 1908: iron ores are plentiful, and extensive manufactures of iron and steel are carried on at Sydney, Cape Breton; gold mines are being profitably worked. The principal fisheries are upon the eastern coast, and the largest catches in value made are cod, lobster, mackerel, haddock, herring, halibut and salmon. The manufacturing interest is growing. There is a Government agricultural college and experimental farm near Truro for men and women. Improved farms of 100 to 250 acres, with house and buildings, may be obtained at from £100 to £1,000, whilst the Government offer uncleared Crown lands at $80 per 100 acres, and 80 cents per acre for any additional quantity. Hunting, shooting and fishing abound; among wild animals there are bears, foxes, moose-deer, otter, mink, sable, muskrat, hares, racoons, and squirrels; and among the feathered game are the woodcock, plover, snipe, partridges, ducks, geese, and curlew.

Nova Scotia has a Provincial Government, administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, aided by an Executive Council, a Legislative Council of 21 members, and a Legislative Assembly of 38 members.

CAPE BRETON ISLAND, formerly a distinct Colony, now incorporated with Nova Scotia, contains an area of 3,125 square miles, with a population of 97,190 inhabitants. The chief town is Sydney, on the eastern coast, having valuable collieries in the neighbourhood. The Intercolonial Railway connects the island with the mainland.

NEW BRUNSWICK is situated between 45°—48° N. lat. and 63° 47'–69° W. long., and comprises an area of 27,985 square miles, with a population in 1901 of 331,120. It was first colonised by British subjects in 1761, and in 1783 by disbanded troops from New England. The chief industrial pursuits arise from the produce of the forests and the fisheries. Coal is found; also silver, lead, antimony, copper, iron, manganese, and other valuable minerals in considerable quantities. According to the census of 1891 the occupied land amounted to 4,471,250 acres, of which 1,509,790 acres were improved, 1,018,704 acres being under crop, 479,607 acres in pasture, and 11,479 acres devoted to gardens and orchards. The value of agricultural produce in 1900 was $12,873,480. Free grants of land are offered, and settlement encouraged. Improved farms are obtainable at reasonable rates. Sport of all kinds is abundant. The fisheries include salmon, cod, mackerel, herring, and shad, and were in 1905 of the value of $4,671,084, ranking second in importance to those of Nova Scotia. St. John is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and is connected by the Intercolonial Railway with Montreal.

The Provincial Government of New Brunswick is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 46 members elected by the people.

MANITOBA, formerly the Red River Settlement, was formed into a distinct Province in 1870, and admitted into the Confederation on 15th July in the same year. It is situated in about the centre of the continent, between 49°—53° N. lat. and 95°—101° W. long. (these parallels and meridians forming its boundaries). Its area is 72,864 square miles. Its population, census 1906, was 365,688. The Assiniboine and Red Rivers intersect the Province, and the soil is fertile and productive; emigration is invited and encouraged, and liberal grants of land are made to settlers. In 1909 4,777,210 acres were cultivated, of which 2,642,111 acres were under wheat, and the crops were 45,774,707 bushels of wheat, 50,983,056 oats, 16,416,634 barley, and 330,054 flax, rye, and peas. The main line of the Canadian Pacific, the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways traverse Manitoba, and there are several other lines in operation. The Red and Assiniboine Rivers are also navigable for a considerable course in the Province. The telephone system and the grain elevators have been acquired by the Government.

The Government of the Province is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council of 6 members and a Legislative Assembly of 41 members.

THE PROVINCE OF SASKATCHEWAN was formed, by an enactment of the Parliament of Canada taking effect September 1, 1905, out of the territory formerly known as the North-West Territories. Saskatchewan covers the area included between longitude 102° and 110° W. of Greenwich, with a small extension east of 102° at the south-eastern corner, and between latitude 49° and 60° N. The Surveyor-General of Canada estimates the Province to contain over 250,000 square miles, of which 86,000 square miles are land suited for grain-growing, 32,000 are land requiring irrigation, 106,387 are land suitable for ranches or other description of farming, and 27,000 square miles are water.

The census of 1901 showed the number of people within the area as 91,460, whilst the quinquennial census taken on June 24, 1906, showed the population to have increased to 257,763. The Province is being rapidly opened up by the means of railways, and is now traversed by the C.P.R. and the Canadian Northern Railway, while the Grand Trunk Pacific will cross the Province from east to west, with a network of branches. Several other railway projects are under consideration for opening up communication between the Province and the deep-water ports on Hudson's Bay, by which it is expected that for a number of months in each year the distance between Saskatchewan and European markets will be reduced almost to that of New York, the greater part of which will be by water.

The principal products of Saskatchewan are grain and cattle, and Government encouragement is being given to the dairy industry. In 1898 there were but 276,253 acres under wheat, whilst in 1907 there were 2,374,058. In 1898 4,780,440 bushels were produced; in 1908 the yield increased to 45,000,000 bushels.

The range country in the Province is of limited extent, being almost entirely confined to the south-western corner, adjoining the range country of Southern Alberta. The northern two-thirds of the Province is known only to the traders of the Hudson's Bay Company and the Indian missionary.

The Government is vested in the Lieutenant-Governor, aided and advised by an Executive Council of five members chosen from time to time by the Lieutenant-Governor. Following the regular procedure of similar British institutions, the members of the Executive Council seek re-election to the Legislative Assembly, in which manner the fullest responsibility to the people is secured. The Province is divided into forty-one electoral districts, each of which is represented in the Legislative Assembly by one member.

The Supreme Court consist of a Chief Justice and 5 puisne judges; it has original and appellate jurisdiction. There are 8 judicial districts, each presided over by a District Court Judge, who also acts as Surrogate Court Judge for his district.

Rural educational areas, approximating twenty-five square miles in extent, are established as school districts, and their affairs each managed by an elective board of trustees.

The climate has a wide range—from 90° to −40° at its greatest extremes. Rainfall is not excessive, and there is an unusual amount of sunshine at all periods of the year.

THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES of Canada comprise the present unorganised part of British North America lying to the north of the Provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. Their administration (Headquarters, Ottawa) is entrusted to the officers of the Royal North-West Mounted Police, the Comptroller of the Force, Lieut.-Col. Fred. White, C.M.G., being also Commissioner of the Territories, with full executive, legislative, and administrative authority. The Territories for nearly 250 years have been under the almost absolute control of the Hudson's Bay Company, but of recent years the Dominion of Canada has taken an increasingly active part in the administration of the affairs of the country. Several expeditions to Hudson's Bay with a view to ascertaining the feasibility of the navigation of the Bay and Straits have been made, and at several points on the shores of the Bay police posts are maintained, being visited from time to time by an exploring ship sent into the Bay for that purpose.

THE PROVINCE OF ALBERTA was erected into a Province by an enactment of the Parliament of Canada, taking effect Sept. 1, 1905, out of the territory acquired from the Hudson's Bay Company, and until the date above mentioned it formed part of the North-West Territories. The total area of the Province is about 253,000 square miles, including about 2,500 square miles of water, and the population (1909) is estimated at 300,000. The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly composed of forty-one (41) members, elected for five years, representing 39 electoral districts into which the Province is divided. Cities of Edmonton and Calgary have two members each. The Executive Council consists of four members.

Alberta is rapidly developing into a grain-producing territory, and where, twenty years ago there existed a wilderness with scattered bands of primitive Indians and strong detachments of North-West Mounted Police for the sole inhabitants, there is now a succession of wheat fields, homesteads, villages, and towns. While settlers from the U.S., Eastern Canada, and the British Isles arrive in annually increasing numbers. The total area in crops, 1909, was 1,242,644 acres: Spring wheat, 324,472 acres, yielding 6,155,43[illegible] bushels; winter wheat, 102,767 acres, yielding 2,312,344 bushels; oats, 693,901 acres, yielding 24,819,661 bushels; barley, 107,764 acres, yielding 3,310,332 bushels. The Provincial Government operate 24 creameries, where they manufacture butter. Free homesteads are available for thousands of settlers in desirable localities.

The principal cities are Edmonton, Wetaskiwin, Calgary, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, and Strathcona.

THE PROVINCE OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND lies in the southern part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, between New Brunswick and Cape Breton, that is to say, between 46°—47° N. lat. and 62°—64° 30′ W. long. It is about 140 miles in length, and from 4 to 34 miles in breadth; its area is 2,000 square miles (about equal to that of the English county of Norfolk), and its population (census 1901) 103,259. The island was first settled by the French, who held it for many years as a fishing station. The British took it from them in 1745, but afterwards restored it; they seized it again, however, during the Seven Years' War (1756—1763), and compelled the greater part of the French inhabitants to leave, and from that time it has remained British. The island is divided into three counties (King's, Queen's, and Prince), each of which elects four representatives. Its inhabitants are almost exclusively engaged in agriculture, considerable attention, however, being devoted to the fishe[illegible] and to the breeding of horses and sheep. There were (1891) 718,092 acres of improved land, of which 536,175 acres are under crops, 178,072 acres of pasture land, and 3,845 acres of gardens and orchards. The soil consists for the most part of a rich red loam, uniform in character and peculiarly suited to the growth of grasses. Nearly the whole of the land is now cleared, and improved farms can be bought at about 20 dollars an acre.

The Provincial Government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor and an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members elected by the people.

CAPITAL, Charlottetown, on the shore of Hillsborough Bay, which forms a good harbour, is distant from Liverpool 2,630 miles, transit about 8 days. Population, 12,080. Summerside (pop. 2,875) and Georgetown (pop. 1,060), on the east coast, are also ports of considerable size, and the centres of shipbuilding trade.

BRITISH COLUMBIA, Canada's Maritime Province on the Pacific Ocean, is the largest in the Dominion, its area being variously estimated at from 372,630 to 395,610 square miles. It is a great irregular quadrangle about 700 miles from north to south, with an average width of about 400 miles, lying between latitudes 49° and 60° N. It is bounded on the south by the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the States of Washington, Idaho and Montana, on the west by the Pacific Ocean and Southern Alaska, on the north by Yukon and Mackenzie Territories, and on the east by the Province of Alberta. From the 49th degree north to the 54th degree the eastern boundary follows the axis of the Rocky Mountains, and thence north to the 120th meridian.

British Columbia has very extensive coal measures, and a vast and compact area of merchantable timber; the mines have produced over $347,000,000, and are still in the early stages of development; the fisheries produce an average annual value of $8,000,000. Only one-tenth of the available agricultural and fruit lands are at present settled upon, and there are acres of pulpwood as yet unexploited. There are undeveloped deposits of magnetite and hematite iron and petroleum. The average annual yield of the industries is: minerals, $25,000,000; lumber, $12,700,000; fisheries, $8,000,000; fruit farm products, $8,500,000; and manufactures, $30,000,000. The climate is healthful and temperate. The principal exports are fish, coal, gold, silver, minerals and timber. In 1909, 3,846 sea-going vessels (3,403,309 tons) inwards, and 4,120 (3,592,146 tons) outwards, entered and cleared, while 20,334 coast-wise vessels (6,932,842 tons) entered and cleared outward. There are 1,750 miles of railway in operation (mainly C.P.R.), and the Grand Trunk Pacific has commenced building its main line eastward from Prince Rupert.

The population of the Province is estimated at 280,000, exclusive of Indians and Asiatics.

CANADIAN RAILWAYS.

The GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS are the Intercolonial and the Prince Edward Island Railways. The length of the Intercolonial system is 1,450 miles. The main line extends from Montreal to Halifax, N.S., 837 miles; to St. John, N.B., 740 miles; to Sydney, Cape Breton, 990 miles; and to North Sydney, 983 miles. In addition, the Government owns and maintains the Windsor Branch Railway, from a point on the Intercolonial to Windsor, N.S., 32 miles, which is operated under lease. The Intercolonial was built in fulfilment of the express stipulations of the British North America Act of 1867, confederating the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Canada, in order to form a connected system of railway communication between these Provinces. In this work, there were absorbed the existing Nova Scotia Railway, and the European and North American Railway, the whole being consolidated under the present name in 1872. By leasing arrangements, it was extended to Montreal in 1898; the portion so leased being the 37½ miles from Ste. Rosalie Junction to Montreal. At Sydney and North Sydney, it connects by steamer with Newfoundland. The Prince Edward Island Railway system, 269 miles, extends the whole length of the Island, from Souris on the east to Tignish on the west, with certain branches. Connection is made by steamer, all the year round, with the Intercolonial, at Pictou from Charlottetown, and at Point du Chene from Summerside.

The CANADIAN PACIFIC stretches across the entire continent, from St. John, N.B., to Vancouver on the coast of British Columbia, a total distance of 3,383 miles. (Headquarters, Montreal.)—The share capital amounts to $205,616,666 and $136,711,616 Debenture Stock. The total length of the system is 10,270 miles, in Canada, while the total mileage controlled both in Canada and the United States amounts to over 15,200 miles. The Company has large fleets of steamers both on Atlantic and Pacific. The distance from China, Japan, and the Pacific coast generally to Liverpool is from 1,000 to 1,200 miles less by the Canadian Pacific Railway than by other routes. European Headquarters: 62–65, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

The GRAND TRUNK was originally formed in 1853 by an Act of the Legislature, and in 1893 a number of lines were consolidated, forming a continuous line through the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario. London Office, Dashwood House, New Broad Street, E.C. The total loan and share capital of the company amounts to over £71,000,000 sterling. The mileage of the lines owned and leased is 5,467 miles, including the mileage in the U.S. The eastern extremities of the line are Quebec and Portland (Maine), and it extends westward to Detroit, Chicago, Grand Haven, and Muskegon, supplying the means of communication with Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara, Buffalo, Detroit, and all the principal cities and towns in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario. The International Limited, "The Railway Greyhound of Canada," runs every day of the year. About 3,500 miles are under construction, including The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, an "All Red" route and the only "all Canadian" transcontinental route connecting Halifax, Nova Scotia, on the east over the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific Coast.

The CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY* was founded in 1897, has an aggregate mileage of over 5,000 miles, and stretches from the Atlantic to the Rocky Mountains. It runs principally in the wheat-growing and lumbering districts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Headquarters, Toronto; London Office, Bond Court, Walbrook, E.C.

* In 1910 this railway inaugurated a triple turbine steamship connexion with Great Britain (Montreal-Quebec-Bristol).

Newfoundland.

This island, situated between 46° 37′—51° 39′ N. lat. and 52° 35′—59° 25′ W. long., on the north-east side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, is about 317 miles long and 316 miles broad, and contains about 40,200 square miles, and at the census of 1901 it had a population of 217,037, not including those resident in the portion of Labrador (3,947) within the jurisdiction of Newfoundland. Of these 75,989 are Roman Catholics, 73,008 Church of England, 61,388 Methodists, 1,497 Presbyterians, and 9,099 various. At the end of 1909 the estimated population of Newfoundland was 234,588, and of Labrador 4,026.

This is the oldest English colony, for it was discovered by John Cabot in 1497; the first land seen was hailed as Prima Vista—the present Cape Bonavista. The inhabitants are chiefly located on the coast-line of the shore and bays, and the greater part are engaged in fishing—for cod in summer, and seal fishing in winter and spring; agriculture, mining, and lumbering are also engaging attention and affording means of employment, while large pulp and paper mills are in course of erection. Lakes and rivers abound; it is estimated that about one-third of the surface is covered with water. The larger portion of the interior is practically in a state of Nature; but 638 miles of railway have opened up large tracts of rich agricultural, mineral, and timber lands hitherto of small value. The trans-insular line runs to Port-aux-Basques, viâ Exploits River and Bay of Islands, with branch connexions to Placentia, the principal settlements in Conception Bay, and to Lewisporte (in Notre Dame Bay). Branch lines are under construction. The climate is salubrious, and the people are a strong, healthy, hardy, industrious race. The thermometer seldom falls below zero in winter, and ranges in the shade in summer from 70° to 80°.

The principal exports of the Colony are codfish, value $7,398,536; cod, whale, and seal oil, value $786,300; sealskins, $433,620; tinned lobsters, $343,619; copper, copper ore, iron pyrites and other minerals, $1,189,029. The total value of the fishery products in 1909 was $9,346,246.

LABRADOR, a dependency of Newfoundland, forms the most easterly part of America, and extends from Blanc Sablon, in the Straits of Belleisle, on the south, to Cape Chudleigh, at the entrance to Hudson's Straits, on the north; it possesses valuable cod, herring, trout, and salmon fisheries. One of the grandest spectacles in the universe is provided by the Great Falls of Labrador, on the Hamilton River.

The Government is administered by a Governor appointed by the Crown, a responsible executive of nine, a legislative council of not over twenty appointed for life, and a House of Assembly of thirty-six, elected by the people every four years. In 1890 the franchise was given to all males of twenty-one years and over.

THE BERMUDAS.

The Bermudas, or Somers Islands, are a cluster of about 100 small islands (15 or 16 only of which are inhabited, the rest being mere rocks) situated in the west of the Atlantic Ocean, in 32° 15′ N. lat. and 64° 51′ W. long, comprising an area of about 19 square miles, and containing (1901) an estimated population of 17,535, of whom 6,383 are white, exclusive of army and navy. These islands derive their name from Bermudez, a Spaniard, who sighted them in 1527; but they were first colonised by Admiral Sir George Somers, who was shipwrecked here in 1609, on his way to Virginia. The nearest point of the mainland is Cape Hatteras, in North Carolina, 580 miles distant. Bermuda possesses a strongly fortified dockyard, where the British squadron refits.

The Government is administered by a Governor, who is also commander-in-chief of the military forces. He is advised by an Executive Council of 6 members, appointed by the Crown. There is also a Legislative Council, composed of 9 members appointed by the Crown; and a representative House of Assembly consisting of 36 members, four of whom are elected by each of the nine parishes. There are 1,318 electors, whose individual qualifications are the possession of freehold property of not less value than £60. Hamilton is the chief town and the seat of government; population (1901), 2,246.

THE WEST INDIES.

THE West Indies are an immense number of islands and islets, some of them mere rocks, extending from 10° to 27° North, and from 59° 30′ to 85° West, comprising a total area of about 95,000 square miles, of which the Greater Antilles occupy not less than 83,000 square miles. The British Islands have an area of about 13,750 square miles, and a population of 1,350,000.

JAMAICA,*

aboriginally Xaymaca, or Land of Wood and Water—an island situate in the Caribbean Sea, about 90 miles to the south of Cuba, within 17° 43′–18° 32′ North lat. and 76° 11′–78° 21′ W. long. It is the largest and most valuable of the British West Indian Islands, being 144 miles in length and 49 in extreme breadth, containing an area of 4,193 square miles, and a population, in April, 1891, of 639,491, showing an increase during the previous decade of 58,687; in 1891 the whites numbered 14,692; coloured, 121,955; blacks, 488,624, and there were a number of coolies and Chinese. The estimated population on March 31, 1910, was 862,422.

Jamaica was discovered on May 3, 1494, by Columbus, who called it St. Jago. It was taken possession of by the Spaniards in 1509; but in 1655 a British expedition, sent out by Oliver Cromwell, under Penn and Venables, attacked the island, which capitulated after a trifling resistance. In 1670 it was formally ceded to England by the Treaty of Madrid.

From the sea-level on all sides of Jamaica a series of ridges gradually ascend towards the central ranges, dividing the large rivers, and attaining, in the culminating Peak of the Blue Mountains, in the eastern part of the island, an elevation of 7,423 feet. From these mountains at least 70 streams descend to the north and south shores, but none are navigable except the Black River, and that only for small craft. There are several excellent harbours, and the island is intersected by good roads. There are 185 miles of railway open. Telegraph stations and post-offices are established in every town and in very many villages; the number of accounts open in the savings banks was 40,027 (1910). Most of the staple products of tropical climates are raised. Sugar and rum are manufactured and exported; the latter is still counted the best in the world; and the coffee raised in certain districts of the Blue Mountains fetches the highest price that is given in the London market. There is an extensive trade in fruits, chiefly bananas and oranges, with the U.S.A. and U.K. Maize and Indian corn grow luxuriantly. The Guinea grass, from four to six feet in height, grows wild, and is superior to any other for pasturage, while the woods furnish an abundance of rich dye-stuffs, drugs, and spices, and the forests abound in the rarest of cabinet woods. The Governor is assisted by a Privy Council not to exceed 8 members; the Legislative Council consists of the Governor, the senior military officer, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Director of Public Works, and the Collector-General (all ex officio), and of such other persons, not exceeding 10, as the King or the Governor may appoint, called Nominated Members, and 14 elected by the people, being one for each parish of the island. The island is divided into three counties, Surrey in the east, Middlesex in the centre, and Cornwall in the west. The principal city is Kingston, the seat of government and the largest port and town, pop. 46,542; the next in importance are Spanish Town, pop. 5,019, and Montego Bay, 4,803. Chief exports: Fruit, 59·9; coffee, 5·0; sugar, 3·6; dye-woods, 2·3; pimento, 2·7; rum, 9·3; and minor products, 16·1. The chief customers are the U.S.A., 61·5, and the U.K., 21·2.

TURKS AND CAICOS ISLANDS.

These islands geographically form a sort of annexe of the Bahama group, from which Government they were separated in 1848. In 1873 they were annexed to Jamaica, from the north-west of which they are distant about 420 miles. They have an area of about 170 square miles. The population in 1901 was 5,287, of which the principal island, Grand Turk, contains 1,751. Salt is the principal industry of the islands, and Sisal hemp is grown and exported.

A Commissioner administers the government of the Dependency, assisted by a Legislative Board. This Board has control of local finance, and passes local ordinances, subject to the assent of the Governor of Jamaica, who is also the medium of communication between the Commissioner and the Colonial Office. The Legislature of Jamaica has the power to pass laws applying to the Turks and Caicos Islands, and the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Jamaica extends to the Islands in matters of divorce and matrimonial causes.

CAYMAN ISLANDS.

The Cayman Islands, forming a dependency of Jamaica, are situated between the meridians 79° 44′ and 81° 26′ W., parallels of 19° 44′ and 19° 46′ N., and consist of three islands, Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac, and Little Cayman. They are said to have been discovered by Christopher Columbus on his return voyage from Porto Bello to Haiti, and called "Las Tortugas."

The islands were originally a rendezvous for pirates, as is evidenced by the finding every now and again of "treasure" buried in the earth close to the sea coast.

There is very little sickness attributable to the climate and no malarial fever or other tropical or sub-tropical disease. The birth rate in 1909 was 27·5, the death rate 8·5 per 1,000. The population numbers about 6,000, the majority being whites. The inhabitants lead a seafaring life; the principal industries are coconut planting and turtle fishing.

The government is administered by a Commissioner, assisted by the "Justices and Vestry," in the same manner as the government of the Turks Islands. The principal town is George town, in Grand Cayman.

THE BAHAMAS,

a chain of islands lying between 21° 42′—27° 3 N. lat. and 72° 40′—79° 5′ W. long. The group consists of about twenty inhabited islands, and a immense number of islets and rocks, comprising an area of about 4,404 square miles, and a pop ation in 1909 of 61,277, the most part being descendants of liberated Africans. The principal islands are: New Providence (containing the capital, Nassau), San Salvador, Abaco, Grand Bahama, Long Island, Eleuthera, Exuma, Mayaguana Harbour Island, Great Inagua, Andros Islands, Watlings Island, Rum Cay, Long Cay (F.I.), Ragged Island and Biminis. Originally settled by Englishmen, the Bahamas were, in 1781, surprised by the Spanish, but at the peace of Versailles were restored to the English. The climate is salubrious, and in the winter Nassau, which is outside the tropics, is frequented by many Americans. The chief industry is sponge-gathering; the exports of sponge in 1909 being valued at £87,757. The fruit trade is principally with the United States, bananas, coco-nuts, fruit and vegetables being exported. Mahogany, lignum-vitæ, mastic, ironwood, ebony, logwood, and satinwood are found throughout the islands; tobacco, castor-oil plants, and cotton flourish, but enterprise is lacking to encourage these industries. A fibre industry is fairly established, the land under the fibre plant being 25,000 acres, and the value of Bahamas hemp fibre exported in 1908, £42,627. The imports are chiefly food-stuffs, wines, spirits, cotton, silk and worsted fabrics, and hardware.

The Government is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 9 members, a Legislative Council of 9 members, and a Representative Assembly of 29 members.

THE LEEWARD ISLANDS.

The Leeward Islands under British authority consist of the 5 presidencies of (1) Antigua, with Barbuda and Redonda; (2) St. Christopher and Nevis, with Anguilla; (3) Dominica, under Administrators; (4) Montserrat; and (5) the Virgin Islands, all, except the latter, having their own local legislature. These 5 presidencies make up the colony of the Leeward Islands, which is administered by a Governor, to whom the Administrators and Commissioners are subordinate, and which has also a general Legislative Council, possessing concurrent legislative powers with the local Legislatures on certain subjects. The federal colony in 1901 contained 127,434 inhabitants 56,952 males and 70,482 females). The General Legislative Council consists of 8 ex-officio and 8 elective members with the Governor as President.

(1) Antigua (and Barbuda).

Antigua is the seat of government and residence of the Governor-in-Chief. It lies in 17° 6′ N. lat. and 61° 45′ W. long., and is about 70 miles in circumference. Its area is nearly 108 square miles, equal to 68,980 acres, of which nearly 17,000 are under cultivation. The population (with Barbuda) in 1901 was 34,953, including 15,861 males and 19,092 females. Settled by the English in 1632, and granted to Lord Willoughby by Charles II., this is one of those islands which has always been more distinctively English. It was at one time a naval and military station of some importance. It is much less hilly and wooded than the other Leeward Islands. It is largely given up to the cultivation of sugar, and two central sugar factories have been erected, sugar canes being purchased from surrounding estates and peasants. A considerable amount of cotton is being planted; it also exports molasses, tamarinds, and arrow-root. In March, 1898, the Crown Colony system of government was instituted.

Barbuda is situated 30 miles N. of Antigua, of which it is a dependency, in lat. 17° 35′ N., long. 61° 45′ W. Area, 75 square miles. Population, 775. The island is flat and fertile in parts, producing cotton, corn, pepper, tobacco, and vegetables. It was formerly a possession of the Codrington family.
Magistrate, O. Nugent £50

Redonda, a small island with a phosphate industry, has a population (1901) of 18.

(2) St. Christopher (St. Kitts) and Nevis (with Anguilla).

The islands of St. Kitts, Nevis, and Anguilla were united in 1882 to form one Presidency, and taken together they had a population (1901) of 46,446, and a total area of about 150 square miles. The climate is decidedly healthy for the tropics, the temperature being from 78° to 85°.

St. Kitts, the principal island of the Presidency, and the oldest colony in the West Indies, is situated in lat. 17° 18 N. and long. 62° 48′ W., and comprises an area of 68 square miles, its greatest length being 28 miles, and greatest breadth about 5 miles. It is one of the most effectively cultivated sugar islands in the West Indies, a continuous line of green estates sweeping up all round the coast from the sea towards the central cone, which rises to a height of 3,711 feet (Mount Misery). The capital, Basseterre, pop. (1901) 9,962, is a port of registry, and had 67 sailing vessels of 1,132 tons in 1909.

Nevis (separated from St. Kitts by a strait some 3 miles wide) has an area of 50 square miles, with a population in 1901 of 12,774. Sugar-cane and cotton are grown. Its greatest elevation is 3,596 feet. Chief town, Charlestown. Pop. (1901), 1,050.

Anguilla is about 60 miles N.W. of St. Kitts, 16 miles in length, and varies in breadth from 1 to 3 miles, containing an area of 35 square miles. Population (1901) 3,890. Salt is the principal production, besides cattle, ponies, and garden stock, while cotton is extensively cultivated.

the largest island of the colony, and the loftiest of the Lesser Antilles, is situate between 15° 20′—15° 45′ N. lat. and 61° 13′—61° 30′ W. long., 95 miles S. of Antigua, and is about 29 miles long and 15 broad, comprising an area of 291 sq. miles, or 186,240 acres, of which about 70,000 acres are under cultivation. The island is of volcanic origin and very mountainous and picturesque, abounding in streams fairly well stocked with fish, and the soil is very fertile. The temperature varies, according to the altitude, from 55° to 85°. The cultivation of sugar has been practically replaced by cocoa, limes, coffee, and fruit. The population numbered 29,000 in 1901. The climate is healthy, and during the winter months very pleasant. Yellow fever is unknown, and from November to June the island is suitable as a health resort for pulmonary and rheumatic invalids. There is an Executive Council composed of official and unofficial members, and a Legislative Council, consisting of the Administrator who sits as President, and 6 official and 6 non-official members nominated by the Governor. The principal towns are Roseau, on the south-west coast, population (1901) about 5,000, and Portsmouth, population about 2,500.

is situated in 16° 45′ N. lat. and 62° W. long., 26 miles S.W. of Antigua. It is about 11 miles in length and 7 in breadth, comprising an area of 32½ square miles, and in 1909 an estimated population of 14,732. Discovered by Columbus in 1493, it was settled by Englishmen, but conquered and held by the French, and only finally assigned to Great Britain in 1784. It is justly considered the most healthy and beautiful of the Antilles; it contains three active Soufrières and several hot springs, while the scenery is charmingly diversified. About two-thirds of the island are mountainous, the rest well cultivated. The lime-tree is largely grown, and 235,021 lb. of Sea Island cotton, to the value of £17,626, were exported in 1909-10. A flourishing fruit and vegetable preserving industry has been started—jams, preserves and pickles, of various sorts being made in considerable quantities, and shipped to the U.K. and Canada. The chief town is Plymouth, with a population (1901) of 1,461.

(5) THE VIRGIN ISLANDS,

a group of islands belonging chiefly to Great Britain and Denmark, form a connecting link between the Greater and Lesser Antilles. Such of the islands as are British became so in 1666; the principal are—Tortola (the largest) situate in 18° 27′ N. lat. and 64° 40′ W. long. Virgin Gorda, and Anegada. The area of the British possessions is 58 square miles, and the population in 1901 was 4,908. There is good pasturage for cows, sheep, and goats. Sugar and cotton are grown in increasing quantity; fishing and poultry-rearing are also carried on. A valuable mine of copper has been worked at Virgin Gorda. The capital of the group is Road Town, on the south-east of Tortola; population (1901), 32

THE WINDWARD ISLANDS.

The Windward, or Southern, group of the West Indian islands includes Barbados, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, the Grenadines, Grenada, and Tobago. Of these, Barbados is a separate colony with its own governor, and Tobago is attached to Trinidad. The Government of the Windward Islands is made up of the three colonies of Grenada (the seat government), St. Vincent, and St. Lucia, with their dependencies, the Grenadines being divided between Grenada and St. Vincent. There is one governor for the three islands; but there is no General Legislative Council as in the Leeward Islands, and no common tariff or treasury. There is a Court of Appeal, consisting of the judges of the three colonies and of Barbados, a common Audit, and a common Lunatic Asylum; but, with this exception, each island retains its own institutions, and in the governor's absence is governed by an Administrator subordinate to him. The aggregate population (1908) was 180,675, and the total area 508 square miles.

GRENADA (AND THE GRENADINES).

Grenada is situated between the parallels of 12° 30′–11° 58′ N. lat. and 61° 20′–61° 35′ W. long., and is about 21 miles in length and 12 miles in breadth; it is about 96 miles north of Trinidad, 58 miles S.S.W. of St. Vincent, and 100 miles S.W. of Barbados. Area, about 85,120 acres, population (including some of the Grenadines), 74,160 (1909). The country is mountainous and very picturesque, and the climate is healthy. The Grand Etang, a lake on the summit of a mountain ridge about 1,740 feet above the level of the sea, and Lake Antoine, are the most remarkable natural curiosities; near the former a sanatorium, under Government auspices, has been established. Grenada was discovered by Columbus in 1498, and named Conception. It was originally colonised by the French, and was definitely ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Versailles in 1783.

The soil is very fertile, and cocoa, spices, rubber, cotton, coffee, and fruit are grown. The forests are rich in timbers, particularly bullet wood, locust, mahogany, white cedar, and balba, and vanilla and several varieties of rum-yielding trees are indigenous. Turtles are caught and exported, and whales are met with, especially among the Grenadines. The imports chiefly comprise dry goods, bread-stuffs, hardware, &c. The Legislative Council consists of 14 members, seven of whom are officials.

St. George's, on the south-west coast, is the chief town, and possesses a good harbour.

The GRENADINES are a chain of small islands lying between Grenada and St. Vincent (within which Governments they are included), comprising an area of 8,462 acres. The largest island is Carriacou, attached to the Government of Grenada, pop. (1909) 7,795.

ST. LUCIA,

the largest and most picturesque of the Windward group, situated in 13° 50′ N. lat. and 60° 58′ W. long., at a distance of about 90 miles W.N.W. of Barbados, 21 miles N. of St. Vincent, and 21 miles S.E. of Martinique, is 24 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 12 miles. It comprises an area of 233 square miles, with a population (in 1909) of 55,835. It possibly possesses the most interesting history of all the smaller islands. Fights raged hotly around it, and it constantly changed hands as between the English and the French. It is mountainous, its highest point being 3,145 feet above the sea, and for the most part it is covered with forest and tropical vegetation. The principal exports are sugar (5,360 tons in 1909), rum (27,883 gals. in 1909), cocoa (2,170,000 lb. in 1909)—which is now being extensively cultivated—fuel, and sticks. The chief places are Castries, the capital (pop. 1901, 8,000), and Soufrière (pop. 2,300).

Port Castries, one of the finest in the W.I., is a coaling depôt. In 1909, 645 steamers (tonnage 1,248,798) entered Port Castries.

an island about 95 miles west of Barbados, situate in 13° 10′ N. lat. and 60° 57′ W. long., is 18 miles in length and 11 in breadth, comprising an area of 140 sq. miles, and an estimated population (1910), including dependencies, of 53,448. In 1846 a large number of Portuguese labourers, amounting to 2,400, immigrated hither, and proved a valuable acquisition to the island. St. Vincent is more thoroughly English than the two other islands of the group, though it has been the scene of warfare. In 1783 it was secured to Great Britain.

The chief products are sugar, molasses, rum, arrowroot, cassava, cocoa, coffee, cotton (for which a factory has been built by the Government), and spices. The St. Vincent arrowroot has a specially good name in London, and its Sea-island cotton is of particularly fine quality. Its chief imports are linen, cotton and woollen manufactures, American flour, fish, &c. The price of Crown lands (which are mountain lands only) averages £3 per acre, according to locality and terms of purchase; steps have also been taken to settle the labouring classes on lands specially acquired for the purpose.

BARBADOS,

the most windward of the West India Islands, is situated in 13° 4′ N., and longitude 59° 37′ W. It is nearly 21 English miles long by 14 broad at the widest part, and comprises an area of 106,470 acres (about 166 square miles), about 100,000 acres being cultivated. The population in 1909 was estimated at 196,498, being about 1,200 to the square mile. The principal exports are sugar, molasses, rum and cotton, and the imports rice, salted meat, corn, salted fish, butter, flour, and Indian corn meal. Liberal provision is made for elementary education, and Harrison's College provides for higher education. Unlike most of the neighbouring islands, Barbados has always remained in the possession of Great Britain, by which it was settled in 1625. In 1885 it was constituted a distinct government, with a Governor, aided by an Executive Council and an Executive Committee, a Legislative Council of nine members appointed by the Sovereign, and a House of Assembly of twenty-four members elected yearly on the basis of a moderate franchise.

The CAPITAL and port is Bridgetown (pop., 1908, about 30,000), on the shores of an open roadstead (Carlisle Bay).

TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO.

TRINIDAD is the most southerly of the West India Islands. It is close to the north coast of the continent of S. America, the nearest point of Venezuela being 7 miles distant. It lies between 10° 3′—10° 50′ N. lat. and 61° 39′—62° W. long., and is about 55 miles in length by 40 in breadth, with an area of 1,750 square miles (382,500 acres cultivated), and an estimated population (1909-10) of 351,422 (including Tobago). The island was discovered by Columbus in 1498, was colonized in 1588 by the Spaniards, and capitulated to the British under Abercromby in 1797. The chief town and port of entry, Port of Spain (pop. 60,000), is one of the finest towns in the West Indies, with electric lighting, tram, and telephone services. Other towns of importance are San Fernando (pop. 7,610), about 30 miles south of the capital; Princestown (pop. 4,497), and Arima (pop. 4,076). A remarkable phenomenon is the pitch lake near the village of La Brea, 110 acres in extent, containing an apparently inexhaustible supply; in 1909, 138,280 tons (£154,363) were exported. The soil is rich and productive, the most important products being sugar, cocoa, molasses, rum, and coco-nuts, and various kinds of timber and fruits. The chief exports (1909) were sugar, rum, molasses, bitters, and cocoa (51,575,104 lb.) Coal is found in Manzanilla, and is indicated in other parts of the island; oil is being exploited with success in the south and south-east of the island. There are 89 miles of railway open, and waterworks and sewage operations are in course of construction. The island is crossed by the telegraph wire of the West India and Panama Company, by Government telegraph and private telephone wires. There is also wireless telegraphic communication between Trinidad and Tobago and between Trinidad and Demerara. 38 steamers from Europe arrive every month, and 16 from the U. S. and Canada. The Government is vested in a Governor, an Executive Council, and a Legislative Council, all of whom are nominated by the Crown.

Tobago was annexed in 1889 to the Government of Trinidad, and on Jan. 1, 1899, it was constituted a ward of that island. It is between 11° 9′ N. lat. and 60° 43′ W. long., about 75 mile south-east of Grenada, 18 miles north-east o Trinidad, and 120 miles S.S.W. of Barbados; i 26 miles long, and from 6 to 7½ broad, and ha an area of 114 square miles, with an estimate population (1910) of 18,751. It is one of th most healthy of the West Indies; the tempera ture varies from 81° to 88°.

There are two towns in the island, viz., Scarborough (pop. 1,370) and Plymouth.

South America.

THE Imperial British Dominions in South America extend over an area of about 100,000 square miles, with a population of about 350,000; and consist of the Crown Colonies of British Guiana and British Honduras.

BRITISH GUIANA,

which includes the Counties of Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice, is situated on the north-east coast of South America. The boundaries have recently been definitely determined by the awards of the arbitrators in the Venezuela-British Guiana and Brazil-British Guiana boundary cases. It has a total area of 90,277·4 square miles, and a seaboard of more than 300 miles. The Essequibo River intersects the country in its entire length, the Corentyne River separates it from Dutch Guiana, and the Cuyuni is the great waterway on the west. The colony is bounded on the south by Brazil, on the west by Venezuela, and on the north and N.E. by the Atlantic Ocean. The two towns are Georgetown (estimated population, Dec. 31, 1907, 47,867) and New Amsterdam (estimated population, Dec. 31, 1907, 9,114). The climate is hot, but not generally unhealthy. The cultivated portion of the country, amounting to 140,930 acres (of which 69,827 acres are in sugar-cane), is confined to the sea-coast and to a short distance from the rivers. The coastland is very like Holland, being below the level of the sea, and intersected with canals constructed by its former Dutch owners. At the junction of the boundaries of British Guiana and Venezuela is Mt. Roraima, a flat-topped mountain 8,740 feet above sea level, and on the Potaro River is the Kaieteur Falls, with a clear drop of 741 feet and a total fall of 822 feet. The seasons are divided into dry and wet, the two dry seasons lasting from the middle of February to the end of April, and from the middle of August to the end of November. The temperature ranges between 75° and 90° F. The birth-rate in 1909 was 29·3, and the death-rate 30 per 1,000. The chief product is sugar, which forms 75 per cent. of the export trade. The leading exports for the year 1909–1910 were as follow:—Sugar, value £1,205,215; rum, £128,598; gold, 63,281 oz., valued at £229,516; diamonds, 7,095 carats, valued at £9,386; timber, £24,928; and balata, £95,507. The population, Dec. 31, 1909, was estimated at 305,090, of whom about one-third were Indian immigrants. There are about 10,000 aboriginal Indians, belonging chiefly to Arawak, Acawoi, Carib, and Warau tribes; they are occupied largely in fishing, hunting, and raising crops of cassava.

The Government consists of a Governor and a Court of Policy of 15 other members, 7 official and 8 elected by the direct vote of the people, in which the Governor has an original and a casting vote, and a veto on any measure at any stage. The Court of Policy discharges the functions of a Legislative Council, except as to levying taxes, which is the prerogative of what is called the Combined Court, composed of the Court of Policy and of 6 Financial Representatives elected directly by the people. There is, besides, the Executive Council, consisting of the Governor, 5 official and 3 unofficial members nominated by the Crown, which exercises all the executive and administrative functions of government other than those before mentioned. There are 1,603 miles of post-office telephone wire, with 28½ miles of aerial cable and 530 of telegraph lines, 93 miles for railway signals and 24 miles submarine cables, and 72 post-offices; also post-office telephone exchanges in Georgetown and New Amsterdam, with over 593 subscribers. There is a line of railway along the east sea-coast from Georgetown to Rosignol, Berbice, 60½ miles in length, owned by the Demerara Railway Company, and another line has been opened along the west coast of Demerara, extending from Vreed-en-Hoop to Greenwich Park, 15 miles in length. There is another line connecting the Essequibo and Demerara Rivers, 19 miles in length, and an electric tramway service in the capital.

BRITISH HONDURAS.

This colony comprises about 8,598 square miles of territory in Central America, extending from 18° 29′ 5″ to 15° 53′ 55″ N. latitude, and from 89° 9′ 22″ to 88° 10′ W. longitude. Its extreme length and breadth are 174 m. and 68 m. respectively; it abuts on the Atlantic, and is bounded on the north by Yucatan and Mexico, on the west and south by Guatemala, and on the east by the Caribbean Sea. The climate generally is damp and hot, but not unhealthy. The temperature ranges from 50° to 98°. The average lies between 75° and 80°, but this is considerably tempered by the prevailing sea-breezes. The country consists chiefly of primeval forest, with savannahs and so-called "pine-ridges," which are open sandy plains covered with a wiry grass and dotted with pine-trees, affording fair runs for cattle. The ground is level and swampy along the coast-line, and generally flat for about ten to twenty miles inland; after which hills from 500 ft. to 4,000 ft. high succeed each other to the western boundary. The census (1901) gives the population at 37,497 (males, 19,140; females, 18,339); the 1910 estimate is 44,156.

The staple products are the natural woods of the colony, principally mahogany and logwood; the export of mahogany, of which the cost ready for shipment is $40 to $50 per 1,000 ft., amounted in the year 1909 to 10,673,881 ft., that of logwood ($10 to $15 per ton) being 6,134 tons. Sugar is grown, and rubber and cacao plantations have been started. Fruit, including bananas, plantains, coco-nuts, pineapples, oranges, and mangoes, grow well, while inland there are extensive regions of good pasturage, and there are indications that gold and other minerals exist. Other exports are cedar-wood, india-rubber, chewing-gum, and bananas. The latest returns show that about 50,000 acres are under cultivation. The best description of cocoa trees grow wild in the bush. Crown lands can be purchased at $2 per acre, plus cost of survey, which averages about $1.25 per acre, or leased at an annual rental of 25c. to 30c. per acre. There are 46 public elementary schools in the colony, of which 44 are denominational, and 42 in receipt of Government aid; there are 3 denominational secondary schools in Belize.

British Honduras is governed as a Crown colony. The Executive Council consists of the Colonial Secretary, the Treasurer, the Attorney-General, and three other members appointed by the Sovereign. The Legislative Council includes the following members:—The Colonial Secretary, the Treasurer, the Attorney-General, and not less than five unofficial members appointed by the Sovereign. The Governor is President of both councils.

Australasia.

THE Imperial British Dominions in Australasia include the island continent of Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, the Fiji Islands, a portion of the island of Papua or New Guinea, and various groups of islands in the Pacific. The total area is 3,200,000 sq. miles, and the population numbers 6,000,000.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

From a physical standpoint the continent of Australia is divisible into an eastern and a western area; the former containing a regular coast-line with a good harbourage, roadsteads, rivers, and inland waterways, and a greater development of fauna and flora; the latter a broken coast-line with estuaries rather than rivers, and but little inland water communication. The whole continent is, roughly speaking, a vast, irregular, and undulating plateau, often below the level of the sea, surrounded by a mountainous coast-line, with frequent intervals of low and sandy shore on the north, west and south. A large part of the interior, particularly in the west, consists of sandy and stony desert, covered with spinifex and containing numerous salt-marshes, though reaches of grass-land occur here and there. The geological formation of Australia is remarkable for its simplicity and regularity; the strike of the rocks is, with a single exception, coincident with the direction of the mountain-chains, from N. to S.; and the tertiary formation to be found in the N., S., and W. develops in the S.E. into a gigantic tertiary plain, watered by the Darling and the Murray Rivers. Nearly all round the coast, however, and in eastern and south-eastern Australia, stretching far inland from the coastal range, is a rich grazing country, admirably adapted to the rearing of sheep. The seasons commence about March 21 (Autumn), June 21 (Winter), September 23 (Spring), and December 22 (Summer). The principal rivers are the Murray, with its tributaries, the Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, and Darling, in the S.E. part of the island, which fall into the sea on the south coast; on the east coast, the Hawkesbury, Hunter, Clarence, Richmond, Brisbane, Mary, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin; on the west, the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, De Grey, and Fitzroy; on the north, the Drysdale, Ord, Victoria, and Daly; and the Roper, the Flinders, and Mitchell, which debouch into the Gulf of Carpentaria. The most extensive mountain system on the Australian continent takes its rise near the S.E. point, and includes a number of ranges known by different names in different places, none of them being of any great height. Lakes are numerous, but nearly all are salt; the scarcity of the natural water supply has been, however, mitigated by successful borings. Minerals comprise gold, silver, copper, iron, and coal in large quantities, antimony, mercury, tin, zinc, &c.

HISTORICAL EPITOME.

The Venetian traveller, Marco Polo (1254–1324), and Niccolò del Conti (about 1440), refer to a land called Java Major, which there is little doubt was Australia. On the Mappamundi in the British Museum, of not later date than 1489, there is a coast-line which can be no other than the west coast of Australia. Martin Behaim's globe (constructed in 1492) also shows part of Australia's coast-line. In the Dauphin map (about 1530-1536) Australia is referred to as Jave la Grande. About 1605 De Quiros, a Spaniard, sailed, with De Torres as his lieutenant, from Lima, Peru, for the Great South Land, and touching land, named it La Austrialia del Espiritu Santo. About 1616 Dirck Hartog sailed along a considerable part of the west coast, while in 1623 two ships, Pera and Arnhem, discovered Arnhem's Land, the peninsula on the western side of the Gulf of Carpentaria, so named by Jan Carstensz, after the Governor of the Dutch Indies. Further desultory exploration of the coast-line was carried on by the Dutch, who visited the southern and western shores from 1620 to 1630, and in 1642 Abel Janszoon Tasman sailed to the islands of New Zealand and Tasmania, which he named Van Diemen's Land, after the Governor of Batavia. In 1688 Dampier visited and explored nearly 1,000 miles of the north-west coast of Australia, which he revisited in 1699 in H.M.S. Roebuck, but no further efforts of importance were made for seventy years, when Captain Cook, of H.M.S. Endeavour, with members of an astronomical expedition, landed at Poverty Bay, New Zealand, on October 8, 1769, and afterwards sailed round the islands and explored the south-eastern coast of Australia, which he named New South Wales. In 1795 Governor Hunter arrived to take over the administration of New South Wales. In 1798 Bass and Flinders explored the coast of Victoria and sailed round Tasmania, while Port Phillip was discovered in 1801. Hobart was founded in 1803. By the year 1795 Captain Macarthur had accumulated a flock of 1,000 sheep, and in 1797 Captain Waterhouse brought from the Cape of Good Hope a number of very fine Spanish-bred sheep. During his visit to England, Macarthur purchased for Australia additional Spanish stock. The misadventures of Captain Bligh, of the Bounty, occurred in 1808, but in 1810 New South Wales was already on the road to prosperity, which was further enhanced by the discovery of the fertile plains westward of the Blue Mountains. Tasmania was made a separate government in 1825. Western Australia was founded in 1829, and in 1835 a permanent settlement was made at Melbourne, whence the present State of Victoria sprang in 1837, the same year seeing Adelaide founded by the colonists of South Australia. In 1840 the transportation of convicts to New South Wales was discontinued, and in 1841 New Zealand was constituted a separate government, the towns of New Plymouth and Nelson being founded in that year. In 1842 Brisbane was founded, the population of the Australian mainland being over 145,000 at that date. In 1851 the Port Phillip district of New South Wales, with a population exceeding 75,000, was proclaimed a separate colony, to be thenceforth known as Victoria. A great impetus to immigration was given in that year by the discovery of auriferous districts in New South Wales and Victoria. In 1854 the first electric telegraph line was opened in Australia, communication with Great Britain being established in 1872. In the years 1855–56 responsible government was inaugurated in all the colonies with the exception of Western Australia, where responsible government dates only from 1890. In 1859 the Moreton Bay settlement was erected into the colony of Queensland. In 1871 the total population numbered nearly 1,700,000 (Victoria 730,000, New South Wales 503,000, South Australia 185,000, Queensland 120,000, Tasmania 100,000, and Western Australia 25,000). In 1879–80 international exhibitions were held at Sydney and Melbourne, and in 1881 the population of Australia was taken at 2,250,000, the most notable increases being New South Wales to 750,000, Victoria 862,000, South Australia 280,000, and Queensland 213,000. In 1884–5 motions embodying the spirit of federation were successfully proposed in various legislatures. In 1885 the Government of New South Wales despatched troops to help the "Old Country" in the Soudan. In 1890 further steps were taken towards the adoption of federation, and in that year the Western Australian Constitution was promulgated. In 1897 the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria presented an opportunity for a meeting of the Premiers in London, and the free interchange of views between Australian and Imperial statesmen. On March 16, 1898, the Commonwealth Bill was adopted by the Federal Convention at Melbourne, and after ratification by the several States the Act was ratified by the Imperial Parliament on July 9, 1900, the inauguration of the Commonwealth of Australia taking place at Sydney on Jan. 1, 1901, a message from the Queen to the people of Australia being read by the Earl of Hopetoun, Governor-General. H.M. King George V. (then H.R.H. the Duke of Cornwall and York) was designated by Queen Victoria for the purpose of opening the Commonwealth Parliament, and bidden to undertake the duty by King Edward VII., in spite of the lamented death of the Queen in 1901. The King and Queen sailed from Portsmouth, and declared Parliament open at Melbourne on May 9. The Earl of Hopetoun (now Marquess of Linlithgow) resigned his post in 1902, and was succeeded in 1903 by Lord Tennyson, to be succeeded in 1904 by Lord Northcote, who held office until 9 Sept., 1908, when the Earl of Dudley became Governor-General. The area of the Commonwealth is estimated at 2,974,581 square miles, containing a population of 3,773,801 at the census of 1901, including 6,851 half-caste aborigines. The estimated population on 31 Dec., 1909, was 4,374,138 (N.S.W., 1,621,677; Victoria, 1,303,357; Queensland, 572,654; South Australia, 416,047; Western Australia, 273,543; and Tasmania, 186,860). By religions there were in 1901, 1,497,576 members of the Church of England, 426,105 Presbyterians, 504,101 Methodists, 319,731 other Protestants, 850,620 Roman Catholics, and 15,239 Jews. The capitals of the various States are Sydney (pop. 605,900 at the end of 1909), Melbourne (pop. 562,300), Adelaide (pop. 184,393), Brisbane (pop. 143,077), Perth (pop. 54,354), and Hobart (pop. 38,916).

The Commonwealth of Australia is a confederation of the six "Original States" of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania, and Western Australia, the executive power being vested in the Sovereign (through the Governor-General), assisted by an Executive Council of seven members.

Legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the Sovereign (represented by the Governor-General), a Senate of 36 (six from each of the Original States) and a House of Representatives elected on a population basis in such a manner that no Original State has less than five representatives. Such powers as are not vested in the Federal Parliament are regarded as remaining in the Legislatures of the several States, in which particular the Commonwealth differs from the Dominion of Canada, where the residuum of Legislative capacity is in the Dominion Parliament. The difference may be briefly stated in the following way:—In the Dominion the Central Parliament may legislate on all present matters, and such as may occur hereafter, except where its power is expressly delegated to the Provincial Legislatures. In the Commonwealth the Federal Parliament may only legislate on certain matters, or to the degree, surrendered to it by the federating States.

I. NEW SOUTH WALES.

The State of New South Wales is situated between the 29th and 37th parallels of S. lat. and 141st and 154th meridians of E. long., and comprises an area of 310,367 square miles—i.e., more than six times the area of England, and nearly three times the size of Great Britain and Ireland—with a population (census March 31, 1901) of 712,456 males and 646,677 females, or a total of 1,359,133, and 894,602 males, 770,042 females, or a total of 1,664,644 on 30th June, 1910. The population includes 4,287 aborigines of full blood, of whom 2,451 are males, and 1,836 females. The births for the year 1909 were 43,769, deaths 15,840, and marriages 13,048.

The great plains are admirably adapted for sheep-farming, and several breeds of sheep, including the celebrated merino, were introduced in 1813. In 1778 there were but 6 head of cattle, 9 horses, 29 sheep, and 12 pigs. On the 31st December, 1909, there were 604,776 horses, 794,543 dairy cows, 2,223,161 all other cattle, 46,187,678 sheep, and 237,849 pigs. In 1909, 370,808,000 lb. (stated as in the grease) of wool, valued at £13,128,000, were produced, in addition to 638,400 cwt. of tallow, valued at £795,700; also 62,865,608 lb. butter, 4,775,268 lb. cheese, and 9,925,720 lb. bacon and hams.

Minerals.—The goldfields were discovered in 1851. Coal, coke, copper, silver, lead, zinc, bismuth, tin, iron, antimony, asbestos, platinum, alunite, wolfram, scheelite, molybdenite, cobalt, and kerosene shale are also found; and diamonds, rubies, opals, and other precious stones. The total value of minerals raised during 1909 was £7,403,210, coal accounting for £2,618,596, silver, silver-lead and ore £1,653,615, and gold £869,546.

Agriculture is one of the principal industries of the State; 3,174,691 acres are under cultivation, producing during the year ended 31 March, 1910, 28,532,029 bushels of wheat, 6,986,000 bushels of maize, 1,966,186 bushels of oats, besides other kinds of grain, with 89,000 tons of potatoes, and 6,494 cwt. of tobacco. Sugar-cane to the extent of 131,081 tons was produced; and (1909) 736,262 gallons of wine, and 654,001 cases of oranges, lemons, &c. (all citrus fruit); almost every kind of fruit and vegetable may be grown. The total extent of land alienated and in process of alienation on June 30, 1909, was 52,001,632 acres, while the area of land leased for pastoral occupation and homestead, mining, and other purposes at the same date was 128,390,868 acres. At Sydney the mean temperature in the shade for 50 years averaged 63°; the mean temperature in the shade for the north coast is 65·9°, Hunter and Manning district 63·9°, south coast 59·4°, northern tableland 57·8°, central tableland 57·6°, southern tableland 52·7°, north-western slope 64·8°, central western slope 61·6°, south-western slope 58·2°, north-western plain 67·5°, central western plain 65·3°, Riverina district 61·4°, and western division 65·5.

The western portion of the country is not well watered, but immense reservoirs are being constructed for irrigation purposes, and many artesian bores have been laid down. The Darling and the Murrumbidgee, both tributaries of the Murray, which divides the State from Victoria, are only navigable for part of the year. The eastern or coastal district is watered by the Tweed, Richmond, Clarence, Macleay, Hastings, Manning, Karuah, Hunter, Hawkesbury, Shoalhaven, Clyde, Moruya, Tuross, Bega, Towamba, and Snowy.

Government.—"Responsible government" is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown, and a Legislative Council consisting of not less than 21 members; the Council in August, 1910, consisted of 54 members. The Legislative Assembly consists of 90 members, representing 90 electoral districts. Each member of the Legislative Assembly receives £300 per annum, and members of both Houses travel free over the Government railways and tramways in the State, and are provided with official stamped envelopes for the free transmission of correspondence through the post. With few exceptions all natural-born or naturalised persons, 21 years of age, who have resided 12 months in the State and three months in the electoral district, are entitled to the franchise, which was conferred upon women in 1902, and was first exercised by them in 1904.

Religion.—All religions are free. There is no establishment, and all payments are voluntary. About two-thirds of the people are Protestants, the members of the Church of England in New South Wales, according to the census of 1901, numbering 623,131; Roman Catholics numbering 347,286, Presbyterians 132,617, and Methodists 137,638. In 1904 the places of worship in the State numbered about 5,850.

Education.—Education is compulsory and free, school fees in State, primary, and superior schools being abolished in October, 1906. The total enrolment in 1909 in 3,215 State schools was 238,514, and the average daily attendance 160,080. The State expenditure on Education, Science, and Art was £1,314,402. The University of Sydney, with which 4 colleges are affiliated, including the Women's College, was incorporated in 1851. In addition to the State schools there are 789 private colleges and schools, with 58,361 scholars, and 18 other schools with 1,732 scholars, exclusive of many business colleges and shorthand schools.

Manufactories and Works.—In 1909 there were 4,619 manufactories and works; 92,181 hands were employed, 69,143 being males and 23,038 females.

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions.—Old Age Pensions amounting to £26 a year are granted under certain conditions to persons over 65 years of age, who have been resident in the State 20 years, and are in receipt of an income of not more than £52 per annum. Invalidity Pensions are given to persons permanently incapacitated of 16 years of age and over.

Hospitals.—There are (31 Dec., 1908) 137 hospitals in the State, 21 of them being in the Metropolitan district, and 116 in the country.

Communications.—There were open on 30 June, 1910, 3,643 miles of Government railway, upon the construction of which £48,925,348 have been spent. In 1909–10 the net earnings amounted to £2,209,306. There are also 81½ miles of private railway lines, and 190 miles connected with coal and other mines. The Government tramways measure 165¾ miles (upon which £4,668,797 were spent, the working expenses, £983,587, being 82·96 percentage to earnings, leaving a net profit in 1909–10 of £201,981), and there are 6¾ miles of private tramways. Of Government telegraphs and telephones there are 17,087 miles open, with 97,612 miles of wire and 1,329 telegraph stations; telegraph messages transmitted outside New South Wales numbering 1,218,602, inland 3,067,397, total 4,285,998, inclusive of 367,660 messages in transit; those received from outside New South Wales numbering 891,964, inland 3,067,397, total 3,959,361. The Post Offices and receiving offices numbered 2,397, the number of letters and postcards conveyed being 151,570,240; newspapers, 56,002,764; packets and book parcels, 37,339,895; and parcels, 1,509,468.

Shipping.—In 1909 the number of vessels entered and cleared was 5,628, with a total tonnage of 11,559,460.

Banking, &c.—There were (30 June, 1910) 15 banks of issue, with total assets £53,302,305, within N.S.W., and liabilities £52,428,625. The savings bank deposits on 31 Dec., 1909, amounted to £20,150,574.

Crime.—The number of prisoners in gaol on 31 December, 1909, was 1,333, a decrease of 84 compared with the same day of 1908.

Defences.—On 31 December, 1909, the strength of the military and naval forces in the State was as follows:—Military: Permanent 542, militia 5,519, volunteers 2,006, rifle clubs 13,920, cadets 10,283, unattached list of officers, reserve of officers and chaplains 256, total, 32,536. Naval Forces: 498.

SYDNEY, the chief city and capital, stands on the shore of Port Jackson, with a water frontage of over 200 miles, the finest harbour in the world, and is surrounded by scenery of surpassing beauty. The city extends four miles north and south by three miles east and west; and contains (1909) 118½ miles of streets, with 23,035 dwellings and a population of 126,700 on 31 December, 1909; or, including suburbs, 1,800 miles of streets, 123,860 houses, with a population of 605,900. II. VICTORIA.

This territory originally formed part of New South Wales (known as the Port Phillip district), from which it was severed, and erected into a separate colony in the year 1851. It comprises the south-east corner of Australia, at that part where its territory projects farthest into the southern latitudes: it lies between the 34th and 39th parallels of south latitude, and the 141st and 150th meridians of east longitude. Its extreme length from east to west is about 420 miles, its greatest breadth is about 250 miles, and its extent of coast-line nearly 600 miles. The entire area comprises 87,884 square miles, or 56,245,760 acres, of which 4,834,285 were under cultivation in 1909–10.

Population.—His population at the census on 31st March, 1901, was 1,201,341 (603,883 males and 597,458 females), including about 7,349 Chinese and 652 aborigines. At the census of 1901 the native Victorians numbered 876,003; natives of other Australian States, 65,094; English, 113,432; Irish, 61,512; Scottish, 35,751; Welsh, 3,676; Chinese, 6,230; and other nationalities about 39,643. The Victorian aborigines at the time of the first colonisation of the district were about 15,000 in number; in 1851 the official return gave 2,693, and in 1901 652 (367 males and 285 females). The estimated population on Dec. 31, 1909, was 1,297,557; males, 654,099; females, 643,458. The birth-rate of Victoria for 1909 was 24·57 per 1,000; the death-rate was 11·24 per 1,000; and the marriage-rate was 7·35 per 1,000.

Religion.—Members of the Church of England numbered 424,011, "Protestants" 8,693, Presbyterians 191,503, Methodists 180,272, Baptists 32,648, and Roman Catholics 263,710.

Minerals.—Victoria is one of the leading gold-producing States in Australia. From the discovery of gold in 1851 to the end of the year 1909, the quantity raised—71,379,889 oz.—amounted in value to £285,100,389, the amount produced in 1909 being 702,221 oz. The value of other minerals raised to the end of 1909, consisting principally of tin, copper, coal, and antimony, is estimated at about £6,889,698 (including building stone, &c., £3,723,255).

Communications.—There were 3,463 miles of railway completed at the end of June, 1909, all of which belonged to the Government, the capital cost amounting to £42,392,007. The gross receipts were £4,189,065, and the working expenses £2,523,929, leaving a net income of £1,665,136, or 3·95 per cent.

There were 1,258 stations for electric telegraphs, extending over 7,161 miles (poles), which produced a revenue of £135,523 in 1909, the total mileage of wire being 16,386, and the telegrams transmitted numbering 2,556,600. There were also 56,967 miles of telephone wire.

Trade and Industry.—Wool, gold (including specie), wheat, flour, biscuit, and butter are the staple productions of the State; and the manufactures (4,755 factories, &c., employing 97,355 hands in 1909) are mainly for home consumption. In 1909 the chief exports were: Wool £7,062,370; gold (including specie), £2,846,981 butter, £1,365,149; wheat, flour, and biscuit £3,673,286; oats, £153,848; leather, £448,890 skins and hides, £1,163,062; and live stock £1,167,573. A trade is also springing up in preserved and frozen meats, the value of the export (excluding bacon and hams) being £513,213 in 1909. The principal imports of the State in 1909 were wool, £3,405,759; live stock, £1,758,995 sugar and molasses, £813,133; gold (including specie), £1,546,970; cottons, £1,386,637; woollens £904,025; and timber, £782,320.

Agriculture.—Agriculture has of late years much improved, wheat and oats chiefly being cultivated; the dairy industry has also made marked progress. Of the 4,834,285 acres under cultivation in 1909–10, 2,097,162 were wheat crops and 384,226 oats, and 864,359 acres were cut for hay. In 1909–10, 991,941 gallons of wine were produced. There were in 1909 625,063 milch cows, producing 55,166,555 lb. of butter and 5,025,834 lb. of cheese.

Shipping.—The shipping statistics of the State furnish abundant evidence of the magnitude and value of its trade. In 1909 4,595 vessels, of 9,056,767 tons, entered and cleared.

III. SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

South Australia was established as a British Province by 4 & 5 Will. IV., cap. 95, but not proclaimed until 28 Dec., 1836, so that its history falls within Queen Victoria's reign. It is situated between 11° and 37° S. lat. and 129° and 141° E. long., and covers 12° of longitude and 27° of latitude. The total length is 1,850 miles, the extreme breadth 650 miles, with about 2,000 miles of sea-board, the total area being 903,690 sq. miles.

Population.—The population at the 1901 census was 362,604 (males, 184,422; females, 178,182); on 31 December, 1909, 412,808 (males, 219,587; females, 193,221); birth rate (1909) 24·70, death rate 9·28, and marriage rate 8·04 per 1,000.

Meteorology.—The mean temperature of the original colony is 74°, with a mean rainfall of 16 inches on the plains and 42 inches in the hills, the 63 years' average at Adelaide being 20 inches. The winter temperature averages 53°, with 100 for summer, but the climate is so dry that the inconvenience is comparatively slight.

Government.—The government is administered by a Governor, the Legislative Council with 18 members, and the House of Assembly with 42 members. There are 6 Cabinet Ministers, members of the Legislature and ex officio members of the Executive Council, of which the Governor is president. Election is by ballot, with universal adult suffrage for the House of Assembly for all British subjects, male and female; there is a small property qualification for electors to the Legislative Council, who numbered 64,302 (16,157 women) in 1909, those for the Assembly numbering 183,418 (88,672 women).

Local Government.—There are 32 Municipalities and 144 District Councils, the aggregate assessment of property within their boundaries being £3,088,066, and the revenue (1908) £303,227, and expenditure (1908), chiefly on roads, £295,869.

Law and Justice.—The Supreme Court is presided over by the Chief Justice and two Puisne Judges; there are Courts of Vice-Admiralty and Insolvency, as well as Local Civil Courts, with stipendiary magistrates and the usual Police Courts. The Supreme Court convictions average about 112 annually, which is at the rate of 1 in every 3,360 of the population. The Real Property Act (1858) simplifies the transfer of land, and since the passing of the Act land to the value of £17,851,000 has been dealt with.

Religion.—In 1908 accommodation was provided for 33,951 members of the Church of England, 84,750 Methodists, 14,500 Congregationalists, 15,480 Baptists, 24,363 German Lutherans in 1,206 places of worship. No information is furnished about the accommodation for Roman Catholics. At the census of 1901 they numbered 52,193.

Education.—There is an endowed university at Adelaide, founded in 1881, with 360 undergraduates; all classes are open to women. A State school of mines and industries has also been established. Primary education is provided by the State, and controlled by a responsible minister; it is secular, compulsory, and free; there are 690 State schools, with 1,438 teachers and 54,157 scholars; the expenditure in 1908 was £161,146. Private schools number 200 (1908), with 718 teachers and 9,321 scholars. The Public Library, Museum, Art Gallery and local institutes are supported or assisted by the State, the sum expended for 1909–10 was £13,761.

Banking.—There are 7 banking institutions in Adelaide, with 96 branches, having a total liability of £10,439,957 (including £311,259 Perpetual Inscribed Stock) and assets £8,929,198 in 1909; their note issue amounted to £497,940. The Government Savings Bank on 30th June, 1909, had 229 agencies, with 157,854 depositors (£6,328,430, bearing interest at 3½ per cent.).

Commerce in 1909.—Total value, £23,982,370.

	Imports from.	Exports to.

Shipping.—The total tonnage inwards and outwards in 1909 was 6,234,350 tons; 5,302,039 tons were from British ports, and 932,311 tons from foreign.

Railways.—The length of Government lines open in 1909 was 1,888 miles (and 145 in the N.T.). The total cost to 31 Dec., 1909, was £14,339,952, or £7,595 per mile; the working expenses in 1909 were £989,562, and the receipts £1,675,071, the net revenue being 4·81 per cent. on the cost.

Agriculture.—Of the total area about two-thirds are farmed or grazed, and 3,752,094 acres cultivated—under wheat 1,895,798 acres, hay 424,448, oats 85,346, barley 41,895, and potatoes 8,131 acres, with 1,198,450 acres lying fallow. The quantity of wheat produced in 1909–10 was 25,133,851 bushels. English fruit, oranges, lemons, almonds, and olives are successfully grown, and fruit drying is profitable. There were 20,353 acres of vines, the export of wine being 1,045,678 gallons in 1909, of which 507,777 gals. (value £51,193) were sent to the United Kingdom in 1909. Brandy and other spirits are also produced. There were 6,432,038 sheep in 1909, and 46,523,849 lb. of wool (valued at £1,815,653) were exported; cattle number 344,034, and horses 230,405.

Minerals.—Copper and gold, silver, lead, manganese, bismuth, iron, and coal are found.

IV.—QUEENSLAND.

This State, situated in lat. 10° 40′—29° S., and long. 138°—153° 30′ E., comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent.

Queensland proper possesses an area of 670,500 square miles (i.e., equal to more than 5½ times the area of the United Kingdom), of which the Government have parted with the fee simple of 15,296,688 acres ; under a system of deferred payment, 6,806,467 more are in process of alienation out of the total of 429,120,000 acres, but an additional area of 282,456,037 acres has been leased out for sheep and cattle runs and grazing-farms, 273,102 acres as scrub selections, 116,897 acres under gold-mining and mineral lease, and 32,722 for special purposes, leaving 124,138,087 practically unoccupied. The estimated population, Dec. 31, 1909, numbered 578,548, of whom 315,420 were males and 263,128 females. Wheat, oats, and barley flourish on the Darling downs ; while a still larger area is devoted to maize, which yields an average crop of about 22 bushels per acre. Both English and sweet potatoes are cultivated ; as also are coffee, cotton, oranges, peaches, pineapples, grapes, bananas, cocoa-nuts, mangoes, plums, and various English fruits. In the year 1909, 134,584 tons of sugar were produced. The chief articles of export the produce of the State in 1909 were : Wool, £4,809,496 ; gold, £1,914,621 ; silver, £94,345 ; tin, £293,996 ; copper, £794,643 ; pearl and tortoise-shell, £63,875 ; meat, including extract, £1,303,862 ; green fruit, £130,709 ; sugar, £1,125,887 ; hides and skins, £747,590 ; tallow, £302,511 ; live stock, £1,699,381 ; butter, £541,524 ; timber, £104,527. At Brisbane the average temperature for 1909 was 69·2° ; the maximum in the shade was 99°, and the minimum 40·6°. Wool, gold, meat, butter, and sugar are at present the staple productions ; rich gold, copper, tin, lead, silver, antimony, limestone, ironstone, wolfram, and coal deposits are found in several districts ; timber also, of fine quality for cabinet manufacture, the Moreton Bay pine and the Dammara robusta, together with the cedar of Queensland, forming valuable products for export. At the end of 1909 the horses numbered 555,613, cattle 4,711,782, sheep 19,593,791, and pigs 124,803.

At the end of 1909 there were 3,532 miles of Government railway open. In 1909 there were 1,164 State schools in operation, with 2,534 teachers and an average daily attendance of 69,755 children ; and 168 private and grammar schools, with an average attendance of 13,658.

The banking deposits on the 31st Dec., 1909, were £16,940,472, apart from the £5,327,025 in the hands of the Government Savings Bank.

The number of sea-going vessels entered inwards during 1909 was 829 (tonnage 1,640,344), and the number outwards 841 (tonnage 1,628,413).

V.—TASMANIA

is an island in the South Pacific Ocean, off the southern extremity of Australia, from which it is separated by Bass Straits, in which are situated the Furneaux Group and King Island, included within the colony. It lies between 40° 33′—43° 39′ S. lat. and 144° 39′—148° 23′ E. long., and contains an area of 26,215 square miles, or 16,778,000 acres of land, of which, on 1st March, 1909, 269,446 acres were under crop, and 491,423 under artificially-sown grass; wheat, 29,103; while 1,338,953 acres (exclusive of mineral land) were leased from the Crown principally for pastoral purposes, the terms of purchase being £1 an acre for cash, or £1 6s. 8d. in 14 yearly instalments. The population (31 Dec., 1908) was 185,824, of whom 90,310 belonged to the Church of England, 32,688 were Roman Catholics, 26,889 Methodists, and 12,413 Presbyterians. The aboriginals have become quite extinct, the last —a female, "Truganini"—having died in 1876. The island was first discovered by Tasman, in December, 1642, and named by him "Van Diemen's Land," in honour of his patron, the then governor of the Dutch possessions in India. It was subsequently partially explored by Captain Cook, and in 1803 Lieut. Bowen, despatched from Sydney with a few soldiers and convicts to form a penal settlement, fixed upon the spot where Hobart now stands. In 1825 it was severed from New South Wales and formed into a distinct colony. In 1853 the name was officially changed from Van Diemen's Land to Tasmania. The climate is fine and salubrious, and well suited to European constitutions, and the hot winds of Australia do not reach the island. At Hobart in 1907 the mean annual temperature was 54·2°, the mean summer temperature being 62·0°, and that of winter 46·3°; the average rainfall for Hobart, 1907, was 25·92 inches. The surface of the country is generally undulating forest-land with mountains from 1,500 to 5,000 feet in height, and wide expanses of level, open plains. The chief products of the State are wool, gold, silver, copper, tin, lead, coal, timber, and fruit and sheep. The amount of stock on 1 March, 1909, was sheep (and lambs), 1,728,053; cattle, 295,827; horses, 39,281; and pigs, 47,945. The forests of Tasmania abound in the most beautiful cabinet woods and the largest size timbers, adapted for every variety of purpose. The fauna include the Tasmanian devil and native tiger, and the curious duck-billed platypus; while the kangaroo, wombat, wallaby, and opossum supply valuable skins. There are silver, tin, lead, and copper fields on the west coast; over 45,000 acres have been taken on mineral leases, and mines of both lode and stream tin are being worked in the north. The value of tin exported in 1908 was £400,196; of silver £370,477, and of copper £545,327; iron-ore exists, and the value of gold exported in 1908 was £292,691. Coal of a good quality, and in easily accessible positions, is very generally distributed over the island. There are in all 746 miles of railway open, including the main line running from Hobart to Launceston, through the island; and 328 telegraph stations, with 4,082 miles of wire, including a submarine cable (432 miles) communicating with the Universal Telegraph System; 1,850 miles of telephone wire; 414 post-stations, and 3,399 miles of post roads. On Dec. 31, 1907, the total registered shipping for the year was 65 steamers and 233 sailing vessels, with a total tonnage of 18,422 tons. The inward entries during 1908 were 1,034 (tonnage, 1,292,169), and the outward entries 1,015 (tonnage, 1,290,870).

A Department of Agriculture was formed in 1902. Primary education is administered by a Department, and there are 356 State schools.

By the Act of 1855 the Legislative Council and House of Assembly are constituted "The Parliament." The former consists of 18 members, elected for six years; and the latter of 35 members, elected for three years. The Governor, who is appointed by the Crown, is aided by a Cabinet of responsible Ministers. The franchise has been extended to women.

VI.—WESTERN AUSTRALIA

includes all that portion of the continent west of 129° E. long., the most westerly point being in 112° 52′ E. long., and from 13° 30′ to 35° 8′ S. lat. Its extreme length is, from north to south, 1,480 miles, and 1,000 from east to west, and its total area 975,920 square miles. The jarrah (Eucalyptus marginata), sometimes erroneously called mahogany, covers immense tracts of land in the S.W. portion of the State; its timber is extraordinarily durable, and as it resists the white ant and the Teredo navalis it is admirably adapted for railway sleepers, and for piles for bridges and harbour works. The sandalwood (Santalum cygnorum) has long been an article of export; the tuart (Eucalyptus gomphocephala) and karri (Eucalyptus diversicolor), eucalypti of enormous size, are valuable timber trees. The bark of the mallet tree is exported for tanning purposes. The occupied portion of the State extends along the western coast for about 1,200 miles, while the mining population has penetrated over 500 miles into the interior.

The population on June 30 was, in 1908, 269,125; in 1909, 275,193; and in 1910, 282,856. The average temperature of Perth (lat. 32° S.) for the past 13 years was 64°, while the mean for the barometer for 13 years was 30·02 inches. There are wet and dry seasons, the former lasting from May to October. The total rainfall at Perth during 1908 was 30·52, and during 1909, 39·11, the average for the past 13 years being 33·73. The chief products are gold, wool, timber, pearls and pearl-shells, silver, lead, copper, tin, coal, iron, sandalwood, mallet bark for tanning, cereals, fruit, wine, horses, cattle, and hides and skins. Sandal-wood and other trees grow abundantly in the south-western districts, and there were, in 1909, 2,917 acres of vineyards in the State. Large areas of good wheat-growing soil exist in the southern division, and whilst there were, in 1909, 285,011 acres under cultivation for this cereal, the corresponding acreage for 1910 had increased to 448,918. Magnetic iron, lead, copper, and tin ores exist in large quantities.

Gold Statistics.—The groups of the Coolgardie goldfields (covering a vast portion of the interior and extending to the 125th meridian), as well as other fields, are being constantly worked, the production of gold being 1,595,269 oz. in 1909, and 853,372 oz. in the first seven months of 1910. To the Coolgardie group belong the following goldfields: North Coolgardie, Broad Arrow, North-East Coolgardie, East Coolgardie, and Coolgardie. The total amount produced in the State from 1886 to 31 July, 1910, is 22,460,339 fine oz.; of this amount 12,066,980 oz. were received at the Royal Mint, Perth.

There are 2,987 miles of railway open. A proposed trans-continental line is now under survey. There is direct telegraphic communication with England and with South Africa. The principal ports are Fremantle, Albany, Bunbury, Geraldton, and Broome. The imports chiefly consist of provisions, sugar, tea, tobacco, spirits, beer, soap, machinery, ironmongery, clothing of various kinds, &c. The principal exports are of wool, gold, jarrah timber, silver, tin, copper ore, sandalwood, mallet bark for tanning, pearls and pearl-shells, kangaroo skins, wheat, &c. The estimated value of the exports for 1909 was:—Wool, £1,013,180; timber, £867,419; sandalwood, £37,456; pearls, £100,000 (estimated); shell, £174,960; gold, £2,217,358; gold specie, £3,502,907; hides and skins, £197,655. The stock returns of the State are as follows:—Horses, 125,315; cattle, 793,217; sheep, 4,731,737; and pigs, 47,062. In 1909 the vessels entered inwards numbered 653 (tonnage, 2,071,610), and those outwards 650 (tonnage, 2,056,002).

Exports to U.K.	3,243,647	3,219,529

The State is ruled by a Governor appointed by the Crown, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly.

Religious Statistics.—At the census of 1901, 75,654 belonged to the Church of England, and 40,584 were Roman Catholics.

Education.—Education is compulsory and free, and numerous elementary schools are under the control of the Minister of Education. There is a training college, a technical school, a school of mines at Kalgoorlie, and schools in Perth for the higher education of boys. The foundation of a University is under consideration. The total amount expended on education during the year ended 30 June, 1910, was £184,697.

The principal towns in the State are :—Perth (pop., including suburbs, about 55,000), on the right bank of the Swan River estuary, 12 miles from Fremantle ; Fremantle (including suburbs, about 20,000), and the following municipalities :—Albany (3,029), Coolgardie (2,551), Kalgoorlie (6,954), Boulder (11,156), Broome (3,300), Bunbury (3,560), Claremont (3,802), Geraldton (3,300), Midland Junction (4,100), and Northam (2,942).

Dominion of New Zealand.

The Dominion of New Zealand consists of three main islands in the South Pacific Ocean, known as the North, South and Stewart Islands, situate about 1,200 miles E. of New South Wales, between 33°—53° S. lat. and 162° E. long.—173° W. long., with several groups of smaller islands lying at some distance from the principal group. Portions of New Zealand were explored by Tasman, under the direction of the Dutch East India Company, in 1642, and visited at various times during the 18th century, and in 1777 by Captain Cook. The first settlement of Europeans was made in 1814, but no colonisation took place until 1839. In 1841 New Zealand was, by letters patent, erected into a separate colony distinct from New South Wales. The entire area (inclusive of the Chatham, Auckland, Kermadec, Cook, and other islands) is stated at 104,751 square miles, or 67,040,640 acres (being a little smaller than Great Britain and Ireland), of which two-thirds are fitted for agriculture and grazing. The North Island comprises about 44,468 sq. miles ; South Island, 58,525 ; Stewart Island, 665, with only 288 inhabitants. An adjacent group, named the Chatham Islands, contain 375 sq. miles ; and the Cook and other Pacific islands recently included within the boundaries of the dominion, 280 sq. miles. Kermadec and other Islands 438 sq. miles.

The European population at the census of April 29, 1906, was 888,578 (471,008 males and 417,570 females). The native population (Maoris) in 1906, was 47,731 (25,538 males and 22,193 females), chiefly in the North Island, and 12,340, excluding 776 absent from the islands (6,224 males and 6,116 females) in the Cook and other Pacific islands, making the total population, including Maoris, &c., 948,649 persons. Since the census the estimated population on 30th June, 1910, is ascertained to have been 1,048,347 persons. In 1840 a treaty was concluded at Waitangi with the native chiefs, whereby the sovereignty of the islands was ceded to Great Britain, while the chiefs were guaranteed the possession of their lands, forests, &c., the right of pre-emption being reserved to the Crown if they wished to alienate any portion. This right was abolished by legislation in 1862, when the Crown relinquished its right of pre-emption, whilst at the same time the purchase of native lands for the Crown did not abate, but continued side by side with the private purchases until 1894, when the right of private purchase was withdrawn. The Maori Lands Administration Act of 1900 with its amendments restrained natives from pauperising themselves by parting with the freehold of the balance of their lands. The Native Land Act, 1909, consolidates all previous enactments dealing generally with Maori lands, and permits alienation subject to certain conditions and restrictions.

New Zealand in many parts is very mountainous ; a mountain chain traverses the west side of the South Island, culminating in Mount Cook, 12,349 feet in height. The extremes of daily temperature vary throughout the year only by an average of 20° ; London is 7° colder than the North Island and 4° colder than the South Island. The mean annual temperature of the whole dominion for the different seasons is :—Spring, 55° ; Summer, 63° ; Autumn, 57° ; and Winter, 48° ; and the climate is admirably adapted for raising every fruit, flower, and edible that flourishes in Great Britain. Amongst the productions are the Kauri pine (found only at the northern extremity of the islands), much valued for shipbuilding, and for its resin (Kauri gum); and the native flax, which is used for the manufacture of ropes and twine. The principal exports in 1909 were wool (£6,305,888), frozen meat (£3,601,093), gold (£2,006,900), butter and cheese (£2,744,770), agricultural products, tallow, Kauri gum and timber. Coal-mining is one of the largest industries, the output in 1909 being 1,911,247 tons, the approximate total output to the end of 1909 being 29,019,764 tons. Gold-mining, both alluvial and quartz, is an important industry in many districts, and rich iron ore, in the form of ironsand, has been found in Taranaki, and in the form of brown hæmatite at Parapara, near Nelson; copper is also found.

The total extent of land under all kinds of crop (excluding lands in artificial grasses), and of land broken up but not under crop, is (1910) 1,914,487 acres, while there are 13,623,528 acres of land in sown grass, of which 8,868,205 acres had not been previously ploughed. In 1909 the number of sheep was 23,480,707; horned cattle, 1,773,326; and horses, 363,259. In March, 1910, there were 2,717 miles of Government railway lines in working order, and more under construction; and 29 miles of private lines, together with an excellent coaching system. During 1909 the vessels entered inwards numbered 605 (tonnage, 1,263,935), and those entered outwards 596 (tonnage, 1,253,878), exclusive of coasting vessels.

The general government consists of a Governor aided by a Ministry, a Legislative Council appointed by the Governor (prior to 1891 the appointments were for life; since that date for seven years only), at present consisting of 40 members, and a House of Representatives, consisting of 80 members elected for three years. Four of the members are Maoris elected by the natives. Women are entitled to register as electors and to vote at the elections for Members of the House of Representatives, but are not qualified for election nor for appointment to the Legislative Council.

The State system of education is free, secular, and compulsory. There were (December, 1909) 2,057 public primary schools, with 4,310 teachers and 152,416 scholars; there are also 306 private schools, with 17,930 scholars, and, in addition, 94 village schools for the Maoris. The higher education of boys and girls in the cities and large towns is carried on in 31 endowed colleges and grammar schools. The University of New Zealand has power to confer degrees. The annual postal circulation was (1909) 201,114,979 letters and postcards, 42,561,641 newspapers, and 52,209,562 books and packets, and the work is effected by 2,194 post-offices. There are 10,901 miles of telegraph line with 34,788 miles of wire.

Defences.—New Zealand has torpedo-boats and submarine-mining steamers; the Calliope Dock, capable of docking two warships, was subsidised by the Imperial Government in 1898.

CAPITAL, Wellington, in the North Island.

The estimated population of the chief cities and towns on 1 January, 1910, was as follows:—Wellington (and suburbs), 76,390; Auckland (and suburbs), 97,929; Dunedin (and suburbs), 62,584; Christchurch (and suburbs), 78,605; Invercargill (and suburbs), 14,804; Napier, 10,788; Palmerston North, 12,000; Nelson, 8,800; Oamaru, 5,310; Petone, 7,313; Timaru, 8,300; Wanganui, 10,000; Masterton, 5,500; Greymouth, 5,300; and New Plymouth, 5,414.

Cook Islands Administration.—The Cook and other islands, annexed to the British Empire in October, 1900, and included in the boundaries of New Zealand since June, 1901, consist of the islands of Rarotonga, Aitutaki, Mangaia, Atiu, Mauke, Mitiaro, Penrhyn, Manihiki, Rakahanga, and Niue or Savage Island, together with a few smaller islands, and are situated in the South Pacific, between 8° to 23° S. lat. and 156° to 170° W. long. The population consists of about 13,000 natives, and 150 Europeans and other nationalities. The chief products are bananas, oranges, and other tropical fruits, copra, coffee, pearl-shell, and hats (Niue). The exports average about £85,000, and the imports about £77,000. Rarotonga is the chief island, with a native population of 2,300, and a European population of 107. The government is administered locally under the direction of New Zealand. The Federal Council of the Cook Islands, under the direction of the Resident Commissioner at Rarotonga, legislates for all the islands except Niue, which has a Resident Commissioner and an Island Council of its own. Makea Ariki still remains as the head native chief of the Cook Islands, and receives an allowance from the Government.

Fiji.

This is a group of 200 to 250 islands (of which some are, however, mere uninhabited islets and rocks) in the South Pacific Ocean, about 1,100 miles north of New Zealand, which extend 300 miles from east to west, and 300 north to south, between 15° 45′—21° 10′ S. lat. and 176° E.—178° W. long. The gross area of the group is about 7,435 square miles. The islands are of volcanic origin, with lofty mountains, and well wooded. The principal are Viti Levu (Great Fiji) and Vanua Levu (Great Land). The climate is equable and remarkably healthy for Europeans; the average temperature in the shade in the cool season is 72°, rising to 84° in the hot season, extremes lying between 60° and 94°. Vegetation is remarkably luxuriant, the chief productions being the bread-fruit tree, banana, plantain, pea-nuts, yams, and dalo (taro), cocoanut, sugar-cane, tea, cotton, maize, tobacco, and arrowroot. Sugar, pearl-shells, maize, bêche-de-mer, copra, and cocoanut oil were for some time the chief exports, but the principal exports in 1909 were sugar, copra, green fruit, and cocoanuts. The Governor is appointed by the Crown, and is assisted by an Executive Council, consisting of seven official members. Laws are passed by a Legislative Council, of which the Governor is president, and which contains ten official and eight unofficial members, of whom six are elected and two (natives) nominated by the Governor. Native administration is carried on through the chiefs under the Governor's supervision. The population (31 March, 1901) was 120,124 (94,397 native Fijians, 17,105 Indian immigrants, 2,459 Europeans, and some Polynesians and others).

Pacific Islands.

(1) The British Solomon Islands, protected since 1893, and consisting of Guadalcanar, Malaita, San Cristoval, New Georgia, and other islands situated in about 8° S. and 160° E., with a total area of about 8,500 square miles. The Santa Cruz Group and several other islands were incorporated in the Protectorate in 1898 and 1899; and in 1900 Choiseul Ysabel, with the islands in Bougainville Straits and Lord Howe's group, were transferred by treaty from Germany. The revenue in 1909–10 was £11,356, and the expenditure approximately £8,500; exports, 1907, £51,602; imports, £49,252. European residents, 230; native pop., 150,000. The seat of government is Tulagi.
Resident Commissioner, Charles M. Woodford £900

(2) The Gilbert and Ellice Islands Protectorate. The Gilbert Group, situated between 4° N. and 3° S. latitude and 172° and 177° W. longitude, consists of 16 islands, with several small islands or islets depending upon them; and the Ellice Group, between 5° S. and 10½° S. latitude and 176° E. and 179° 58′ W. longitude, consists of nine islands. Ocean Island (or Paanopa), in lat. 0° 52′ S. and long. 169° 35′ E., was included in the Protectorate in 1900. Total area, 180 square miles; population, about 33,000 and 150 Europeans. Revenue, 1907, £4,620; expenditure, £4,296; imports (1900), £20,369; exports (chiefly copra), £21,582.

The Union or Tokelau Group, Fakaafo, Nukunono and Atafu, were included in the Protectorate in 1909, with a port of entry at Atafu.
Resident Commissioner, Capt. J. Quayle Dickson, D.S.O. £500

(3) The Tonga or Friendly Islands.—A protectorate over the Tonga Islands was proclaimed 19 May, 1900. These islands are situated in the Southern Pacific to the E.S.E. of Fiji, and 390 miles therefrom, with an area of 385 square miles, and a population on Jan. 1, 1905, of 21,103 natives of Tonga, 300 other natives, 151 British subjects, 89 foreigners, and 120 half-castes. The limits of the group are between 15° and 23° 30′ S. and 173° and 177° W. Tongatabu is the seat of government, the king being Jioaji Tubou II. Soil generally is fertile; the principal exports are copra, fungus, green fruit, kava, and candle-nuts. Revenue, 1909, £40,456; expenditure, £34,739; imports, £152,870; exports, £217,155. Of the total shipping in 1909, 65,000 tons cleared, 61,000 were British.
Agent and Consul, W. Telfer Campbell £850

(4) The Phœnix Islands (Wilkes, Gardner, Birnie, Hull, Enderbury, Phœnix, and Sidney), between 2° 30′ and 4° 30′ S. and 171° and 174° W.

(5) Pitcairn Island, situate in lat. 25° 3′ 30″ S., long. 130° 8′ 30″ W. Pop. (April, 1907) 144, descendants of the mutineers of H.M.S. Bounty. Arrowroot is manufactured and exported.
Deputy Commissioner, A. L. S. Rowley (H.M. Consul for the Society Islands).
Chief Magistrate, Edmund McCoy.

(6) Fanning Island, in lat. 3° 51′ 23″ N., long. 159° 21′ 50″ W. Pop., 21 Europeans in connection with Pacific cable station, and about 200 Gilbert Islanders in copra industry.
Deputy Commissioner, William Bent.

(7) The New Hebrides Group lies between the 12th and 20th degrees of south latitude and the 165th and 170th of east longitude. In 1906 a Convention was signed under which the administration of the Group was assumed by Great Britain and France. British and French Resident Commissioners were appointed in 1907. Nat. pop. about 100,000, European 677. Principal exports, maize, copra, and bananas, also coffee, timber, and sulphur. A British steamer runs regularly between Sydney and the group, and French steamers from Sydney and New Caledonia.

Abyssinia proper consists of four provinces—Tigré, Amhara, Godjam, and Shoa. The total area of Abyssinia and its dependencies may be reckoned at 350,000 square miles, with a population of three or four millions of Abyssinians. The boundaries of the empire are defined on the W., N., and N.E., where they touch, in order, the Sudan; the Italian colony of Massowah (Eritrea), the French colony of Djibuti; and the British Somaliland Protectorate. Northwards the boundary is about 15° 30 N. lat., falling just south of Kassala. By the Treaty between the U.K. and Ethiopia of 15 May, 1902, the frontier between Ethiopia and the Sudan was fixed as a line drawn from Khor Um Hagar on the river Setit to Gallabat, thence to the Blue Nile, Baro, Pibor, and Akobo Rivers to Melile, and onwards to the intersection of the 6° N. lat. with 35° E. long. The southern frontier, bordering the British East Africa and Uganda Protectorates, was defined by Treaty of December 6, 1907, and the frontier bordering the Italian Colony of Benadir, by Convention of 16 May, 1908.

Abyssinia proper is volcanic and mountainous. It contains little mineral wealth, though iron and coal are not uncommon. Gold is washed in various streams, and salt, saltpetre, sulphur, copper, and silver are also procurable. The lower country and deep valley gorges are very hot; the higher plateaus are well watered, with a genial climate. In the hotter regions, sugar-cane, cotton, coffee, indigo, banana, rubber, &c., flourish; in the middle zone the vine, palm, maize, wheat, barley, orange, peach, and other fruit trees, tobacco, potatoes, &c., are cultivated; and above 9,000 feet are excellent pastures with some corn cultivation. There are two seasons in the year, a dry winter and a rainy summer from June to September. The chief river is the Blue Nile, issuing from the Tsana-lake; the Atbara and many other tributaries of the Nile also have their rise in the Abyssinian highlands. Horses, mules, donkeys, camels, oxen, goats, and sheep form a large portion of the wealth of the people.

The Abyssinians are Christian and their kings claim descent from Menelek, the son of Solomon by the Queen of Sheba. There is no popular literature, and no education. The Emperor's potential army probably numbers 200,000 armed with rifles. The principal pursuits are agriculture, cattle breeding and hunting; industry is looked down upon; the chief exports are coffee, honey, civet, wax, gums, spices, hides, rubber, ivory, and gold. The import duty on all goods at Dire-Dawa and Harrar is 8 per cent. ad valorem; in the interior the duty is variable, and 3 per cent. addition is imposed on goods brought to the capital. The imports were valued at about £365,000 for 1908, the exports being about £375,000. A railway is being built under French auspices from Jibuti to the capital, of which the first stage is completed and open for goods and passenger traffic to Dire-Dawa, about 185 miles from Jibuti and 25 miles from Harrar, to which place a carriage road has been built. The posts and telegraphs are under French management, and Abyssinia has been admitted to the Postal Union. Telegraphs and telephones have been constructed and admission to the International Telegraph Convention has been sought. The principal towns of Abyssinia, besides Adis Ababa, are Adowa, the capital of Tigré, Gondar, Debra-Markos, Bassa, Aksum, Antalo, Ankober, Goré, Dembecha, Ijubba and Harrar, which is a dependency of Shoa. There are ancient architectural remains at Aksum, Gondar, and Ankober; modern architecture is very poor.

The River Plate was discovered in 1517, and settled by the Spaniards in 1535. It was temporarily occupied by a British force in 1806. In 1810 connection with Spain was severed and independence proclaimed. The Republic is composed of 14 provinces and 9 territories, comprising in all about 1,212,000 square miles, with a population of about 6,800,000. The constitution is modelled on that of the U.S. of America. The government has enjoyed considerable stability since 1890. The principal productions are wheat, maize, oats, linseed, sugar, wool, cattle, sheep and horses. A census of cattle in 1908 showed cattle 29,116,000, sheep 67,211,000, horses 7,531,000, and there were also mules, goats and pigs, the total value being placed at £129,000,000. The exports of wheat, oats, and linseed in 1908 exceeded all records. The export of frozen meat to the United Kingdom is an important industry, the value being £5,000,000 in 1908 and £9,000,000 in 1909. There are seven factories in operation, of which three are English. The exports are made up entirely of pastoral and agricultural products, with the exception of quebracho, copper, manganese, and wolfram. There are about 13,000 miles of railway open, and extensive construction is in progress. The railways are almost entirely in the hands of British companies, and absorb about £150,000,000 of British capital. The total amount of British capital invested in the country is estimated at over £500,000,000. Telegraphs about 32,000 miles, mostly government lines. Immigration is encouraged and comes principally from Spain and Italy, the immigration of the British working-man not being attended with success. The principal ports are Buenos Aires, Rosario, La Plata, and Bahia Blanca. 1,310 British ships entered Buenos Aires during 1909, representing 56 per cent. of the total.

Education (see p. 668).

Defence.—The navy consists of five small battleships (old), seven modern cruisers, and seventeen units of torpedo craft. Strength about 5,000 men. There is a naval port at Bahia Blanca. Naval construction on hand comprises two Dreadnoughts and 12 t.b.d. Army (see 666).

The climate is moderate and healthy. Spanish is the language of the country.

The largest Empire, next to Russia, on the continent of Europe, situated between 42°—51° N. lat. and 9° 30′—26° 20′ E. long. It embraces an area of 675,887 sq. kilometers, and a population (1905) of nearly 49,425,000.

The Austro-Hungarian Monarchy consists of two States, the Empire of Austria and the Kingdom of Hungary, and of the provinces Bosnia and Herzegovina. Each of the States has its own Constitution and Parliament, and for most branches of State affairs its own Ministry and Administration; but they are closely bound together by the identity of the Ruler and by a permanent Constitutional Union, which, upon the common principle of possession and defence, was first proclaimed by the Pragmatic Sanction of 1723, and has since been regulated by the so-called "Compromise" (Ausgleich-Kiegyezés) of 1867. According to the Constitutional Union foreign affairs and the greater part of war affairs (Army and Navy), together with the finances concerning them, are dealt with by common ministries. The control of the official actions of these ministers and the voting of the common budget is exercised by two Delegations, each consisting of 60 members, of whom 20 are chosen from the Upper House of Austria (Herrenhaus) and of Hungary (Förendiház), and 40 from the Lower House of Austria (Abgeordnetenhaus) and of Hungary (Képviselöház). In every other respect legislation concerning the common affairs belongs to the two Parliaments, and each State provides separately for its contribution to the common expenses. The proportion to be contributed by each State is fixed by mutual agreement, renewable every 10 years, and the last so made, which expired in 1897, was renewed in 1907. According to this agreement Austria contributes to the common expenses with 63·6 per cent., and Hungary with 36·4 per cent. From 1897 to 1907, no new proportion having been agreed, the quota was fixed by the Emperor-King's decision.

Common expenses were estimated (for the year 1910) at £18,372,925.

Commerce is carried on principally with Germany, Italy, Russia, France, and Switzerland, and through the ports of Trieste and Fiume, also direct with the transmarine world, including England. In 1908, 42,607 kilometres of railway were open for traffic, in addition to 4,068 kilometres of narrow gauge and industrial lines.

In connection with the Ausgleich-Kiegyezés the two States also entered into a commercial and customs union in 1867, by which the two States form one commercial and customs territory, and possess the same system of coinage, weights and measures, and a joint bank of issue. In the same way as the quota agreement, this union is renewable every ten years, and failing a renewal each State provides separately for these matters. The Union was so renewed in 1877, 1887 and 1907. In 1897, no agreement having been attained, the Union was provisorily maintained.

The principal exports from Austria-Hungary in 1908 and 1909 were (in 1,000 crowns*):—

Austria contains an area of 300,005 sq. kilometres, and a population of 28,264,670 (1908). The Central Government of the Empire is conducted by the Reichsrath, consisting of an Upper (Herrenhaus) and Lower House (Abgeordnetenhaus). There are 17 provinces, viz.:—Lower Austria, Upper Austria, Salzburg, Styria or Steiermark, Carinthia or Kärnten, Carniola or Krain, Coast Districts (Istria, Görtz and Gradisca, Trieste), Tyrol, Vorarlberg, Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, Galicia, Bukowina and Dalmatia, each possessing a separate Diet (Landtage) and also sending representatives to the Reichsrath. Of the inhabitants, there were in 1900, 9,171,614 Germans, 5,955,397 Bohemians and Moravians, 4,252,483 Poles, 3,381,570 Ruthenians, and 1,192,780 Slovenes. In addition to Vienna there are six cities with over 100,000 inhabitants and seven in addition with over 50,000. There are 23,797,000 Roman, Greek and Armenian Catholics, 607,000 Orthodox Greek, 494,000 Protestants and 1,225,000 Jews in the country.

The principal industry is agriculture, in which 13,700,000 were employed in 1900; trade and manufactures accounting for about 9,600,000, while mining occupied 538,819. The chief products are grain, cereals, wine (6,252,571 hectolitres in 1909), and minerals (coal, iron, lead, zinc, silver, quicksilver and copper); the manufactures being woollens, cottons and glass.

III.—HUNGARY.

President of the Ministry and Interior, Count Charles Khuen-Héderváry.
Minister a latere, Count Charles Khuen-Héderváry (ad interim).
Finance, Ladislas Lukács.
Instruction and Religion, Count John Zichy.
Commerce, Charles Hieronymi.
Agriculture, Count Adalbert Serényi.
Justice, Dr. Francis Székely.
National Defence, Feldmarschalleutnant Samuel Hazai.
Minister for Croatia, Count Charles Khuen-Héderváry (ad interim).

Hungary, with its dependent states, has an area of 324,851 sq. kilometres, about 125,430 sq. miles, and is rather larger than the United Kingdom, with a population of 19,254,559 at the census of 1900: to this Croatia and Slavonia contribute 2,416,304. The country is divided into 71 counties with 474 districts for those of Hungary. Hungarian is the official language, except in Croatia and Slavonia, where Croatian is spoken. Croatia and Slavonia form an annexe of the Crown of Hungary, with autonomy in home affairs, justice and public instruction. At the head of the Croatian Government is the Banus (Lord-Lieutenant), Nicholas Tomasich, who is responsible to both the Diet of Croatia and to the Hungarian Prime Minister. The Croatian Diet sends 43 members to the Hungarian Parliament, and the Hungarian Ministry contains a Croatian member. Parliament consists of a Lower House of 453 members, elected for five years; of these Croatia sends 40, but they have no vote on matters connected with justice, education, and home affairs. There is also an Upper House, consisting of the male members of the dynasty, the Barones regni, prelates, such members of the magnate families who contribute more than 6,000 crowns to the land-tax, the Banus, with three members of Croatia sent by the Diet, and fifty members nominated by the Crown.

Of the inhabitants in 1900, 8,742,000 were Hungarians, 2,799,000 Roumanians, 2,135,000 Germans, 2,020,000 Slovaks, 1,682,000 Croatians and 1,049,000 Servians, the Hungarian-speaking population numbering 10,176,000. By religions (1900) there were 9,920,000 Roman Catholics, 1,854,000 Greek Catholics, 2,816,000 Orthodox Greeks, 1,289,000 Lutherans, 2,441,000 Calvinists, and 851,000 Jews. In addition to Budapest, which had, in 1900, 732,322 inhabitants, there are ten cities with over 50,000 inhabitants.

All the great plains produce grain of excellent quality. The returns for 1909 (including Croatia and Slavonia) give 44,050,622 hectolitres of wheat, 16,596,370 of rye, 24,555,359 of barley, 31,290,845 of oats, and 63,512,061 of Indian corn. The cattle number in 1895 was 6,738,000, sheep 8,123,000 horses 2,308,000, and swine 7,330,000. The total exports in 1909 were valued at £70,841,833, of which sum £38,048,542 was the value of raw materials, £6,932,708 of semi-manufactures, and £25,860,583 of manufactures. The imports in 1909 were valued at £75,309,917 (raw materials £18,410,792, semi-manufactures £9,548,792, manufactures £47,350,333). The chief mineral products are gold, silver, copper, lead, quicksilver, antimony, iron, coal, and sulphur. The mines, however, are not well worked, and might be made a much greater source of income. Salt, which is a Government monopoly, was produced to the value of £1,282,176 in 1908.

A Kingdom of Central Europe, anciently inhabited by the Belgæ (a Celtic-speaking German tribe), and part of the Gallia Belgica of the Romans. In 1815 the country was joined to the Kingdom of the Netherlands, an arrangement which was upset by the Revolution of 1830. On Oct. 4, 1830, a National Congress proclaimed its independence, and on June 4, 1831, Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg was chosen hereditary King. In Sept., 1908, the Congo Free State was annexed by Belgium.

Belgium has a frontier of 831 miles, and is bounded on the north and east by the Netherlands (268 miles), on the south and west by France (381 miles), on the east by Germany (60 miles), and the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg (80 miles), with a seaboard of 42 miles. The Meuse and its tributary the Sambre divide it into two distinct regions, that in the west being generally level and fertile, whilst the table-land of the Ardennes, in the east, has for the most part a poor soil. The total area is 11,373 square miles, about equal to the four counties of Hertford, Lancashire, York, and Lincoln; its great harbour and commercial entrepôt is Antwerp, a strongly fortified city on the Scheldc. The other harbours are Ostend, Nieuport, Blankenberg, and Zeebrugge.

The "polders" near the coast, which are protected by dikes against floods, cover an area of 19 square miles. The highest hill, Baraque Michel, rises to a height of 2,230 feet, but the mean elevation of the whole country does not exceed 536 feet. The principal rivers are the Schelde (Escaut) and the Maas (Meuse). Brussels has a mean temperature of 50° F. (summer 63°, winter 37°).

The population was 7,451,903 on Dec. 31, 1909, or 655 to the square mile; it is consequently one of the most densely peopled countries of the world. The decennial increase is about 10 per cent., and since 1867 there has been an annual excess of immigrants over emigrants. There were (1908) 3,717,422 females to 3,669,022 males; and annually 25 births and 17 deaths to every 1,000 inhabitants. There are nine provinces: Antwerp, Brabant, Flanders (E. and W.), Hainaut, Liège, Limburg, Luxemburg and Namur. BRUSSELS (with suburbs, 649,84 inhabitants) is the capital. Other towns with over 100,000 inhabitants are Antwerp, the chief port (327,171 exclusive of suburbs), Ghent (164,689), and Liège (176,893).

French and Flemish are the joint official languages, but while French is the language of the upper classes, Flemish is spoken by the majority, preponderating in Flanders, Limburg and Brabant, including Antwerp. In 1900, 42 per cent. spoke Flemish, 38 per cent. French, and 12 per cent. both tongues, the latter being rapidly increasing class (423,752 in 1880 and 801,587 in 1900). Nearly all the inhabitants are at least nominally Roman Catholics, and in 190 there existed 2,500 convents, inhabited by 6,23 monks and 31,668 nuns, this number being no increased owing to influx of monks and nun from France.

Education (see p. 668).

Belgium is essentially a manufacturing country and it is largely dependent upon foreign supplie for its food. The soil was divided (1895) amon 829,625 proprietors. The mineral kingdom yield coal (1909, 23,517,550 tons), iron (1909, 205,98 tons), zinc, lead, and copper. The leading industries are collieries, quarries and metallurg (Mons, Charleroi, Liège, Namur, Hainaut, an Brabant), glass, textiles (Verviers), lace (Brussel Mechlin, Bruges, &c.), flour and starch mill sugar, distilleries, breweries, &c. The follow ing table shows the distribution of Belgian com merce in millions of francs, 1908 and 1909 :—

Most of the maritime trade of Belgium is carried on in foreign bottoms, the mercantile marine only consisting (1909) of 101 vessels (187,444 tons), in addition to which there were 464 fishing boats. In 1905 a new port was inaugurated at Zeebrugge with a sea lock and inside dry dock. In 1909, 10,539 foreign vessels entered at Belgian ports (tonnage 14,283,349). In 1908 there were 4,663 kilometres of railway (including branch lines and private lines rented by the State); the telegraphs had a length of 7,280 kilometres (1908), and the post-office carried 217,790,928 letters, 109,096,968 post-cards, while 7,472,746 private telegrams were sent in 1908. The navigable rivers and canals have a length of 2,171,469 metres (1908), and there are 9,639 kilometres of roads.

The Belgian constitution of 1831 jointly vests the legislative power in the King, the Senate, and the Chamber of Representatives. The 110 senators (with the exception of 27 elected by the provincial councils) and 166 representatives are elected by the people, the former for eight, the latter for four years. Universal male suffrage, with plural voting up to three votes by property and educational qualifications, was introduced by the Electoral Law of 1894, proportional representation being secured by an Act of 1900. And the united constituencies numbered 1,672,393 voters, with 2,697,957 votes, in 1909–10. There are in addition representative Provincial and Communal Councils, elected on a somewhat more liberal franchise.

Defence (for Army, see p. 667).

Antwerp is the principal fortress, and Liége and Namur are also fortified, forming "Têtes-de-pont" on the line of the Meuse against a violation of neutrality by either France or Germany. Belgium has no navy. (See above.)

BELGIAN COLONIES.

The Independent State of the Congo became a Belgian Colony by a law of 8 Oct., 1908, and is administered by the following:—

Minister, J. Renkin.
Sécrétaire Général, H. Droogmans.
Direction Générale—
(1) Justice and Instruction, V. Denyn;

The Congo.—The territory of the Congo includes the right bank of the Congo river from Manyanga to the sea, and 16 miles of sea-coast north of the estuary; the left bank from Noki (80 miles from the sea); and theuceforth both banks. The total area amounts to 802,000 sq. miles, with a native population estimated at 15,000,000 to 20,000,000. The total European population (Jan., 1910) was 3,362, of whom 315 were British, 39 Americans, 183 Italians, 167 Portuguese, 208 Swedes, 61 Germans, and 1,916 Belgians. The river is navigable for large vessels from its mouth at Banana to Matadi (95 miles), where the European steamers discharge and recharge their cargo; but between that place and Leopoldville, on Stanley Pool, there occur rapids and falls which have been avoided by a railroad 240 miles in length. There is also a second line, 60-centimetre gauge, from Boma to the Mayumbe country. The Great Lakes Railway is completed as far as Ponthierville, about 75½ miles (1906). A line of telegraph is open to Coquilhatville. There is telegraphic communication with Europe. A terrible disease, called "Sleeping Sickness," for which no remedy has yet been discovered, has of late years made increasing ravages upon the native population, and threatens to depopulate large districts (especially in the Lower Congo) of a country in other respects capable of supporting with ease a large population. There are undoubtedly many fertile tracts, more especially along the rivers; but barren mountain-land shuts out the coast from the more productive interior. The exports consist mainly of rubber (three-fifths of whole), palm-kernels, palm-oil, ivory, and a few minor articles. The coffee plant and cotton grow wild, and coffee, cocoa, and tobacco have been planted with success. Iron, copper, and other minerals have been found. Revenue (1906), £1,178,200; expenditure, £1,371,050; imports (1909), £1,139,290; exports (1909), £3,120,580. Capital,

This and Paraguay are the only States of South America without a seaboard, Antofagasta, its former port, having been ceded to Chile. It was formerly comprised in the Spanish Vice-royalty of Colombia under the name of "Alto Peru," and derives its present name from its great liberator, Simon Bolivar. It extends between lat. 8° and 23° S. and long. 57° 30′ and 73° W., and its area is said to be 570,000 square miles. The estimated population in 1907 was 2,180,710. The peace army amounts to about 3,000 men, the war effective being about 90,000. The mineral productions are very valuable: the silver mines of Potosi are believed to be almost inexhaustible; while gold, partly dug and partly washed, is obtained on the Eastern Cordillera of the Andes: tin, copper, lead, antimony, wolfram, bismuth, salt and sulphur are also found. Its agricultural produce consists chiefly of rice, barley, oats, maize, cotton, coca, indigo, india-rubber, cacao, potatoes, the choicest fruits, cinchona bark, medicinal herbs, &c., which with tin, gold, silver and copper are its principal exports; its chief imports being iron, cotton and woollen goods, hardware, and silks. There are about 450 miles of trunk lines of railway and 2,896 miles of telegraph wire. There is direct railway communication with La Paz from Antofagasta (Chile), and branch lines are under construction from Oruru to Cochabamba; from Rio Mulato (near Uyuni) to Potosí, from La Paz to Arica and to Puerto Pando; and from Guaqui to Puno, in Peru. Communication with Perú is effected by rail to Guaqui and thence by steamer across Lake Titicaca to the railway at Puno. A line is under construction from San Antonio (Brazil) to Villa Bella in Bolivia; 65 miles are in operation and 150 left to complete, when it will connect with the steamers on the rivers Beni, Mamoré, and other tributaries. A line from Buenos Aires to Bolivia is complete to La Quiaca.

The Republic of the United States of Br[illegible] was founded on the 15th of November, 1889. I[illegible] bloodless revolution which drove Dom Pe[illegible] from the throne. On February 24, 1891, a n[illegible] Constitution was voted by the Constitu[illegible] Assembly by which the President's term of of[illegible] was fixed at four years; Church and State w[illegible] separated, civil marriages only made valid, e[illegible] education secularised.

Brazil, the most extensive State of So[illegible] America, discovered in 1500 by Pedro Alva[illegible] Cabral, Portuguese navigator, is bounded on north by the Atlantic Ocean, Guiana, and Ve[illegible] zuela; on the west by Ecuador, Peru, Boli[illegible] Paraguay, and Argentina; on the south by U[illegible] guay; and on the east by the Atlantic Oce[illegible] This immense country extends between lat 22′ N. and 33° 45′ S. and long. 34° 40′ and 73° W., being 2,600 miles from north to south, [illegible] 2,500 from west to east; with a coast-line on Atlantic of 3,700 miles. It comprises an a[illegible] of 3,218,166 square miles, and contains a po[illegible] lation estimated at 20,000,000. There are s[illegible] to be about 1,000,000 "wild" Indians; 94[illegible] immigrants arrived in 1908, an increase of 27[illegible] over the previous year. For Army see p. 667; the Navy (1909) consisted of 3 Dreadnoughts, 3 old battle-ships, 3 protected cruisers and other smaller craft, including 11 torpedo boat destroyers, and 3 submarines. 3 first-class battle-ships and 4 cruisers are under construction. There are 12 ports along the coast, of which the principal is Rio, with a shore line of 123 miles. Brazil is unequalled for the number and extent of its rivers: the Amazon, the largest, though not the longest, in the world, with its immediate tributaries, and the Tocantins, San Francisco, and others. The minerals are very considerable and valuable, comprising gold, silver, iron, diamonds, topazes, and other precious stones. Its forests are immense, abounding in the greatest variety of useful and beautiful woods adapted for dyeing, cabinet work, or ship-building; among these are mahogany, logwood, rosewood, brazilwood, &c. In the extreme south towards the interior the land rises by gentle gradations to the height of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet above the level of the sea, and in those regions European fruits and grain are reared, while other parts are found extremely favourable for the raising of sugar, coffee, cotton, cocoa, india-rubber, tobacco, and tropical products, many of which are indigenous. Its agricultural produce is abundant; maize, beans, cassava-root, and nuts are very generally cultivated; also, in some parts, wheat and other European cereals. Cattle raising is an important industry, the number being officially computed at 8,000,000. Cotton is being largely cultivated for export, and is being used in growing quantities for home manufactures. Sugar-cane is grown in large and increasing quantities in the northern provinces, Pernambuco being the centre of the sugar-producing zone. India-rubber comes from the more northern provinces, especially the valley of the Amazon, and is shipped from Pará and Manáos: and coffee, though also grown in the north, comes chiefly from Rio de Janeiro, Minas, São Paulo, and Esperito Santo. Tobacco and cocoa are grown largely, especially in Bahia. The exports consist solely of the raw produce of the soil, and owing to the vast extent of the country, and the consequent very different peculiarities of the soil and climate, their nature varies considerably. The imports consist of every description of manufactured articles, but there were in 1908 no fewer than 1,541 industrial establishments including 161 cotton-mills, giving employment to 45,942 hands, and representing an invested capital of 234,428 of contos of reis. The enormous protective duties were again increased in 1887, 1893, 1896 and 1906. In 1907 there were 11,000 miles of railway open. Length of telegraph wires in 1907 42,210 miles.

Bulgaria was created by the Treaty of Berlin, 13th of July, 1878, and is governed by a King, and a Council of Ministers with a single chamber, popular legislature (Sobranjé, or National Assembly) and constitutional government. By modification of the Constitution, 1893, there is now one deputy to each 20,000 inhabitants, 115 for the northern, and 51 for the southern province. In 1908 the country threw off its allegiance to Turkey, and is now independent.

Eastern Roumelia, likewise a creation of the Berlin Treaty of 1878 was intended to form an autonomous province, but since the successful revolution at Philippopolis of September 18th, 1885, it has been incorporated with and now forms an integral portion of Bulgaria, with the same ruler, laws, and mode of administration.

Defence (for Army, see p. 666).—The navy consists of a torpedo gunboat and a few small steamers.

Education (see p. 668).

United Bulgaria is bounded on the north by Roumania, from which it is separated by the Danube; on the west by Servia and Macedonia; on the east by the Black Sea; and on the south by the Turkish province of Adrianople. The exports consist principally of cereals (especially wheat), live stock, essence of roses, woollens, skins, cheese, eggs, timber, cocoons, and tobacco; the principal imports being textiles, metal goods and machinery, colonial wares, leather, building materials, petroleum and other oils, paper, salt fish, rice, and coal. The principal towns, with their populations in 1905, are Sofia (82,621), Philippopolis (45,707), Varna (37,417), Rustchuk (33,632), Sliven (25,027), and Shumla (22,275). The principal ports are Varna and Bourgas. In 1908, 5,915 vessels (1,654,995 tons) entered and cleared at ports on the Black Sea. There are (1908) 965 miles of railway open; 3,688 miles of telegraph and 1,170 miles of telephone wires. North Bulgaria has an area of 24,237 square miles, and South Bulgaria an area of 12,706 square miles. Population according to language or nationality and religion (census of 1 January, 1905):—

A State of South America, of Spanish origin, lying between the Andes and the shores of the South Pacific, extending coastwise from the Rio Sama to Cape Horn south, between lat. 18° 28′ and 56° 35′ S., and long. 66° 30′ and 75° 40′ W. Extreme length of coast-line about 2,485 miles. Its extreme length is about 2,800 miles, with an average breadth, north-of 41°, of 100 miles. The great chain of the Andes runs along its eastern limit with a general elevation of 5,000 to 10,000 feet above the level of the sea; but numerous summits attain the height of 18,000 feet—the highest Aconcagua, an extinct volcano, being 22,422 feet. The chain, however, lowers considerably towards its southern extremity. There are no rivers of great size, and none of them are of much service as navigable highways. In the north the country is arid. Chile is divided into 21 provinces and 3 territories, the aggregate area of which is estimated at 290,741 square miles, with a population (1900) of about 3,110,000, exclusive of Araucanians, Bolivian and American Indians numbering about 50,000. The principal towns with their estimated populations (1908), are:—Santiago (380,000), Valparaiso (190,000), Concepcion (62,000), Talca (45,000), Iquique (45,000) Chillan (34,000), and Antofagasta (26,500). The natural increase in the population is slow, but immigration is slowly redressing the balance the majority of incomers hailing from Spain. Agriculture and mining are the principal occupations. Wheat, maize, barley, oats, beans, peas, lentils, wines, tobacco, flax, hemp, Chile pepper and potatoes are grown extensively; the vine and all European fruit-trees flourish. The live stock includes about 1,000,000 cattle, 1,500,000 sheep, 200,000 horses, 170,000 goats and 150,000 pigs. The mineral wealth is considerable, the country being extremely rich in copper-ore, and some rich gold mines have been discovered. The rainless north yields more especially nitrate of soda, iodine, borate of soda, gold and silver, a large number of mines yielding both being in actual work in Tarapacá, Guanaco, and Cachinal in Atacama, and Caracoles in Antofagasta; the centre, copper and silver; and the south, iron and coal. There are smelting-works for copper and silver, tanneries, corn and saw mills, starch, soap, biscuit, rope, cloth, cheese, furniture, candle, and paper factories, breweries and distilleries, and the domestic industry furnishes cloth, embroideries, baskets and pottery. The many ports favour commerce, and six lines of steamers connect the country with Panama and the Magellan Strait direct with Europe, a passage to Liverpool occupying from 40 days. There are (1908) about 3,300 miles of railway open, nearly 15,000 miles of telegraph, over 850 post-offices, and 8,000 miles of telephone, the last worked by an English company. The Chilian section of the trans-Andean line was completed in April 1910. A longitudinal railway of about 950 miles is under construction by two British syndicates; this will connect Iquique with the Southern Provinces. The commercial marine numbers 153 vessels (94 steamers), of 157,997 tons. In 1907, 2,900 foreign vessels of total tonnage of 6,500,000 entered at Chilian ports. The staple articles of export are nitrate of soda, iodine, &c., copper bars and ores, silver ores, corn, flour, hides, and guano. The imports include silks, woollens and other textiles, food, and machinery. About 40 per cent. of the foreign trade is carried on with the U.K., which receives wheat and barley (£1,119,000 in 1909), nitrate of soda (£850,000), copper ore (£500,000), unwrought copper (£830,000), , and wool (£750,000); sending cottons (£1,200,000), machinery (£330,000), iron manufactures (£700,000), woollens (£470,000), and tea (£200,000).

Defence (for Army, see p. 666).—The navy consists of 1 battle-ship, 2 armoured cruisers, and 4 protected cruisers; two Dreadnoughts and 4 ocean t. b.d.'s are projected.

China proper (or the Eighteen Provinces) contains an area of over 1,500,000 square miles. Its length from north to south is 1,860 miles, and its breadth 1,520 miles, and its population, according to the latest Chinese estimates, exceeds 400,000,000. On the north of the 18 provinces lie the vast regions of Mongolia and Manchuria, and on the west are Tibet and Turkestan, all of which are integral parts of the Chinese Empire; the area of these dependencies is over 2,500,000 square miles, with a scattered population of 19,000,000. The civil government of the 18 provinces is entrusted to viceroys and governors, and under them each province is subdivided into circuits superintended by taotais or intendants, and again into prefectures and districts. All the territorial officials are appointed by the Imperial Government, and the provincial viceroys and governors, though free to act independently in many matters of local detail and finance, are responsible to the central Government at Peking in all important questions, and especially so in foreign affairs. The administration of Mongolia and Turkestan is entrusted to Military Lieutenant Governors, who, with the Chinese officials in Tibet, are under the direction of the Mongolian Superintendency, or Colonial Office, in Peking.

FOREIGN RELATIONS with the Chinese Empire have existed for many centuries. In the 13th century the Venetian merchant-adventurer Marco Polo resided in Cambaluc (the present Peking), and was employed by the Mongol Emperor Kublai Khan as adviser. In the 17th century Jesuit missionaries had attained considerable influence, but their power aroused jealousy, and they were expelled. The Dutch and Portuguese traders had for centuries maintained commercial dealings with the port of Canton, but towards the end of the 18th century they were largely displaced by the British East India Company, and when the Company's monopoly was withdrawn, in 1833, the position of British merchants in Canton became a national question, and contributed towards the first Chinese War of 1840. A treaty was signed at Nanking, as the result of these operations, ceding Hong Kong to Great Britain and opening five ports to foreign trade and residence; but the principle of extra-territoriality was maintained, and foreigners remained amenable only to the laws of their own countries. The continued exclusiveness of the Chinese Government led by a long chain of events to the war of 1860, when British and French troops captured Peking and burnt the Summer Palace. From this date the development of foreign trade began to be most important, and for many years Great Britain's share of it was greatly predominant. In 1894 China fought a disastrous war with Japan, resulting in the loss of Formosa and the establishment of Corea as an independent state. An abortive attempt was made, in 1898, by the Emperor to introduce administrative reforms, but his reactionary ministers persuaded the Dowager Empress (his aunt) to reassume the reins of government. Under her rule a plot was hatched to rid the country of foreigners; and in the summer of 1900 the Legations in Peking and the foreign settlements in Tientsin were fiercely attacked and bombarded for many weeks. The situation was relieved at its most critical moment by the arrival of an allied army despatched by nearly all the Treaty Powers, and Tientsin and Peking were captured. The Imperial Court fled, and remained in voluntary exile until early in 1902. Meanwhile, a Peace Protocol was signed between the Envoys of the Treaty Powers and the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, Prince Ch'ing and the late Li Hung Chang. This provides for an indemnity of £65,000,000, to be paid within the next 39 years. Subsequent negotiations resulted in 3 new commercial treaties—(1) between the U.K. and China (5 Sept., 1902); (2) U.S. and China (8 Oct., 1903); and (3) Japan and China (9 Oct., 1903). Under the two last Mukden, Tatungkow, Chang-sha, and Antung in Manchuria, were made Treaty ports.

Initiatory measures have been taken by China, under the first of these Treaties, to introduce two important reforms—namely, the protection of trade-marks and the establishment of a uniform national coinage. As regards the former, provisional regulations have already been framed, and the latter was the subject of investigation by a joint American and Mexican Commission, which submitted a scheme to the Chinese Government for the adoption of a gold standard.

On the conclusion of the war between Russia and Japan in 1905, a Treaty and Additional Agreement relating to Manchuria were entered into between Japan and China. By the former the Chinese Government consented to all the transfers and assignments made by Russia to Japan in Manchuria; and the latter provides, inter alia, for the speedy opening by China of the following cities and towns in Manchuria as places of international residence and trade:—Feng-huang-ch'eng, Liao-yang, Hsinmintun, Tung-chiang-tzu (on the Liao River), and Fa-kumen in Fengtien Province; Ch'ang-ch'un, Kirin, Harbin, Ninguta, Hunch'un, and Sansing in the Kirin Province; and Tsitsihar, Hailar, Aihun, and Manchuli in the Heilungchiang Province.

Latest estimates of the foreign residents at the open ports of China are as follows:—British, 9,499; Japanese, 55,401; Americans, 3,168; Russians, 9,952; Germans, 2,341; French, 1,818; Portuguese, 3,396; Italian, 246; other nationalities, 2,489; the total being 88,310. Out of a total of 2,801 foreign firms in China 502 are British, 1,492 Japanese, 232 German, 113 American, 84 French, 60 Portuguese, and 83 Spanish.

Defence (for Army, see p. 667).—The navy has not recovered from the effects of the Chino-Japanese war, when more than ten important war vessels were sunk or captured. China now possesses 2 second-class cruisers (4,300 tons), and 11 third-class cruisers (875–2,500 tons); 3 torpedo gunboats (349–1,000 tons), 4 gunboats (215–411 tons), 32 first-class torpedo boats, and 12 second-class torpedo boats. Most of these were launched between 1885 and 1902. Of the torpedo boats about half only are fit for action. Four destroyers, built in 1898–9, were captured by the Allied Forces in 1900, and were appropriated by Great Britain, France, Germany and Russia respectively. Full complement of the navy is about 2,500.

Shipping.—The mercantile marine (1901) consisted of 46 steam vessels over 100 tons register, with a total net tonnage of 40,178 tons. In 1909 the total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at the treaty ports was 86,771,809, the largest total yet recorded. Of these 39 per cent. were British, 20 per cent. Chinese, 8 per cent. German, 22 per cent. Japanese, 2 per cent. French, 1 per cent. Norwegian, 1 per cent. American, and 7 per cent. other countries.

Commerce.—The total foreign trade of China in 1909 amounted to £98,587,354 (imports £54,447,665, exports £44,139,689), an increase of £9,098,570 as compared with 1908. It was shared by the nations of the world as under in 1909:—

Trade with United Kingdom.—The principal items of merchandise exchanged between China and the United Kingdom will be found on the next page.

Education.—During the year 1910 many changes in administration and development were under discussion, and the contemplated establishment of a university at Pekin was carried out (see p. 668).

Railways.—About 4,840 miles were open (1910) inclusive of the Manchurian lines. The following lines are completed and working:—Manchurian Railways (1) Chinese Eastern Railway, Kuanchengtzu to Harbin, and thence east and west to Russian frontier, 1,080 miles. Russian control. (2) Tsitsihar Light Railway—Connects Tsitsihar with Chinese Eastern Railway, 17 miles. (3) South Manchurian Railway—Dalny to Kuanchengtzu, 439 miles. Branches—(a) Mukden to Antung, 187 miles. Twenty-two miles from Kowloon completed. (9) Sunning Railway. Kongyik to Samkaphoi, viâ Sunning, 55 miles. Forty miles south from Kongyik open.

The following lines are contemplated:—German capital.—Techow to Chengtingfu (100 miles); Yenchou to Kaifengfu (150 miles). French capital.—Longsan to Nanning, viâ Lungchow (150 miles). Japanese capital.—Amoy to Foochow (150 miles). There are also projects for lines from Hankow to Chengtu (Szechuan), viâ Wanhsien. Chinese engineers and construction; Canton to Amoy; Kalgan to Kulun (Manchuria); Lanchoufu to Ili (Kansu); Kuanchengtze to Kirin; Shihchiachuang (Chihli) to Tehchou (Shantung); Hsinmintun to Fakuman; and Loyang to Tungkuan (Honan); in Canton district—Fatshan to Kong Moon; Canton to Swatow; Samshui to Wuchow; line from Kua Chou at mouth of Grand Canal to Tsing Kiang P'u and Hsu Chou thence joining Peking-Hankow line viâ K'ai Fengfu—the Chinkiang-Hsuchou-K'aifeng portion to be first laid; line 47 miles long from coal mines at Tsao Chuang to T'ai Chuang on Grand Canal; line to join Wei-Hsien on the Chinan-Tsingtao Railway with Chefoo.

TELEGRAPHS are being rapidly constructed by the Imperial Government, and Peking is in communication overland with Europe and Tibet, the line being extended to Lhasa. The total length of line in operation at end of 1909 was 45,000 miles.

CUSTOMS AND POSTS.—The Imperial Maritime Customs is the controlling service; this body consists of nearly 1,000 Europeans, a large proportion of them British subjects, all under the control of the Acting Inspector-General F. A. Aglen, Esq. By an Imperial Decree of May, 1906, the Maritime Customs Dept. was transferred from the Foreign Board to the Board of Revenue, and two Chinese Administrators-General were appointed. It is not yet exactly known how far this change will affect the powers hitherto exercised by the Inspector-General. In addition to the collection of dues at the Treaty Ports this service manages the lighting and navigation thereof, and keeps a small fleet of cruisers to enforce its regulations; it also manages the Imperial Post Office, whose operations have been much developed in the last two years. Already letters can be sent all over the 18 provinces at a uniform rate of 2 cents (or less than one halfpenny) per half-ounce. The number of Chinese post offices is 4,258; 306,280,600 postal packets and 3,280,747 parcels were handled in 1908.

FINANCES.—Sir R. Hart, in 1901, estimated the annual revenue as follows: Land tax, 26,500,000 taels; provincial duties and receipts, 2,600,000 taels; grain commutation, 3,100,000 taels; salt gabelle, 13,500,000; likin, 16,000,000; customs (maritime), 23,800,000, (native) 2,700,000; total, 88,200,000 taels. The expenditure was estimated at 101,120,000 taels.

COLOMBIA, REPUBLIC OF.

President, Carlos E. Restrepo, elected 3 August, 1910 (for 4 years).
Foreign Affairs, Dr. Enrique Olaya Herrera.

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary in England, Don Santiago Perez Triana, 45 Avenue Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Formerly New Granada—a Republic with Constitution, 5 August, 1886—consisting of the Capital District of Bogotá and 34 Departments created by a Law of 5 April, 1908. In the most North-West part of South America, having a coast-line on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It is situated between 2° 40′ S. to 12° 25′ N. lat. and 68° to 79° W. long., comprising an area of 473,000 square miles, and possessing an estimated population (1895) of about 4,000,000. of whom more than one-half are whites and half-castes. It has been frequently subjected to revolutionary changes and civil wars, and in December, 1903, the Department of Panama proclaimed its independence and now exists as a separate republic. The country is intersected by three great ranges of the Andes, known as the Western, Central, and Eastern Cordilleras; the second contains the highest peaks, but the latter is the more important as it consists of a series of vast table-lands, cool and healthy. This temperate region is the most densely-peopled portion of the Republic. Its forests are extensive; among the trees are mahogany, cedar, fustic, and other dye-woods and medicinal plants. Its mineral productions are gold, silver, platinum, copper, iron, lead, coal, and emeralds. Its principal agricultural products are coffee, cotton, plantains, and bananas, and in some parts tobacco, wheat and other cereals. Its manufactures, for home consumption, consist of woollen and cotton stuffs. The chief exports are coffee, precious metals, hides, and india-rubber. All religions are tolerated. The standing army consists of about 6,000 men; the navy has been abolished. Railroads are in their infancy, about 560 miles being open in 1910, with 8,680 (1907) miles of telegraph. The rate of exchange is about $100 paper=$1 gold; $500 paper=£1 (approximately).

COSTA RICA, REPUBLIC OF.

President, Ricardo Jimenez, assumed office 8 May, 1910, for 4 years.
Minister of Foreign Affairs, Manuel Castro Quesada.
Commerce & Finance, Felipe J. Alvarado.
Interior, Carlos M. Jiminez.
War and Marine, Nicolas Oreamuno

Chargé d'Affaires for U.K., Wenceslao de la Guardia, 1 Strathmore Gardens, W.

The Republic of Costa Rica, the most southern State of Central America, extending across the isthmus, between 8° 17′ and 11° 10′ N. lat. and from 82° 30′ to 85° 45′ W. long., contains an area of about 23,000 English square miles, and a population (1909) of 368,780. The chief exports are coffee (193,056 bags, value £543,268, 1909), bananas (9,365,690 bunches in 1909, value £896,238), cacao, cedarwood, fustic, and hides. The imports are dry goods, hardware, provisions, railway material, machinery, paints, and general merchandise (in 1909, 55·26 per cent. from United States, 18·26 from United Kingdom, 13·13 from Germany, 5·0 from France, and 8·35 from other countries).

The chief ports are Limon, on the Atlantic coast, through which the whole of the important banana trade with the United States and England is done, as well as by far the larger part of the other exports and imports, and Puntarenas on the Pacific coast.

The Costa Rica Railway runs from Limon to the capital, San José (103 miles) in six hours, and is continued 13 miles to Alajuela (Costa Rica branch lines 57 miles). The Northern Railway runs from Limon as terminus, and comprises 1 miles of main line and branches, running through the banana districts on the Atlantic coast; the services of the above two lines were amalgamated from 1 July, 1905. The Government own and operate the Pacific Railway, from San José to Orotina (46 miles), and the coast section of the same, Esparta to Puntarenas (13 miles); a new section from Orotina to join the Puntarenas section was opened in 1910. The journey from the capital to Puntarenas (75 miles) takes 4 hours. A considerable amount of English capital is embarked in the Republic.

CRETE (or CANDIA).

Suzerain, H.M. the Sultan of Turkey.
High Commissioner, Alexander T. A. Zaimis, assumed office 30 Sept., 1906, for 5 years.

Crete (or Candia) is an island in the Mediterranean, about 148 miles long and 7 to 30 miles in breadth, with an area of 2,950 square miles; the population is 303,543, of whom 269,319 are Christians, 33,496 Mussulmans, and 728 Jews. The island formed part of the early and later Roman Empires, and in 1669 was captured by the Turks.

The island now has impartial administration under the high suzerainty of Turkey, but independent of its suzerain under the High Commissioner appointed by the Powers. The climate is healthy, and a fine anchorage is presented by Suda Bay. The chief products are wheat and fruit; and wool, soap, olive oil, carobs, vallonea, and cheese are the principal exports. The chief towns are Candia (pop. 22,331), Canea, the capital (pop. 20,972), and Retimo (pop. 9,308).

The island of Cuba lies between 74° and 85° W. long., and 19° and 23° N. lat., with a total area of about 44,000 sq. miles and a population of 2,028,282 (1907). Cuba suffered many years of internal discord, from its discovery by Columbus until its liberation in 1898, having been a Spanish possession until the Spanish-American War, of which it was the main bone of contention. A Cuban constituent convention met at the end of 1900 and agreed upon a Constitution (1901), which was ratified on certain conditions by the U.S.A. in 1902. In 1906 disturbances broke out and resulted in the renewed occupation by American troops and the establishment of a provisional administration, which ceased when President Gomez took over the administration in 1909.

The chief products of the island are tobacco and sugar; 1,899 miles of railway were open on June 30, 1908, and 5,065 miles of telegraph line. The imports from the United States for 1909 were £9,644,211, and the exports to the United States were £22,793,246.

CAPITAL, Havana (pop. about 297,000); other towns are Santiago (45,000), Matanzas (37,000), Cienfuegos (30,000), Cardenas (24,000), and Camaguey (29,000).

A Kingdom of Northern Europe, and the smallest of the Northern States, with a Constitution dated 28 July, 1866; consisting of the islands of Zeeland, Fünen, Lolland, &c., the peninsula of Jutland, and the outlying island of Bornholm in the Baltic. Denmark is situated between 54° 34′—57° 44′ N. lat. and 8° 5′—12° 40′ E. long.; its present contracted dimensions being the result of the Dano-German war of 1864, which stripped it of the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein and Lauenburg. It comprises an area of 14,844 square miles (9,375,403 acres), with a population in 1906 of 2,588,919 (174 per square mile), nearly one-half of whom live exclusively by agriculture, and one-fourth by manufactures and trade. The common products are wheat, rye, oats, barley, potatoes, cattle, horses, pigs, sheep, and butter. Its manufactures are, for the most part, for home consumption. Its principal imports are coals, manufactured goods (woollens, silks, cottons), iron, hardware, wine, fruit, tea, maize, and colonial produce. In 1908, 2,871,590 acres were under corn crops and 3,103,519 permanent pasture. In 1903 the livestock numbered 486,935 horses, 1,840,466 cows, 876,830 sheep, 1,456,699 swine, and 38,984 goats. The corn crops in 1908 amounted to 99,000,000 bushels, of which over one-third was oats. Its chief exports are agricultural produce, including wheat and barley, bacon, hams, flour, butter, eggs, hides, skins, corn-meal and oil-cake, horses, and cattle. There is a sea-going mercantile marine of 870 vessels, with a tonnage of 733,790. There are (1908) 2,090 miles of railway and 8,800 miles of telegraph line (1908).

Defence (for Army, see p. 667). The navy consists of 37 steam vessels (including 4 ironclads), mounting 227 guns, with 1,270 officers and men.

The Republic of Santo Domingo, formerly the Spanish portion of the island of that name, is the oldest settlement of European origin in America, having been founded in 1496 by Bartolomeo Columbus, who named it Hispaniola. It comprises an area of about 18,045 square miles, with an estimated population of nearly 600,000. Cocoa, is the most important crop, and sugar, coffee, and tobacco are grown in great quantities, the other products being mahogany, furniture woods, wax, honey, logwood, fustic, turtle-shell, hides, bananas, and divi-divi. Gold is found. There are about 120 miles of railway, and telegraphic and telephonic communication has been established throughout the Republic, which is connected by cable with North and South America. De Forest wireless telegraph installations have been erected at the capital and inland at Santiago de los Caballeros. The Customs are administered temporarily by officials appointed by the United States Government, under a Treaty by which the U.S. collects the Customs, assists the Government to maintain peace, and acts as intermediary between the Republic and its foreign creditors. Since April, 1905, 55 per cent. of the Revenues are being deposited in a New York Bank to the credit of the Foreign and Interior Debt.

British trade is hampered by the absence of direct maritime communication.

A State of South America, on its western side, being that portion of the original Republic of Colombia which lies on each side of the Equator, extending from lat. 1° 38′ N. to 6° 26′ S. (according to the Ecuadorian geography, but there are boundary disputes with Peru and Colombia), and between 70° and 81° W. long., comprising an area of 120,000 English sq. miles. It has a population of about 1,270,000, mostly descendants of the Spaniards, aboriginal Indians, and Mestizoes. The giant chain of the Andes here presents the Chimborazo, 21,525 feet, the Cotopaxi, 19,613 feet, the Antisana, 19,335 feet, Cayambe, 19,186 feet above the level of the sea, and others. Ecuador is watered by the Upper Amazon, and by the rivers Guayaquil, Mira, Santiago, Chones, and Esmeraldas on the Pacific coast. There are extensive forests, and the cinchona bark tree is common. Its chief products are cocoa, vegetable ivory, cotton, coffee, india-rubber, orchella weed, straw hats and hammocks, bark, yams, tobacco, fruits, sarsaparilla, wheat, &c. Its minerals consist of gold, quicksilver, lead, iron, and copper; emeralds and rubies are occasionally met with, and sulphur is found in many parts. The chief exports are—cocoa, caoutchouc, silver specie and gold, cinchona bark, Panama hats, coffee, and cattle. Ecuador is divided into 15 provinces and one territory. A railway connecting Guayaquil and Quito was opened in 1908. An arrangement was recently made with the bondholders for the conversion of the Debt, but the Dictator, in 1895, suspended payment pending a further and less onerous arrangement; meanwhile a 10 per cent. surtax upon import dues is being collected and deposited in a Guayaquil bank. Guayaquil is the chief port; population, 1908, about 60,000; other chief towns being Quito, 55,000; Cuenca, 25,000; and Riobamba, 12,000. The currency is a gold condor (of 10 sucres) value £1.

The GALAPAGOS ISLANDS (2,400 square miles) belong to Ecuador; only about 200 miles are susceptible of cultivation.

A country in the north-east corner of the Continent of Africa; was made part of the Turkish Empire in the latter part of the 12th century. Its history became interwoven with that of Europe when the army of Napoleon the Great entered into possession in 1801. British successes drove out the invaders, and in 1803 the newcomers also evacuated the country, which they endeavoured to restore to the control of the Sultan of Turkey; but after the abandonment by Great Britain a struggle arose between two Turkish parties, the Albanians and the Ghuzz, the former being completely victorious under their leader, Mehemet Ali, who, in 1811, in spite of the attempted intervention of Great Britain, obtained the supreme power and ruled the country, agreeing to pay an annual tribute to the Porte of £682,092. His successors were Ibrahim (1848), Abbas (1848–1854), Said (1854–1863), whose reign was marked by the Suez Canal concession, and Ismail (1863–1879), who by a firman of the Sultan (14 May, 1867) was granted the title of KHEDIV MISR, or Ruler of Egypt, the previous rulers having had the title of Vali, or Governor. In the early years of his reign the Egyptian dominions were very largely extended, until in 1875 its territories comprised an area of nearly 1,500,000 square miles, with a population of about 16,000,000. But on the heels of annexation and conquest followed misgovernment and financial embarrassment. At this point the Governments of France and Great Britain intervened, and forced Ismail to abdicate, appointing his son Mohamed Tewfik (1879–1892) to succeed him. By a decree of 10 Nov., 1879, a Controller-General was appointed by each Power. In 1882, however, their work of reform was interrupted by a military revolt, headed by an officer of the Egyptian army (Arabi Pasha), and, the French Government declining to co-operate, a British expedition was despatched to re-establish the authority of the Khedive. The Dual Control was abolished by a decree of the Khedive (18 Jan., 1883), and a British financial adviser appointed as a member of the Khedivial Government. Meanwhile a revolt had broken out in the southern provinces, headed by Sheikh Mohamed Ahmed of Dongola, who proclaimed himself a Mahdi, or prophet, foretold by the Moslems. General Gordon, the hero of the Chinese rebellion, was despatched to Khartoum (Jan., 1884) as Governor-General of the Soudan, but this step was not followed by immediate movements of troops against the rebels, and in 1885 General Gordon fell at the capture of Khartoum (26 Jan.) before the Nile relief expedition reached him.

In 1883 the Khedive created a Legislative Council of 30 members, and a General Assembly, consisting of the Legislative Council, the seven Ministers of State, and 46 members elected by the people. These bodies, however, were, and still are, mainly consultative, the real legislative power resting with the Khedive and his Ministers. The command of the army is made by Khedivial decree with the consent of the British Government.

In 1892 (7 Jan.), the Khedive Mohamed Tewfik died, and was succeeded by his elder son Abbas, the present ruler.

For the purposes of local government the country is divided into governorships and provinces, the latter being sub-divided into districts. Justice is administered by (1) Religious Courts; (2) the Mixed Tribunals established in 1875, to deal with questions arising between foreign inhabitants of different nationality and civil suits between natives and foreign subjects; (3) the Consular Courts, by which criminal charges against foreign subjects are investigated; and (4) the Native Tribunals containing Egyptian and foreign judges, dealing with criminal charges against natives, and with civil cases in which both plaintiff and defendant are local subjects. A British Judicial Adviser to the Khedive watches the proceedings of the latter

The population in 1882 was 6,814,000, including 90,886 European foreigners (37,301 Greeks, 18,665 Italians, 15,716 French, 8,022 Austrians, 6,118 English, &c.); and by the census of 1907, Egypt Proper contains 11,287,359 inhabitants, of whom 62,973 were Greeks, 34,926 Italians, 20,653 British subjects, 5,000 British army, 14,581 French subjects, 7,704 Austrians, 2,410 Russians, and 1,847 Germans.

The cultivated portion of Egypt is confined to the country annually inundated by the Nile, or capable of being irrigated by canals. The great irrigation works, to which Egypt may be said to owe its existence, are being further extended by elevating dams across the Nile at Assuan, Assiut, Zifta, and Esneh (inaugurated in 1902, and completed in 1909) for raising the water.

Education (see p. 668).

Agriculture and Industry.—Its products consist of cotton, millet, maize, wheat, rice, melons, gourds, sugar, hemp, &c. No metals have been worked within recent times in any considerable quantity, but recently prospecting has been undertaken in the ancient mining districts for gold, copper, lead, sulphur, emeralds, &c., and several mines are being opened up. Salt is plentiful, about 1,000,000 tons being extracted every year. Nitre, marble, red granite, Oriental alabaster, and limestone are found, in addition to indications of petroleum and coal. Most of the turquoises of the world come from the mines in the Sinai peninsula.

Trade.—The chief imports are cotton stuffs, coals, provisions, woollens, coffee, tobacco, indigo, hardware, timber, wine and spirits, and machinery. The exports consist mainly of cotton and cotton-seed (90 per cent.), beans, wheat, sugar, maize, rice, gums, hides, wool, barley, cigarettes, ivory, and ostrich-feathers. Of the entire trade over 42 per cent. is British, 9 per cent. being carried on with France, 8 per cent. with Turkey, and 6 per cent. with Germany and Austria.

Communications.—There is a network of railways in the Delta, the principal lines radiating from Cairo to Alexandria (and on to Rosetta), Damietta, and Ismailia (continuing northwards to Port Said and southwards to Suez). From Cairo the line runs southwards for a distance of 554 miles to Shellal—the First Cataract. At this point a steamer connection runs to Wadi Halfa, connecting the Egyptian State system with the Sudan Government Railways. The total length of the Egyptian State Railways on 31 Dec., 1909, was 1,465 miles. 25,306,178 passengers and 3,657,227 tons of merchandise were carried during 1909, the net receipts being £E1,283,389. The gauge is standard (4 ft. 8½ in.), with the exception of 138 miles between Luxor and Chellal, which are 3 ft. 6 in. gauge. There are two other State-owned lines in Egypt, namely, the Auxiliary Railways of Upper Egypt, consisting of 318 miles of standard gauge, and the Western Oases Railway, a length of 120 miles (75 centimetre gauge), connecting the Oases of Kharga with the Nile Valley. In addition to the Government lines, there are 788 miles of light railways exploited by public companies. There were on 31 Dec., 1909, 2,893 miles of telegraphs, with 12,952 miles of wire, over which 2,391,866 messages were transmitted during 1909. The total telephone mileage in Egypt is 52,242. The net postal revenue was £E49,971 in 1909.

Defence.—The British army of occupation numbers about 5,000 men. The Egyptian force number 17,507.

Finance.—The situation of the Debt on 31 July, 1909 and 1910, was as follows:—

		1909.	1910.
Guaranteed debt,	3%	£7,552,900	£7,462,400

		£95,315,780	£95,030,180

By the agreement (8 April, 1904) between Great Britain and France, to which all the Powers subsequently adhered, the restrictions which since 1876, have hampered the liberty of the Egyptian Government in financial matters were abolished. Though the Caisse de la Dette still exists, its duties are limited to receiving the revenues necessary for the interest and to the payment of the coupons.

Detailed accounts of the various administrative and financial reforms which have been carried out since 1882, and have entirely changed the state of the country, may be found in the annual reports addressed to the Foreign Office.

The Suez Canal.

The Suez Canal was opened in 1869, the British Government acquiring by purchase (25 Nov., 1875) shares to the amount of £4,000,000 (the value 31 March, 1909, being about £32,660,000). The total length of the canal is 99 miles, with a width of 37 metres (121ft. 5in.), having cost £24,000,000 to construct and enlarge; the maximum draught of water allowed for vessels using the canal is 8·33 metres (28 feet). By a convention, signed on 29 Oct., 1888, the canal was exempted from blockade, and vessels of all nations, whether armed or not, are to be allowed to pass through it in peace or war. The management of the canal is entrusted to a council of 32 administrators, of whom 10 are British (three representing H.M. Government and seven the shipowning interest). The British directors are Sir Henry Austin Lee, K.C.M.G., C.B., Henry Torrens Anstruther, and Sir W. E. Garstin, G.C.M.G., representing the Government; and R. Alexander, R. S. Donkin, F. Green, Sir J. L. Mackay, G.C.M.G., Lord Rathmore, J. W. Hughes, and Sir Thomas Sutherland, G.C.M.G., representing the shipping interest.

The transit receipts in 1869 were £2,178; in 1870, £206,273; in 1895, £3,124,148; in 1900, £3,624,944; in 1905, £4,554,672; in 1906, £4,326,476; in 1907, £4,640,000; in 1908, £4,338,000; and in 1909, £4,825,707.

The present rate of transit dues is 7fr. 25c. per ton, and 4fr. 75c. for vessels in ballast.

The net dividends for the year 1909 amounted to 150fr., on the ordinary 500fr. shares, and 125fr. on the Actions de Jouissance.

The following table shows the number and tonnage of vessels which have passed through the Suez Canal at certain dates since 1869, with the percentage of British vessels.

The Sudan Provinces, with the exception of the Lado Enclave which had been leased to King Leopold of Belgium for the tenure of his life, were recovered by Anglo-Egyptian expeditions, 1896–1899, and their extent is defined in a convention signed, on 19 Jan., 1899, by Viscount (now Earl of) Cromer and the Egyptian Minister for Foreign Affairs, laying down the principles of administration. Owing to the death of H.M. The King of the Belgians, the lease of the latter district has lapsed, and the territory in question has now reverted to the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The territories affected are all those lying south of the 22nd parallel of latitude, which have never been evacuated by Egyptian troops since 1882, and those which, if evacuated and temporarily lost, have since been, or shall henceforth be, reconquered by the two Governments acting in concert. The Government is to be administered by a Governor-General in supreme civil and military command, appointed and removable by Khedivial decree with the consent of the British Government. In 1910 a Governor-General's Council was created to assist the Governor-General in the discharge of his executive and legislative powers. All ordinances, laws and regulations are now made by the Governor-General in Council, with the consent of the Governments, and the territories do not fall under the jurisdiction of the Mixed Tribunals. The British and Egyptian flags together are used in the Sudan.

The seat of Government is Khartoum, where a palace for the Governor-General and Government offices and barracks have been built. The town has been lighted throughout by electricity and is provided with an efficient water supply, independent of the river. On 5 Jan., 1899, the foundation stone was laid of the Gordon Memorial College, for the establishment of which Viscount Kitchener obtained the necessary funds by public subscription. The College was formally opened by Visct. Kitchener on 8 Nov., 1902, and in 1906 the number of students amounted to about 500, the majority of whom pay small annual fees. There are also primary schools, where English is taught, at Omdurman (300 pupils in 1906), Halfa and Suakin, and small schools at Berber, Dongola, Wad Medani, Kassala, &c., also two industrial schools at Kassala and Wad Medani, and training colleges at Khartoum for teachers in English and the vernacular. One of the largest and finest of modern mosques has been built at Khartoum, as that city will be the centre of Mohammedan religion in the Egyptian Sudan. Two good hotels have been built at Khartoum, and wagons-lits run on the Sudan Railway. Tourists can now perform the journey from Cairo to Khartoum vid Shellal and Halfa in 93 hours in trains and steamers replete with every comfort. An alternative service has also been established vid Suez and Port Sudan (Red Sea) by which passengers could travel between Cairo and Khartoum in 98 hours; and tourist steamers also run from Khartoum to Gondokoro (Uganda) vid Kodok and the unique "sudd" region. The territories are divided into 13 provinces. The Sudan Railway reached Khartoum in 1899; a line from Atbara to the Red Sea at Port Sudan and Suakin, and a branch to the Halfa Khartoum line from Abu Hamed to Kareima to tap the Dongola Province were opened in 1906. A bridge has been constructed over the Blue Nile at Khartoum, and the railway extended to Sennar whence it will run to El Obeid, the chief town of Kordofan Province, crossing the White Nile by another bridge near Hillet Abbas, which is now in the course of construction. South of Khartoum communication is established by steamers and boats on the Blue and White Niles, Sobat and Bahr-el-Ghazal and inland chiefly by camels and donkeys. Kassala, Gallabat (on Abyssinian frontier), Roseires, Tanfikia (50 miles south of Kodok), El Obeid and Nahud (on the Darfur border) are in telegraphic communication with Khartoum, also Bahr-el-Ghazal Province, Mongalla Province and Gondokoro (Uganda) close to the Sudan-Uganda boundary. The cost of military operations in the Sudan in the years 1883–6 amounted to £7,091,310, and on the expedition by which these territories were recovered the sum of £789,802 only was expended, excluding the sum of £251,000 provided in 1897 by the Egyptian Government. The territories are not expected to provide an income equivalent to their cost for some time; long periods of want, famine, and disease have caused great ravages amongst the population, and some years must elapse before a substantial revenue may be expected, the cost of administration being meanwhile partly borne by the Egyptian Government. The population of the territories at the present time is roughly estimated at 2,500,000.

CAPITAL, Khartoum. Population 18,235, consisting of merchants, workmen, &c., and the garrison; the population of Omdurman, with the garrison, is about 42,780, and Khartoum North and suburbs 35,285, making a total 96,300. Distance from London vid Cairo, 4,1 miles.

The most westerly State of Central Europe, extending from 42° 20′ to 51° 5′ N. lat., and from 7° 45′ E. to 4° 45′ W. long., bounded on the north by the Channel and Straits of Dover, which separate it from England. Its circumference is estimated at about 3,000 miles, and its present area at 207,218 square miles. The territory lost in 1871 amounted to 5,602 square miles. France is divided into 87 departments, including the island of Corsica, in the Mediterranean, off the west coast of Italy. The head of the Government is the President, elected septennially. The principal rivers are the Seine, Loire, Garonne, and Rhône; the principal forests Ardennes, Compiègne, Fontainebleau, and Orléans, consisting chiefly of oak, birch, pine, beech, elm, chestnut, and the cork-tree in the south. Fruit trees abound, and are very productive, the principal being the olive, chestnut, walnut, almond, apple, pear, citron, fig, plum, &c. The vine is cultivated to a very great extent (1,197,808,920 gallons of wine were produced in 1909), as the names Bordeaux, Burgundy, Champagne, &c., universally testify; cider-making is also an important industry, and the production in 1909 amounted to 174,420,620 gallons. The chief agricultural products are wheat, barley, rye, maize, oats, potatoes, beetroot, for the manufacture of sugar, hops, &c. Its mineral resources are comparatively small. They include, however, coal (1909, 37,253,205 metric tons), pig iron (3,632,105 metric tons), copper, lead, silver, antimony, and salt. The most important manufactures are of metals, watches, jewellery, cabinet-work, carving, pottery, glass, chemicals, dyeing, paper-making, woollens, carpets, linen, silk, and lace. The culture of oysters is an important industrial feature, and in the year 1905 952,121,735 oysters were produced, representing a value of £635,540. The increase of population is very slow, as will be seen from the following table:—

Year.	Population.	Year.	Population.
1700	19,660,320	1872	36,102,921
1801	27,349,003	1881	37,672,048
1821	30,461,873	1886	38,218,903
1831	32,569,233	1891	38,343,192
1841	34,230,178	1896	38,517,975
1856	36,039,364	1901	38,961,945
1866	38,067,064	1906	39,252,245

The movement of the population is practically stationary, as will be seen from the following table:—

	Births.	Deaths.		Births.	Deaths.
1894	855,388	815,620	1902	805,378	761,434
1895	834,173	851,986	1903	826,712	753,606
1896	865,586	771,886	1904	818,249	761,203
1897	859,107	752,019	1905	807,292	770,171
1898	843,933	810,073	1906	806,897	760,196
1899	847,627	816,233	1907	773,969	793,869
1900	827,297	853,285	1908	791,712	745,271
1901	857,274	784,876	1909	769,969	756,545

France has always been attractive to foreigners, of whom (1906) 1,009,415 were resident there, or 2·51 per cent. of the legal population; this number included 330,465 Italians, 323,390 Belgians, 89,772 Germans, 36,948 English, 13,236 of the latter residing in the Department of the Seine. 20 per cent. of the foreign population was born in France. In 1906, the total population of the French colonies (exclusive of Algeria and Tunis) amounted to 39,093,391 souls, of which 630,637 were French and 18,543 foreigners. About 26,000 Frenchmen are stated to be resident in England.

Defence (for Army, see p. 666).

The Navy consisted in 1909 of 26 battleships (and 6 building), 7 armoured coast defence vessels, 20 armoured cruisers (and 2 building), 28 protected cruisers, 1 unprotected cruiser, 13 torpedo vessels, 4 gunboats, 7 river gunboats, 56 destroyers (also 16 building and 5 ordered), 269 torpedo boats, 49 submarine boats (and 21 building, 34 ordered), with 2,879 officers and 53,906 men.

Education (see pp. 668–9).

Communications.—The system of railways in France is very extensive; they are almost entirely concédés, and become State property after the expiration of the concession. The length of lines of general interest, inclusive of local lines, open for traffic on 31 December, 1907, was 25,100 miles, the total receipts from passenger and goods traffic, &c., being £67,136,799. The length of telegraph wires is 85,700 miles. At the 1st of January, 1909, the mercantile marine, comprising boats of 2 tons and upwards, amounted to 17,376 vessels of 1,452,495 net tons (of which 15,768 were sailing ships, representing 648,211 net tons). The sums voted by Parliament for construction and navigation Bounties to Shipping in 1910 amounted to £1,548,000, and £1,102,523 for Postal Service Subventions.

Commerce.—The principal imports in 1909 were wool, cotton, coal, silk, oleaginous fruits and seeds, machinery, raw skins, cereals, timber, caoutchouc, copper, petroleum oils, coffee, and wines. The principal exports were cotton tissues, silk tissues, wool, woollen tissues, wines, smallwares, automobiles, &c., silks, raw skins, millinery and artificial flowers, dressed skins, tools and metal goods, machinery, pig iron, butter, table fruits, refined sugar, brandy and liqueurs, fish, and cheese.

Algeria.—The three departments of Algeria—Algiers, Oran, and Constantine—form an integral part of France, under a Governor-General assisted by a Consultative Council. These departments lie between 4° 36′ W. to 6° 16′ E. longitude and 37° 6′ N. to an undetermined S. limit, about 30° N., covering an area estimated in 1906 at about 1,119,416 square miles, with a population of 5,231,850, of whom 729,960 were Europeans and 4,501,890 natives. The revenue in 1908 was estimated at £4,343,688, and the expenditure at £4,339,533 ; the imports from foreign countries in 1909 were valued at £2,596,290, and the exports at £3,587,500. The bulk of the trade is with France, the imports into France amounting to £8,828,000, and the exports from France to £15,884,000 ; the trade with the U.K. in 1909 amounted in exports to £658,084, and in imports to £557,536. The exports consist mainly of wine, wheat and other cereals, sheep and oxen, skins, fruits, zinc and iron ores, olive oil, phosphates, cork wood, esparto grass, manufactured tobacco, and vegetables. The principal imports from the U.K. were coal and patent fuel, machinery, cotton oil, cotton tissues, tin plates, clothing, and prepared skins. Iron, copper, quicksilver, zinc, and lead mines are being worked. In 1908 there were about 2,013 miles of railway open for traffic ; and in 1908 the number of ships engaged in foreign trade entering and clearing Algerian ports was 4,844, of a net tonnage of 5,461,846 tons, of which the percentage of British vessels was fully 21 per cent. The principal town is Algiers, the capital (population, 1906, 586,062), a most important coaling station and much frequented as a health resort ; other large towns are Oran, Constantine, Bône and Tlemçen.

French Colonies and Dependencies.

The total area of French Colonies and Dependencies (excluding Algeria, 1,119,416 sq. m., and Tunis, 46,300 sq. m.) was estimated at about 2,807,776 square miles in 1906, with a total population of 39,093,391.

Geographically, the French Colonies are divisible into four main groups, according to their situation in Asia, Africa, America, Oceania.

I. Asiatic: French India.—The area of the French possessions in India is 200 square miles; pop. (1908), 273,185. Pondicherry (area 115 sq. miles, pop. 1908, 174,456), the chief of these dependencies, is on the Coromandel coast, 85 miles S. by W. from Madras. The town of Pondicherry has 46,887 inhabitants. The fortifications were once strong, but in the war with England they were destroyed, and under the Treaty of Paris (1814) they must not be rebuilt, while the French garrison must be only sufficient for police purposes. Rice and pulse are cultivated. The chief industry is cotton spinning. There are four cotton-mills, employing about 5,000 hands. In 1908 the sea-borne imports into French India were valued at £396,000, and the exports at £1,082,000. The chief exports are ground nuts, cotton goods, and oilcakes, the chief imports raw cotton, cotton goods, seeds, and pulse. There is no harbour, though the roadstead is good. The minor settlements are Chandernagore, on the Hooghly, 17 miles north of Calcutta (area 4 sq. ms., pop. 26,831); Karikal, in the Cauvery delta (area 53 sq. ms., pop. 56,595); Yanaon, in the Godavery delta (area 5 sq. ms., pop. 5,005); and Mahé, on the Malabar coast (area 26 sq. ms., pop. 10,298). There are 23 miles of railway, connecting Pondicherry and Karikal with the South Indian Railway. French India has an elective general council. The revenue (budget of 1909) amounts to £106,400, of which £10,000 is contributed by the Home Government. Governor, M. Martineau.

French Indo-China has an area of about 310,000 square miles and a population estimated at 16,500,000 (including 15,000 French). Three-fourths are of the Annamite race. On the north and east the country marches with China. The river Mekong forms the western boundary. The coast-line on the south is about 1,560 miles long. French Indo-China comprises the possession of Cochin-China, and the four protectorates of Cambodia (enlarged in 1907 by the annexation of Siamese territory), Annam, Tonkin, and Laos. In 1898–9 Kwang-Chow-Wan (pop. 190,000), a free port on the Lien-Chow peninsula, was acquired on a lease of 99 years from China. French Indo-China has been rapidly developed since 1893 by the construction of public works, by the influx of capital and enterprise, and by the reorganisation of the finances. The financial and political unity of Indo-China was finally established in 1898. These reforms were chiefly the work of the late Governor-General, M. Paul Doumer. The revenue (general budget), about 47½ million piastres in 1909, is derived mainly from customs, excise, and other indirect taxes. The delta regions of Cochin-China and Tonkin are fertile. Annam, connecting them, is a long mountainous tract, with a narrow littoral, habitable and cultivable, on one side, and a wild, sparsely populated hill-tract stretching to the Mekong on the other. Laos, the largest of the five territories, is very undeveloped and lacks population. It is practically inaccessible except by this river. The chief rivers are the Mekong (1,900 miles long), which, notwithstanding obstructions, has been navigated as far as Chinese territory; the Songkoi or Red River, navigable by small steamers as far as Laokai in Yunnan; and the Black River. Rice is by far the most important crop, while maize, silk, cotton, sugar, poppy, tea, seeds, tobacco and pepper are produced. The principal mineral product is coal, which is mined chiefly at Hongay on the Tonkin coast. Zinc is worked and exported. Laos has large forests. There are mills for rice, cotton yarn, cement, &c. The principal harbours are Saigon, Haiphong in Tonkin (48 hours by mail steamer from Hong Kong), and Tourane in Annam. The length of railways is nearly 900 miles, including lines from Haiphong to Hanoi, and thence to the border of Kwangsi, China, and to Laokai on the Yunnan frontier. The extension of the latter to Yunnan-fu (about 290 miles) by a subsidised company was opened in April, 1910. The foreign trade in merchandise in 1909 was valued at—Imports, £9,990,000; and Exports, £10,920,000. About £1,252,000 is transit trade passing to and from the Yunnan treaty "port" of Mengtz through Tonkin. By far the largest export from French Indo-China is rice (chiefly from Cochin-China), fish, maize, and pepper coming next. The chief imports are cotton manufactures and yarns, metal manufactures, jute bags, liquors, machinery, petroleum, silk goods, paper, tin, opium, &c. The yarns and jute bags are mainly from India. Saigon, in Cochin China, has the largest trade, Haiphong, in Tonkin, coming second. The French customs tariff is in force, with some exceptions. The great bulk of the trade is with France, Hong-Kong, and India. The shipping is chiefly British, French, and German. The French army of occupation numbers about 13,000, in addition to 13,000 native troops. There is a French Bank of Indo-China. Exports from the United Kingdom in 1909, £98,094; Imports into ditto, £269,486. CAPITAL, Hanoi, in Tonkin. Pop., 100,000. Gov.-Gen. of Indo-China—M. Klobukowski. Sec.-Gen.—M. Broni. Capital of Cochin-China, Saigon. Pop. 20,000. Lieut.-Gov. of Cochin-China—M. Rodier. Capital of Cambodia, Pnom Penh. Pop. 40,000. King—H.M. Sisowath. Capital of Annam, Hué. Pop. 30,000. King (Annam and Tonkin)—H.M. Duy-Tan, a minor (suc. in 1907). Capital of Laos, Luang Prabang.

II. African: The French African Empire consists of the colony of Algeria and the protectorate of Tunis in the north; in the north-west of an immense tract of country, in four main divisions, on the coast-line (Senegal, French Guinea, Ivory Coast, and Dahomey), penetrating inwards to meet the French possessions of Upper Senegal-Niger and Territory of Mauritania, which form a hinterland for all the colonies on the coast. In West Central Africa the colony now known as French Equatorial Africa joins, through protected territory, the French possessions which form the common hinterland of the north-western possessions. This common hinterland stretches northwards in the direction of Algeria and Tunis, so that the whole north-western portion of the vast continent, except where occupied by Morocco and Tripoli, and Spanish, Portuguese, British, and German possessions, is claimed by France. In the east France possesses a portion of Somaliland and the island of Madagascar in the Indian Ocean, with certain dependencies. Conventions have been signed by Great Britain and France delimitating the boundaries of co-terminous territories in the west, and, owing to the British advance in the Nile region, delimitating their respective spheres in East and Central Africa.

On the East Coast is JIBUTI, the port and seat of government of the French Somali coast protectorate. The coast-line of this territory extends for 60 miles; the inland frontier is fixed at a distance of about 57 miles. The total area is about 46,300 square miles. The population in 1906 was estimated at 208,061. A railway from Jibuti to Harrar and thence to Adis Ababa, the present capital of Abyssinia, is being constructed, and has been completed as far as Diré-Daouah (191 miles). At Jibuti a jetty, 800 metres in length, has been erected and is used principally by small craft, and a second one of 900 metres in length is being constructed for the requirements of large vessels. The imports, which are principally in transit to Abyssinia (chiefly cotton goods) amounted to £734,224 in 1907, while the exports amounted to £923,640; the imports from France in 1907 amounting to £179,700, and the exports to France £52,980. There is an Anglo-French agreement defining the boundary of the French and English spheres of influence in the direction of Harrar, which place neither party is at liberty to annex.

Governor—M. Pascal; Envoy to the Emperor Menelik of Ethiopia, M. Brice.

Off the East coast, in the Indian Ocean, is the vast island of MADAGASCAR, the fourth largest island in the world, being 975 miles long and 350 miles broad at its greatest width. The total area is about 226,000 square miles, and the native population in 1906 amounted to 2,690,381, the Hova being the dominant tribe. In addition, there were 7,606 French and 2,088 foreigners, 1,255 being British subjects. Christian missions have been active in the island, and about 450,000 of the natives are Protestants, and about 50,000 Roman Catholics. A French colonial station was planted, under the protection of Richelieu, in 1662, since when the island has been almost continuously claimed by the French. Active steps were taken in 1885 to make their influence felt, and in 1894–1895 a military expedition captured the capital and deposed the queen, the island being declared a French possession in 1896. A railway, of a length of about 170 miles, from Brickaville on the coast to the capital (Antananarivo or Tananarive), has been constructed, and was open to traffic on the 1st October, 1909.

In 1900 a loan of £2,400,000 was raised for the construction of railways, roads, telegraphs, &c. Fully 3,000 miles of telegraph lines have been constructed as well as two new telephone lines, one at Antananarivo of 27 miles, and the other at Tamatave of 10 miles. Gold reefs have been found in different parts of the island, and up to the end of 1904 there were 1,099 prospecting permits held by 317 different persons, 64 of which are British. Minerals are found in large quantities, and in the lowlands rice, manioc, arrowroot, sugar-cane, tobacco, hemp, cotton, vanilla, tea and coffee are successfully grown; caoutchouc and gum-copal are indigenous, and there is a wealth of timber. The revenue of the colony in 1904 amounted to £994,612, and the expenditure to £897,357. The principal exports in 1907 (£1,114,536) were gold (3,319 kilos, of the value of £319,280), rubber, hides, rafia-fibre, beeswax, bullocks, and straw hats; the imports, largely reduced since the high protective tariff of 1897, are mainly cotton goods, wine, spirits, metal manufactures, food-stuffs, and building material, and amounted to £1,001,184. The total import and export trade with France in 1908 amounted to £1,176,000, and with the United Kingdom £159,066. The capital, Tananarive (called by the natives Antananarivo), had in 1901 55,579 inhabitants. Tamatave is the chief port, others being Majunga, Tolia, Faradofay, Mananjura, Mahanoro, and Vatomandry. Madagascar has immediate dependencies in the islands of NOSSI BÉ and SAINTE MARIE, while further east (450 miles from Madagascar) is the island of REUNION (capital St. Denis, population of about 30,000), with an area of 965 square miles, population estimated in 1906 at 177,677; imports in 1907, £579,636; exports, £559,072; with the COMORO Islands, halfway between Madagascar and the coast, and the islands of ST. PAUL and AMSTERDAM and KERGUELEN to the south-east.

Gov.-Gen. of Madagascar, M. Picquié.

West Africa.—The administration of the French possessions in North-West and Central Africa has been in process of reorganisation since 1895. By a Decree of 18 October, 1904, the administration of the French West African colonies was reorganised and placed under a governor-general, resident at Dakar. The territories of Senegambia and the Niger have been converted into a separate colony under the name of Upper Senegal-Niger. A commissioner attached to the general government has been appointed for the administration of the civil territory of Mauritania, or vast regions on the right bank of the Senegal River; and by a Presidential Decree of the 15th January, 1910, the possessions known as the French Congo and dependencies have been grouped into a new colony called French Equatorial Africa, with the seat of the general government at Brazzaville. A general budget for the possessions in the North-West has been created, to be settled by the governor-general in council, to which are devoted the funds derived from the customs and navigation duties of all the constituent colonies, and which provides for all expenses which interest all the colonies generally. The several colonies, therefore, can only reckon on the funds arising from their internal resources, such as capitation tax, trading licences, &c., but they are at the same time relieved of many expenses which have been transferred to the general budget. Provision is also made in the general budget for subventions to those of the colonies requiring financial help. The income of general budget of the West African colonies in 1908 amounted to £2,601,528 and the expenditure to £2,475,508. The colony of UPPER SENEGAL NIGER may be said to comprise the whole of the hinterland of West Africa, and includes the great bend of the Niger and the territories enclosed within it, but it has no sea-port. It is divided into a civil and a military territory, and is administered by a lieutenant-governor, resident at Bammako, under whom is a superior officer entrusted with the administration of the Niger military territory. In 1908 the exports amounted to £19,544, consisting chiefly of rubber, gum, gold, cotton, and ivory. The imports consisted of cotton tissues, iron-ware, tissues, and clothing, and amounted to £92,268. Local revenue, £271,476. The total population in 1906 amounted to 5,058,656, and the area of the civil and military territories is estimated at 836,281 square miles. SENEGAL is the oldest and most important of the French possessions in West Africa. It is situated to the north of the British colony of the Gambia, and has an area of 73,974 square miles and a population estimated at 393,945; capital, St. Louis. The principal exports are ground-nuts, rubber, and gums, and the total exports in 1908 were valued at £1,818,960, and the imports at £2,683,785; 646 ships (tonnage 1,015,564) entered, and 609 of a tonnage of 848,790 tons cleared at Senegalese ports in 1908. A railway has been constructed from Dakar to Rufisque, and thence north-west to St. Louis at the mouth of the Senegal River, a distance of 165 miles, and from Kayes, on the same river, a narrow-gauge line has been constructed of 358 miles to Koulikoro, on the Niger. The cost of the construction of the Kayes-Niger railway amounted to £1,982,800, or an average of £3,460 per kilometre. Next in order to the south comes FRENCH GUINEA (local revenue in 1908, £264,408; imports, 1907, £653,768, exports £639,588), comprising the settlements of RIVIÈRES DU SUD (capital, Konakri) and FUTA JALLON, and extending up the whole of the north-west coast (save where intercepted by Portuguese Guinea and the British colony of the Gambia) to join the colony of Senegal. Between the British colony of the Gold Coast and the Republic of Liberia is the FRENCH IVORY COAST (local revenue in 1908, £92,848; imports, 1908, £568,928, exports £433,164), comprising the settlements of GRAND BASSAM and ASSINIE and the KROO country with the hinterland. To the south is DAHOMEY, between the British colony of Lagos and German Togoland (local revenue in 1908, £131,580; imports, 1908, £429,492, exports £487,180); it consists of about 95 miles of the Benin coast, where are the settlements of KOTONOU and GRAND POPO with the hinterland. The ancient capital of the colony is Abomey, which has now been transferred to Porto Novo. The chief port is Kotonou. The recently reorganised colony of FRENCH EQUATORIAL AFRICA borders the Congo Free State on the south and east, and the German Cameroons on the north and west, but undefined to the north-east, comprises the colony of the Gaboon, the middle Congo, the territory of Ubangui-Shari, and the Lake Chad military territory (local revenue in 1904, £255,620). The principal exports are ivory, india-rubber, cocoa, coffee, ebony and other wood, gum-copal, palm oil, and amounted in 1907 to £783,768. The imports, consisting chiefly of cotton goods, spirits, ammunition, tobacco, rice, and salt, were valued at £606,464; the chief town and trading station being Libreville, on the coast.

III. American: France possesses two small groups of islands off the south-east coast of Newfoundland, of which ST. PIERRE and MIQUELON are the largest respectively; their combined area is about 93 square miles, with a total population in 1907 of 4,768, and they form an excellent basis for the French cod fishery. Local revenue in 1908, £19,112; importations in 1908, £209,700; exports, £263,750. In the West Indies two of the most fertile of the Lesser Antilles belong to France, viz., MARTINIQUE (capital Port de France), area about 380 square miles; population in 1906 of 182,024; (local revenue in 1908, £199,376; total imports, 1909, £646,430, exports £884,470); and GUADALOUPE and BASSE TERRE (capital Pointe-à-Pitre), area about 780 square miles, population 190,273 in 1906 (local revenue in 1904, £242,022; total imports, 1908, £603,100, exports £694,420). They have six dependencies: MARIE GALANTE and ILE DES SAINTES to the south and south-east, and PETITE TERRE on the east (part of the administrative island), with ST. BARTHOLOMEW and the northern half of ST. MARTIN, about 150 miles north-west and almost due south of Anguilla (British). In South America, CAYENNE or FRENCH GUIANA has an area of about 34,000 square miles, and an estimated population of about 39,117 in 1906 (town population 12,426). The local revenue of the colony in 1904 amounted to £137,216 (imports, 1908, £486,780, exports £514,100).

IV. In Oceania: France possesses the penal colony of NEW CALEDONIA (capital Noumea), a large island containing an area of about 7,200 square miles (population, 1906, estimated at 55,886, of whom about 13,000 are of free and 11,000 of convict origin, whilst there is a native population of about 29,000), with its dependencies, Isle of Pines, Loyalty Islands, Huon Islands, Chesterfield Islands, and the Wallis Archipelago, annexed in 1853 (local revenue in 1904, £129,102; total imports into New Caledonia, 1908, £372,300, exports £404,450); and the SOCIETY ISLANDS, Tahiti, Moorea, &c. (local revenue in 1904, £77,257; imports into Tahiti, 1908, £154,700, exports £125,800), the LOW ARCHIPELAGO or Paumotu, the MARQUESAS, and the AUSTRAL ISLES or Tubuai, and the GAMBIER ISLANDS, altogether amounting to about 1,182 square miles, with about 30,563 inhabitants in 1906. By a convention with Great Britain of 16 Nov., 1887, it was agreed that the protection of persons and property in the NEW HEBRIDES (5,106 square miles, population 70,000) should be secured by means of a mixed commission of naval officers belonging to the French and British naval stations in the Pacific. This arrangement has, however, been superseded by the conclusion of a convention signed on 20 Oct., 1906, by which the group of the New Hebrides, including the Banks and Torres Islands, shall form a region of joint influence under the administration of two High Commissioners appointed by Great Britain and France.

The Empire, according to the Constitution of April 16, 1871, is a Confederate League, bearing the name German Empire, under the hereditary presidentship of the King of Prussia, who holds the title of German Emperor, and whose eldest son is styled His Imperial and Royal Highness. The Emperor as such represents the Empire in all matters affecting international law; in the name of the Empire he declares war and makes peace, concludes alliances and treaties with foreign States, and accredits and receives Ambassadors. Except to repel an attack on the territory or the coasts of the League, the Emperor cannot declare war in the name of the Empire without the consent of the Federal Council. The consent of the Federal Council and Reichstag is necessary in regard to certain specified treaties (cf. Art. 4 of the Constitution). The Emperor has the right to summon, open, adjourn, and close the Reichstag. The Federal Council and Reichstag must be summoned to meet every year; the Reichstag cannot be summoned without the adherence of the Federal Council. All bills are brought before the Reichstag in the name of the Emperor after acceptance by the Federal Council. Laws are promulgated by the Emperor in the name of the German Empire after acceptance by the Federal Council and the Reichstag. All edicts and orders of the Emperor made in the name of the Empire must be countersigned by the Chancellor, who is thereby responsible for them. The Emperor is the Bundesfeldherr, or Federal Commander-in-Chief of the whole German Army. In time of war he holds supreme command: in time of peace the Kings of Bavaria, Saxony, and Württemberg retain their sovereign rights as heads of their respective armies. In time of peace the Bavarian army administration is wholly independent of that of the rest of the German army, and only falls under the direct command of the Emperor when the army is mobilised for war. The rights of the Kings of Saxony and Württemberg in time of peace are not quite so extended as those of the King of Bavaria; but their armies remain distinct and form separate army corps. The contingents of all the other Federal States are under the direct command of the King of Prussia, and under Prussian administration. The troops of all the Federal States swear loyalty to their respective sovereigns and obedience to the orders of the Emperor—in the case of Bavaria this obedience is limited to war-time. On the other hand, the German Navy is Imperial (Kaiserlich), and the Emperor as such is the supreme Admiral-in-Command of the Imperial German Navy in peace as well as war. The Reichstag, or Imperial Diet, consists of 397 Deputies; the original idea was that there should be one deputy to every 100,000 inhabitants of the Empire. The Reichstag sits for a period of five years, unless previously dissolved by the Emperor. Amongst the matters belonging to the jurisdiction of the Empire are all those that refer to the army and navy; the common, civil and penal law of the Empire; posts and telegraphs (excluding Bavaria); the railways (subject to Bavaria's rights); inland navigation; the Customs of the Empire; weights and measures; coinage; banking; patents; foreign trade; the German mercantile marine; the Press; everything relating to the right of forming corporations; colonisation. A majority of the Federal Council and Reichstag is necessary, and also sufficient, for the validity of a law. The laws of the Empire take precedence of the laws of the Confederate States within the scope of the Constitution of the Empire; they are compulsory on all Governments of the Empire.

The German Empire consists of the following 26 States:—Prussia (including Lauenburg, and—since 1890—Heligoland); Bavaria; Saxony; Württemberg; Baden; Hesse; Mecklenburg-Schwerin; Saxe-Weimar; Mecklenburg-Strelitz; Oldenburg; Brunswick; Saxe-Meiningen; Saxe-Altenburg; Saxe-Coburg-Gotha; Anhalt; Schwarzburg-Sondershausen; Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt; Waldeck; Reuss (elder line); Reuss (younger line); Schaumburg-Lippe; Lippe-Detmold; Reichsland; Lübeck; Bremen; Hamburg.

The census of 1905 shows a total population of 60,641,278, of whom 29,884,681 are males, and 30,756,597 females.

The religious confessions were divided in 1905 as follows:—37,646,852 Protestants (62 per cent.), 22,109,644 Roman Catholics (36·4 per cent.), 259,717 Christians of other categories, 607,862 Jews (1 per cent.), 17,203 adherents of other religions, or unknown.

There were in 1900 4,231,129 persons residing within the limits of the Empire who spoke a non-German language, viz.:—80,361 Dutch, 20,677 Frisians, 141,061 Danish (and Norwegians), 8,998 Swedish, 20,217 English, 211,679 French, 11,841 Walloons, 65,961 Italians, 2,059 Spanish, 479 Portuguese, 3,086,489 Poles, 142,049 Massurians, 100,213 Kassubians, 93,032 Wends, 64,382 Moravians, 43,016 Czechs, 9,617 Russians, 106,305 Lithuanians, 8,158 Hungarians, 14,535 not above specified.

There are 42 large towns with over 100,000 inhabitants, and of these 29 are in Prussia, 4 in Saxony, 2 in Bavaria and Baden, and 1 each in Hamburg, Württemberg, Bremen, Reichsland, and Brunswick.

EMIGRATION.—At the commencement of the nineteenth century few Germans emigrated, but about fifty years afterwards there was a strong desire to leave the mother country. The figures are as follows:—

1831–41	...	152,000	1871–80	...	623,000
1841–50	...	435,000	1881–90	...	1,342,432

1861–70	...	822,000	1901–05	...	146,540

Out of thirty millions of emigrants from Europe in the nineteenth century Germany contributed about five millions—viz., $\frac{1}{6}$ of the whole number.

In the eighties the average number per annum was over 100,000. In 1880 the number of emigrants was 117,097; in 1881 it rose to 220,902—the highest figure hitherto attained in one year. The statistics since 1880 are as follows:—

1881	...	220,902	1896	...	33,824

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.—Germany is becoming more and more a manufacturing country. In 1907, 32·6 per cent. of the population were supported by agriculture, 37 per cent. by industry and mining, 11·5 per cent. by trade and traffic. Of the total area in 1900, 48·6 per cent. was under cultivation, 16 per cent. consisted of meadows and pastures, and 26 per cent. of forest land. Germany supports about nine-tenths of her population by her own produce. The mineral produce was valued in 1908 at £98,538,150, and included 147,671,100 tons of coal, 67,615,200 of lignite, 24,278,200 of iron ore, 6,099,000 of kali, kainit, and other kali salts. The total mineral produce amounted to 249,138,500 English tons, including, besides the above, rock-salt, lead-ore, gold and silver ore, graphite, asphalt, petroleum, Epsom-salts, boracite, tin-ore, quicksilver-ore, antimony-ore, cobalt-ore, nickel-ore, arsenic-ore, manganese-ore, bismuth-ore, uranium-ore, wolfram-ore, pyrites, vitriolic-ore, and alum-ore. Crefeld, Elberfeld-Barmen, Mühlhausen, Chemnitz, and the provinces of Westphalia and Silesia are the great centres of the textile industries.

The chief articles of export to the United Kingdom in the year 1909 were the following:—

Sugar, raw and refined	£7,370,000
Woollen Cloth Stuffs	1,715,000
Part-Silk Stuffs	1,565,000

MERCANTILE MARINE.—On January 1st, 1910, the Mercantile Marine consisted of 1,950 seagoing steamers of 17/65 register tons and upwards (3,865,276 tons gross register), and of 2,377 sailing vessels (453,411 tons gross register). The gross tonnage of the British Mercantile Marine is about five times as great as that of the German Mercantile Marine.

The number of seamen in the German Mercantile Marine on January 1st, 1910, was 73,516 (January 1st, 1909, 72,462). Germany now ranks second in the list of the countries of the world that own shipping. In 1870 Germany's fleet of merchant steamers was only half as large as that of France; now it is twice as large. During the last three years the shipping industry has undergone a serious crisis. There were completed in 1909 at German yards for German firms, 609 sea-going ships of 271,278 tons gross, and at German yards for foreign firms, 71 sea-going ships of 23,052 tons gross (1908, 671 ships of 212,761 tons gross for German firms, and 78 ships of 15,141 tons gross for foreign firms).

COMMUNICATIONS.—The total length of the Railways in the Empire at the end of 1908 extended to 57,125 kilometres = 35,438 miles, of which about 92 per cent. belong to the States; the total cost of construction was £20,918 per mile; the expenses in 1908 were £99,200,000, and the receipts £134,900,000.

IMPERIAL POST (including Bavaria and Wurttemberg), 1908:—Length of telegraph lines, 211,700 kilometres (length of wires, 1,550,000 kilometres); telegrams handed in, 45,007,000; post offices, 40,566; telegraph offices, 41,276; telephone call-stations, 33,441; letters delivered, 5,488,300,000; cash on delivery orders, £50,470,500; money orders, £638,315,000; telegrams despatched, 43,078,000; telegrams received, 45,007,000. The number of employés in the service of post, telegraphs, and telephones was 325,143.

DEBT.—The National Debt amounted at the end of 1909 to £218,675,000, of which £93,000,000 bears interest at 3½ per cent., £89,175,000 at 4 per cent., £18,000,000 are Treasury Bonds, and £6,000,000 are Bank Notes. The debt of the former Norddeutscher Bund was cancelled by limitation at the end of 1902.

DEFENCE (for Army, see p. 666).—The Imperial Navy consisted in May, 1910, of the following ships, built or building: 37 battleships, 8 ironclad coast defence ships, 13 large armoured and 6 large protected cruisers, 38 small protected cruisers (under 5,000 tons displacement), 6 gunboats, 119 torpedo boats of over 200 tons displacement (15 under construction), 71 torpedo-boats of from 80 to 200 tons displacement, and 11 special ships for mine-laying, repairing, and other technical purposes; 8 submarines are either built or building. The personnel of the Imperial Navy consists of 1,831 officers, 3 engineer officers, 273 surgeons, 216 paymasters, 25 chaplains, 583 cadets and naval ensigns, 1 technical and torpedo officers, and 53,792 petty officers and seamen; in addition to which, charged upon the naval estimates, are 1,415 marines and 3,693 men belonging to the naval artillery and mining department. Total, officers and men, 57,374.

OLD AGE AND INFIRMITY INSURANCE.—The German scheme of social legislation gives a subordinate bread winners in the Empire a legal right to pecuniary subvention when unfitted for work through sickness, accident, premature infirmity, or old age. Insurance is compulsory. The National Insurance is based on mutual insurance and self-administration. The Infirmity Insurance Act came into force 1 January, 1900. In 1909 a total of £9,073,840 was paid out under the Act, £6,646,620 being as pensions to invalids (i.e., persons unfit for work); £817,660 as old age pensions; £894,725 for medical assistance; £55,260 for support of dependents, &c.; £27,4 as home relief for infirm workmen; £170,290 i sick pensions; £461,850 refunded. Of the tot the State contributed £2,526,090. The insur are divided into five classes, according to t amount of their annual earnings, of £17 10 £27 10s., £47 10s., £57 10s., and £100 respective Contributions are paid weekly, viz., 1½*d.*, 2½ 2½*d.*, 3½*d.*, and 4½*d.* respectively—one half the employer, the other by the employed: t State contributes a subsidy of £2 10s. to t pension. The infirmity pensions amount respectively (including the State subsidy) to £8 2 £11 5s., £13 10s., £15 15s., and £18; the old a pensions to £5 10s., £7, £8 10s., £10, and £11 1 respectively. The insured include all perso working for wages or salary as workpeop artisans, journeymen, apprentices, domes servants, laundresses, dressmakers, sempstress housekeepers, charwomen; overseers, foreme engineers, assistants, clerks and apprentices merchants' offices (excepting assistants a apprentices in chemists' shops), schoolmaste schoolmistresses, tutors and governesses—i far as the incomes do not exceed £100 includi foreigners working in Germany under the categories. Pensions for premature infirmi are given to insured persons when unfit work; old age pensions to all insured perso ) attaining the age of 70, though still capable work. A comprehensive project of reform of he State insurance legislation is now before the eichstag.

13. Hohenzollern	440·92	68,282

Of the total population 18,398,903 are males and 18,894,421 females. According to Religions, Evangelicals (i.e., National Church) number 23,341,502; Roman Catholics 13,352,444; and Jews 409,501. There are 29 towns with over 100,000 inhabitants.

Prussia possesses a large number of navigable rivers intersecting the country—viz., the Niemen, Pregel, Vistula, Oder, Elbe, Weser, and Rhine. The coasts of the Baltic and North Seas form a number of gulfs and bays. The principal mountains are the Harz and the Giant Mountains, the latter reaching an altitude of 5,255 feet. The forests are extensive, occupying an area of nearly 20,435,491 acres, chiefly consisting of fir. Minerals consist of iron, copper, lead, alum, nitre, zinc, cobalt, sulphur, nickel, arsenic, baryta, amber, agate, jasper, onyx, &c., and, to a small extent, silver. Salt (from the brine springs of Prussian Saxony) is abundant, also coal. Metallic ores, salt, precious stones belong partially, and amber totally, to the Crown. Agriculture and the rearing of cattle are the industries employing the largest number of persons, but Prussia has long ceased to be a mainly agricultural State. Wheat, rye, oats, barley, peas, millet, rape-seed, maize, linseed, flax, hemp, tobacco, hops, &c., are extensively cultivated. Prussia's manufactures comprise practically all branches. The cotton works are extensive, and there are numerous manufactories of silk, woollen, mixed cotton and linen fabrics, including shawls, carpets, &c., and woollens, with leather, earthenware, glass, paper, and tobacco manufactures, as well as metallurgical works of great importance and large output. Brewing is a business of great importance.

The "Reichsland" of Alsace-Lorraine (Elsass-Lothringen), which was annexed by France from the old German Empire between 1648 and 1697, and restored to Germany in 1871, embraces the fertile plain between the Rhine and the Vosges, and stretches beyond these mountains as far as Luxemburg. Wine, tobacco, and hops, iron and coal are among its leading productions, and the cotton industry is most flourishing. There is an elective Provincial Committee of 58 members. The area is 5,591 square miles, divided for administrative purposes into three districts, Ober- and Unter-Elsass and Lothringen. The population in Dec., 1905, was 1,814,564, of whom 935,807 were males and 878,757 females; while 1,387,462 were Catholics, 391,067 Protestants, and 31,708 Jews. THE FREIEN AND HANSE TOWNS.

The Free Hanse Towns comprise the three cities of Hamburg, Bremen, and Lübeck, each with small rural territory, retaining their sovereignty and local self-government, like the other States of the Empire, and are situated in the North of Germany, on the Elbe, Weser, and Trave respectively. Hamburg is the great emporium

Germany, and is 65 miles from Cuxhaven, which port it is connected by railway. Bremen is much smaller, but very prosperous, and only second in commercial importance to Hamburg. It is connected by railway with the outport of Bremerhaven, 35 miles distant, and carries on a very extensive American trade. Lübeck is situate near the Baltic, and is connected with the Elbe by the Elbe-Trave Canal; its commerce is principally with Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Russia. In 1908, 16,330 vessels (11,914,250 tons) entered and 16,262 vessels (11,738,768 tons) cleared at the port of Hamburg; total of 32,592 vessels (23,653,018 tons).

The imports are cotton and other manufactures, corn, timber, cattle, hides, sugar, salt fish, and coal. Its exports consist of currants, figs, olive oil, wine, cognac, tobacco, hides, lead, magnesium, emery, marble, and sponges.

Defence (for Army, see p. 666). The navy consisted of 3 ironclads, 2 armoured vessels, 1 cruiser, 10 gunboats, 4 steam corvettes, 8 schooners, 7 torpedo boats, 3 transports, and 7 various vessels, mostly obsolete, in July, 1903.

Education (see p. 669).

Communications.—There are 830 miles of railway open for traffic. There is a ship canal cutting through the Isthmus of Corinth, but it is rarely used by foreign vessels. Telegraphs, 4,951 miles. The mercantile marine consists of 1,035 sailing vessels above 30 tons capacity, and 206 steamers (198,681 tons).

Finance.—On December 31, 1909, the public Gold Debt of Greece amounted to £28,053,680, involving an annual charge of £879,532, and the Interior Paper Debt to 162,437,125 drachmæ, with a charge of 7,319,298 drachmæ. In the Gold Debt is included the first portion (£880,000) of a 4 per cent. loan contracted in March, 1902, for the construction of a railway from the Piræus to Demerly in Thessaly. The second portion (£870,000) was issued in June, 1904, and a further instalment (£230,000) for the extension of the railway to Larissa was issued in Jan., 1905, and the final instalment of £270,000 in 1906. The service of the Debt was entrusted (1898) to an International Commission, sitting at Athens, consisting of representatives of the Governments of Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, and Italy. To them are assigned the revenues from (1) the State monopolies (salt, matches, petroleum, playing cards, cigarette paper, and emery), (2) the tobacco tax, and (3) the stamp duties, together with the revenue from the Piræus Custom-house as a supplementary guarantee. The gross receipts from the first three sources mentioned are estimated at 28,900,000 drachmæ, out of which a minimum interest of 43 per cent. of the original interest on the Monopoly Loan (1887), and 32 per cent. of the original interest on all other loans contracted previous to 1898, as well as the full interest of 2½ per cent. on the loan of 1898, is guaranteed. If the receipts exceed 28,900,000 drachmæ, the surplus, less 18 per cent. for expenses of administration, is divided between the Government and the bond-holders, in the following proportions: 30 per cent. for increase of interest, 30 per cent. for increase of sinking fund, and 40 per cent. to the Hellenic Government. Profit on exchange is distributed in the same proportions. If the receipts fall short of the estimate, the revenue from the custom-houses at Laurium, Patras, Volo, and Corfu are successively assigned to make good the deficit.

The trade of Greece is hampered by a forced circulation of about 150,000,000 drachmæ (nominally equal to the French franc) in a depreciated paper currency. The agio on gold has been steadily declining during the last few years, and the average exchange constantly improving.

GUATEMALA, REPUBLIC OF.

President, Manuel Estrada Cabrera, elected 2 Oct. 1898, and re-elected July, 1904 and 1910, to serve to March 15, 1917.
Min. of Foreign Affairs, Guillermo Aguirre.
Consul-General, F. de Arce, 11 Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

Guatemala, the most northerly of the Republican States of Central America, is situated in N. lat. from 13° 40′ to 17° 40′, and in W. Long. from 88° 15′ to 92° 30′, and comprises an area of 47,452 square miles, and a population in 1908 of 1,991,264. The Republic is divided into 23 departments, and is traversed from W. to E. by an elevated mountain chain, containing several volcanic summits rising to 13,000 feet above the sea: earthquakes are frequent. The country is well watered by numerous rivers; the climate is hot and unhealthy near the coast, but more temperate and salubrious in the higher regions. The Northern Railway connects P. Barrios (Atlantic) with the capital. The Central Railway connects the port of San José (Pacific) with the capital. About 490 miles were open for traffic in 1909. There were 3,790 kilometres of telegraph working in 1905. The chief ports are San José on the Pacific, Champerico on the Pacific, and Livingston and Puerto Barrios on the Atlantic.

Consul, Maurice Erdmann, 32 Fenchurch Street.

The Republic of Hayti is the western or French portion of the island of San Domingo, which, next to Cuba, is the largest of the West India Islands. It contains 29,830 square miles, of which 1,242 square miles belong to Hayti. It lies in N. lat. between 17° 37′—20°, and in W. longitude between 68° 20′—74° 28′; and belongs to the group of the Greater Antilles. The portion belonging to Hayti contains a population of 2,029,700 (1908). The mountains are richly and heavily timbered, and susceptible of cultivation nearly to their summits; it is probably the most fertile spot in the West Indies, whilst its harbours, especially Port-au-Prince, offer considerable facilities to foreign trade. The principal productions are coffee, logwood, cocoa, cotton, hides, sugar, honey, gums, these being the chief exports. It is said to contain mines of gold, silver, copper, tin, and iron. Its commercial prosperity has been almost annihilated by repeated revolutions. The principal foreign trade is carried on with the United States, Great and Greater Britain, France, and Germany.

President, General Miguel R. Davila, assumed office 18 April, 1907.

Consul-General in London, M. J. Kelly, 8 Idol Lane, E.C.

The Middle State of Central America, stretching in N. lat. between 13° 10′ and 16°, and W. long. between 83° 10′ and 88° 40′; containing 42,658 English square miles, including a small portion of the Mosquito Territory, and the Bay Islands in the Gulf of Honduras. The population in 1902 was 774,900, mostly of aboriginal blood. It has a coast-line of nearly 400 miles on the Caribbean Sea, chief ports, Truxillo, Puerto Cortez, Omoa, Roatan, and La Ceiba; but only about 40 miles on the Gulf of Fonseca, on the Pacific side, chief port, Amapala. The country is mountainous, being traversed by the Cordilleras. The products are mahogany, fruit, cattle, cotton, sugar, tobacco, coffee, indigo, sarsaparilla, hides and skins, india-rubber, cedar, fustic, rose, and Lima wool. Its mineral wealth is great. The only railway (42-inch gauge) runs from Puerto Cortez to Pimienta, 60 miles, which it is intended to develop into an inter-oceanic railway, connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific.

Minister for Iceland (Resident), Björn Jönson, appd. 31 March, 1909.

Iceland is a large, volcanic, and treeless island in the North Atlantic Ocean, extending from 63° 23′ to 66° 33′ N. lat., and from 13° 22′ to 24° 35′ W. long., with an estimated area of 40,497 square miles, or greater than that of Ireland. The population was estimated in 1898 at 76,237.

The present constitution was granted in 1904, and the assembly (Al-thing) is more or less controlled by the Government at Copenhagen. The principal products of the island are sheep, cattle, ponies, and fish, and the imports consist of almost all the necessaries of life, the chief items being grain and meal, sugar, coffee, salt, cotton goods, tobacco, spirits, hardware, and timber. Total imports (1908): £909,711; exports, £594,646. Iceland is now in direct telegraphic communication with this country.

A Kingdom in the South of Europe, consisting of a peninsula, the large islands of Sicily and Sardinia, the island of Elba, and about 66 minor islands. It is situate between lat. 36° 38′ 30″—46° 40′ 30″ N. and long. 6° 30′—18° 30′ E., and comprises a total area of 110,623 square miles (91,277 mainland, 19,346 islands), with a population (1 Jan., 1908) of 33,910,000. Formerly it was composed of the various States of Sardinia, the Two Sicilies, the Pontifical States, the Lombardo-Venetian provinces of the Austrian Empire, the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, and the Duchies of Parma and Modena. In 1870 the unity of the country was finally effected, and Rome became again the capital of Italy, which is now divided for administration into 69 provinces. The coast-line of the mainland is estimated at 1,999 miles; of Sicily, Sardinia, and Elba at 1,389 miles; of the minor islands at 557 miles; in all 3,945 miles, having several large bays and gulfs. The peninsula is traversed throughout its length by the chain of the Apennines; the Alps form its northern limits, dividing it from France. The chief rivers are the Po, the Adige, the Tiber, and the Arno. The principal towns are Rome (462,783), Naples (564,000), Milan (over 500,000), Turin, Palermo (over 300,000), Genoa, Florence (over 200,000), and Bologna, Venice, Catania, and Leghorn (over 100,000 inhabitants), Ferrara and Padua (over 80,000), while there are twenty other towns with over 50,000 inhabitants. Its wines are numerous and celebrated, and olives and olive-oil are furnished by Tuscany, Liguria, and the province of Bari; while fruit abounds and is largely exported. The cultivation of silk forms an important agricultural industry. Among the principal minerals are iron, lead, zinc, copper, manganese, and antimony ores, sulphur, gypsum, amianthus, alum, and boracic acid. Silver is found in Sardinia, and some gold in the Alps. Salt is a Government monopoly, and 219,343 tons were produced in 1906. The mineral produce in 1907 included iron ore (£360,000), zinc ore (£780,000), and crude sulphur (£1,300,000). The railway system is making rapid progress throughout the kingdom; in 1907 there were 10,713 miles open for traffic, and 29,788 miles of telegraph line. The sea-going commercial marine (1908) consisted of 1,098 vessels (419 steamers), of 1,285,225 tons. The imports chiefly consist of cotton, wheat, coal, coke, chemicals, colonial produce, yarns, jute and manufactured goods, woollens, raw silk, silkworms' eggs and cocoons, machinery, iron and steel in bars, plates and rails, hardware, raw hides, horses and cows, fixed oils, salt fish, dye-stuffs, tobacco, earthenware, &c. The principal exports are olive-oil, wine, candied citron, sienna earths, pastes, coral, rags, boracic acid, raw and thrown silk, hemp, cattle, straw hats, rice, iron, zinc and copper ores, sulphur, marble, fruit, vegetables, fresh and prepared meats, poultry, chemical products, woods, roots, &c., for dyeing and tanning, artistic works, &c.

The exports to the U.K. in 1909 were:—

Art, Works of, other than Pictures	£69,513	Hemp and Tow	£407,20
Carriages	225,999	Hides, raw	549,85

Cottons	400,030	Ships and Boats	54,80
Fish	194,766	Wool	414,47
Grease	127,502	Woollens	435,20

The manufactures are woollen, cotton, silk, hemp, and linen yarns and tissues, leather, straw and felt hats, furniture, chemical products, paper, agricultural and other machinery, prepared meats, artistic works (such as mosaic, pottery, Venetian glass, alabaster ornaments, &c. Sugar is extracted from beet in large quantities for home consumption. There is a large settled and floating population of English and Americans, with churches (one costing £40,000) and chapels belonging to Methodists, Baptists, and others. Defence (for Army, see p. 66; for Navy, see p. 473). Spezia, the chief naval and military port of the kingdom, is securely fortified. Education (see p. 669).

COLONIES. — Italy possesses the colony of Eritrea, and a protectorate over part of the Somali coast, extending from Cape Guardafui to the Juba river, on which they have a station; an annual rent is paid to the Sultan of Zanzibar for the Benadir ports leased by him to Italy. The Colony of Eritrea includes also the Dahlar Archipelago.

The protectorate includes Aussa and the Danakil country, the Somali countries of the Sultans of Miguertini and of Obbia, as well as the Benadir, which is now a colony. By new conventions signed with the Emperor Menelek in May, 1908, Italy obtains a slight extension of frontiers, and obtains the country between Dolo and Bardera. The commencement of Italian influence was made in 1880, when the district of Assab was transferred from a trading company to the Government. The tract of land now known as ERITREA ("Red Sea") consists of a triangular portion of barren and sandy lowland between 12° and 18° N., containing in all a coast-line along the Red Sea of about 700 miles, with a total area of 85,000 to 90,000 square miles, and a population of about 300,000, of whom about 3,000 are Europeans. The capital is Asmara, Massowa being the chief port, where there is a good harbour, and the principal product, salt, of great value as being the monetary currency of Southern Abyssinia.

This ancient and extensive Empire, now in alliance with the United Kingdom, consists of four large and many small islands, said to comprise in all above 4,223, the principal of which are Hondō (the name of the Empire being Nihon), Shikoku, Kiū-shū, Hokkaidō or Yezo, situate to the north of the main island, from which it is separated by the Tsugaru Straits, and Formosa, called by the Japanese, Taiwan. The Ainu, an uncivilised but harmless tribe, who in ancient times occupied the greater part of the country, are still found in Yezo. The Kurile Islands have belonged to Japan since 1875, and in 1876 she incorporated the Luchu (Riu-kiu) Islands under the name of "Prefecture of Okinawa." The empire comprises an area of 162,655 square miles, with a population of 49,232,822, according to the last census, there being 24,864,385 men and 24,368,437 women. In addition, the Russo-Japanese war gave to Japan the southern portion of the island of Saghalin, (Japanese, Karafuto); while in 1910 Korea, a protectorate since the conclusion of the Russian War, was formally annexed and the King deposed.

Japan is said to possess a written history extending over 2,500 years, and its sovereigns to have formed an unbroken dynasty since 660 B.C., the present Emperor being the 121st of his race; but the authentic history begins about 400 A.D. Within the last 40 years Japan has made unparalleled progress in civilisation and the adoption of Western manners and customs. The feudal system, under which the country was governed by numerous lords under a supreme military governor, the "Shogun," has been abolished, and the Mikado is now absolutely the Sovereign of the State, which has since the revolution of 1868 shown a most remarkable power of adopting Western knowledge and experience. A wise and enlightened ruler is at the head of the nation, and the first national Parliament, the outcome of the constitution granted to the people by the Emperor, promuigated 11 Feb., 1889 met for the first time in November, 1890. The feudal lords, who have lost all their powers of government, still retain their high social positions, and a new aristocracy with these as its basis has been formed; it consists of five grades, corresponding to the European titles of Prince (not Imperial), Marquis, Count, Viscount, and Baron. The islands are eminently volcanic, and 18 of the summits are still active; the chief of these, Fuji-san, or Fuji-yama, the loftiest and most sacred mountain of Japan, about sixty miles from Tokio, is 12,370 ft. high, and has been dormant since 1707. Japan is also liable to frequent, and occasionally disastrous earthquakes. The country is very mountainous, and not more than one-sixth of its area is available for cultivation. It possesses numerous fine harbours. The soil is productive, teeming with every variety of agricultural produce. Copper, iron, and sulphur abound, whilst agate, cornelian, and rock crystal are also found. Gold is found in the island of Sado, and silver mining is prosecuted on a small scale; while there is a good supply of middling coal. Among the vegetable productions may be noted the camphor-tree, paper mulberry, vegetable wax-tree, and a lacquer-tree, which furnishes the celebrated "lacquer" of Japan. The principal timber trees are the Cryptomeria japonica, Pinus Massoniana, and Zelkowa Keaki; the Paulownia imperialis is largely used for fancy boxes and works of art; the maple is merely for ornament. Chestnut, oak, beech, and elm are comparatively rare and little used. The tobacco-plant, tea-shrub, potato, rice, wheat and other cereals are all cultivated; agriculture, upon which the Japanese bestow great care, being their chief occupation. The coasts are extremely rich in fish. The floral kingdom is rich, beautiful, and varied, though scented flowers are comparatively few. Fruit, for the most part of inferior quality is abundant; English fruits, such as apples, strawberries, pears, grapes, figs, and peaches are being produced.

Commerce and Industry.—The chief manufactures are silk and cotton, cotton yarn, matches, paper, glass, lacquer ware, porcelain and bronze, and shipbuilding is an important industry in the yards. The chief imports are raw cotton from India, U.S., Egypt, and China, flour from the U.S.; and piece goods, metals, manures, woollens, wool, drugs, rails, locomotives, and machinery from Europe and the U.S.A. Sugar is largely imported from Java, Philippines, Germany, Austria, Hong Kong, and Formosa, indigo from Germany, British India, and Java, kerosene oil from U.S. and the Dutch Indies, beans, peas, and pulse from China and Korea, and rice, principally from British India, French India, Korea, Siam, and China. The chief exports are silk, cotton yarns, rice, tea, fish, copper, matches, coal, camphor, straw plaits, and marine products.

Communications.—There were 5,029 miles of railway open in 1909. A Japanese line has been built in Korea from Fusan to Seoul, while the South Manchurian Railway is also under Japanese control. The gross receipts for passenger and goods traffic on all the lines in Japan during 1908-9 was £8,572,014. The mercantile marine consisted in 1910 of 1,653 steamers above 20 tons (339 of them over 1,000 tons), and 4,82 sailing vessels over 20 tons (1,317 exceeding 1 tons); total steam tonnage 1,198,098; sailing 403,203. Of the 12,330 vessels (tonnage 19,794,45 that entered Japanese ports (1909) 1,912 were British (tonnage 5,823,376).

Defence (for Army, see p. 667). The Navy as 31 March, 1910, is given on p. 473; it was manned by about 34,000 officers and men.

Education (see p. 669).

Formosa.—The island of Formosa was ceded by China to Japan (2 June, 1895) in accordance with the Treaty of Peace. Its total area is 13,500 square miles, with about 3,080,000 inhabitants (1908).

Korea.—By a treaty of 23 Aug., 1910, Korea was annexed to Japan and became part of the Japanese Empire, and General Viscount Terauchi was appointed Governor-General.

Korea is situated between 122° and 128° E. long., and between 34° and 43° N. lat., and the coast is fringed with innumerable islands, of which the largest is Quelpart. Total length, 600 miles from north to south, and greatest breadth 135 miles from east to west, with an area of some 71,000 square miles. Population estimated at about 12,000,000; there are about 147,000 Japanese in the country. The soil is fertile, but mountainous except in the river valleys, about 4,500,000 acres are under cultivation, the staple agricultural products being rice and other cereals, beans, cotton, tobacco, and hemp; the other natural products are chiefly gold and hides. Ginseng, a medicinal root much affected by the Chinese, is largely grown under Government supervision in the province of Kyeng-An, and, being a Government monopoly, forms a rich source of revenue. Gold, copper, coal, iron, and other minerals are distributed throughout the country. The principal exports are beans, rice, livestock, cowhides, and ginseng. Manufactures are as yet in a primitive condition, the principal being hemp cloth, brass ware, and an excellent quality of paper resembling the Japanese article, but stouter. About 80 per cent. of the sea-borne trade is carried in Japanese bottoms. Considerable progress is being made in the direction of the proper lighting of the coast. The total railway mileage is 639 miles. The revenue and expenditure 1909-10 were about 22,200,000, imports (1909) £3,471,252, exports £1,658,752. Capital, Seoul or Söul. Pop. JERUSALEM—PALESTINE.

Turkish Governor, Azmy Bey, appointed May, 1910.

Palestine, which occupies so prominent a place in the history of human kind, and in the affections of the Christian world, is a country capable of considerable development, and, although her ancient glories are departed, still produces wine and olives, corn and the most varied fruits. Its population is not far short of 700,000, of whom upwards of 150,000 are Jews. In and about Jerusalem, the Jews number from 60,000 to 65,000.

Geographically, Palestine consists of a maritime lowland, the mountain region of Judæa, which forms its backbone, the remarkable depression through which the Jordan wends its course towards the Dead Sea, and the elevated region lying to the east of the Jordan. It is barren only during the dry season, when the grasses are dried up, and the herdsmen retire with their flocks of sheep and goats to the loftier mountains, but the alluvial lowland to the south of Mount Carmel is as fruitful as ever, and it only needs an honest and vigorous administration to restore Palestine to its former prosperous condition. The entire area is computed to be about 11,000 square miles.

Palestine comprises the independent mutessarifilik of Jerusalem (el Kuds), together with the mutessarifliks of Acre and Nablus, the two last named belonging, for administrative purposes, to the vilayet (province) of Beirut. Since March, 1906, however, the kaza (district) of Nazareth, in the mutessarifilik of Acre, has been included in the mutessarifilik of Jerusalem. The stream Auja, which enters the sea a few miles north of Jaffa, forms the boundary between the independent district of Jerusalem and the above-named vilayet, the country to the east of the Jordan and the Dead Sea being subordinate to the vilayet of Damascus. Arabic is the language commonly spoken, and 80 per cent. of the population are Mohammedans; in addition to Mohammedans and Jews there are many Orthodox Greeks and foreigners of all denominations. A railway was constructed connecting Jaffa (Joppa) and Jerusalem in 1892.

* Includes extraordinary expenses, which in 1910-11 estimated at £4,866,331 (rev.) and £12,945,200 (exp.).

The principal ports of Palestine are Acre, Haifa, Jaffa, and Gaza, and their exports amount annually to over £600,000, consisting principally of sesame, oranges, fruits, barley, olive oil, maize, and articles of Christian veneration, these latter weighing 2,700 cwt. The imports are estimated at £800,000 annually. The U.K. and Austria-Hungary take the lead in this commerce.

An independent Negro Republic of Western Africa, occupying that part of the coast of North Guinea which is between the river Cavalla, S.E., and Manna, N.W., a distance of about 350 miles, with an area of about 48,000 square miles, and extending to the interior to latitude 8° 50′, a distance of 250 miles from the seaboard. It was founded by the American Colonization Society in 1820, and has been recognised by the United States and the European powers since 1847 as an independent State. The population numbers nearly 1,500,000, including about 10,000 Americo-Liberians. The principal exports are coffee, cocoa, palm-kernels, palm-oil, ivory, prassava, rubber, and camwood. The chief imports are cottons, haberdashery, salt, rice, provisions, arms and ammunition, tobacco, hardware, glass and earthenware, rum, gin, timber, and beads. The executive power is vested in a President elected for four years, assisted by a ministry; there are two houses of Legislature, the Senate, with eight members elected for four years, and the House of Representatives with fourteen members elected for two years. There is no regular army, but a frontier force under European officers is being raised. The organisation of the customs is being carried out by officers lent by the British Government with successful results. There are thirteen ports of entry along the 350 miles of coast, viz.: Robertsport, Monrovia, Marshall, Grand Bassa, River Cess, Grecnsville, Nanna Kroo, Harper, Half Cavalla, Jenne, Webo, Grand Cess, and Garraway. In 1908, 343 vessels (678,748 net tons) entered and cleared at Monrovia.

A country in the southern part of the conti of North America, with an extensive seaboa both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, exter from 15° to 32° 30′ N. lat. and 87° to 117° W. l and comprising one of the richest and most v zones in the world, but from various cause resources have never been fairly developed comprises 27 states, 3 territories, and the fe district of Mexico, making in all 31 political sions, comprehending an area of 767,005 sq miles, with an estimated population of 13,545,462, of whom "only about 3,500,000 are taxable." The surface consists of an elevated plateau, commencing at a few miles from the coast, and containing several volcanic summits, the highest of which, Ixtaccihuatl and Popocatepetl, rise to 17,879 and 19,784 feet above the sea. Acapulco, Manzanillo, Mazatlan, Salina Cruz, and Guaymas are the chief ports on the Pacific; and Vera Cruz, Tampico, Progreso, and Puerto Mexico on the Atlantic or Gulf of Mexico. There were 15,350 miles of railway open on Sept. 16, 1910, and 39,007 miles of telegraph. The railways have in a large measure been built by American and English companies. The "Mexican Central" joins El Paso (Texas) with the city of Mexico, by which passengers can travel in five days from New York. The National Railway via Laredo takes 4 days to New York, and there is a third route via Eagle Pass (International Railway). Under a law of July 6, 1907, the National, Central, International, and other railways were amalgamated under the name of the National Lines of Mexico, the government possessing an effective control. The principal crops are maize, wheat, barley, Chile-pepper, sugar, coffee, cotton, tobacco, vanilla, flax, grapes, and all kinds of tropical fruit. The maguey, or Mexican aloe, yields a favourite beverage, "pulque"; other species of the same plant supply pita-flax and sisal-hemp (henequen). The forests abound in mahogany, rosewood, ebony, and caoutchouc trees. The mineral wealth is very great; silver and gold, copper, lead, and quicksilver, iron and coal, are the leading products of the mines. Woollen and cotton spinning and weaving, and other branches of industry, are encouraged by high protective duties. The imports, nevertheless, consist very largely of textile manufactures. Of the exports 45 per cent. consist of silver and gold; sizal hemp (henequen), coffee, hides and skins, timber, logwood, vanilla, tobacco, dyestuffs, sugar, and drugs ranking next in importance.

The Navy is limited to 7 small vessels.

A Principality until 1910, in which year it was proclaimed a Kingdom by virtue of a resolution of the National Skupshtina, on the 50th anniversary of the accession of Prince Nicholas. It was formerly a province of the old Servian Empire which came to an end after the battle of Kossovo in 1389, since which date it has always claimed to be independent, and recognised to be so by the Treaty of Berlin (1878). It has an area of 3,486 square miles, and a population diminished by emigration to about 225,000, of whom 13,000 are Mussulmans, 14,000 Roman Catholics, and the remainder Orthodox Slavs. The surface forms a series of elevated ridges with lofty mountain-peaks, many of which are covered with forests. Chief products are maize, potatoes, sumac, cattle, castradina (smoked mutton), hides, and tobacco, which has been created a monopoly, and conceded for 25 years to an Italian company. The only manufactures are coarse woollens. Agriculture is the principal occupation. The ports are Antivari and Dulcigno. There is a railway from Antivari to Lake Scutari. A representative parliament was granted 5 November, 1905.

Sultan, Muley Abdul Hafid, b. 1873, assumed power Aug. 1908; recognised by the Powers, Jan., 1909.

Grand Vizier, El Madani el Glawi.

Minister of Foreign Affairs, Sid Aissa ben Omar.

Commissioner for Foreign Affairs at Tangier, Sid Mohammed el Guebbas.

The largest of the Barbary States, situate in the N.W. of Africa, between 27°—36° N. lat. and 1°—11° 40′ W. long. The Empire, which is an absolute monarchy, consists of the Kingdom of Fez and Morocco, to the north of the Atlas, and the territories of Sûs, Drâ, Wadi Tafilet, Tuat, and others to the south, which are again subdivided into 33 districts, each under the superintendence of a "Kaid"; but the semi-independent tribes are ruled by their own chiefs, and scarcely acknowledge the authority of the Sultan. Morocco contains about 314,000 square miles, of which the "Tell," or fertile regions of the mountains and coast, contain 76,000, the steppe-land 26,000, and the Sahara 217,000, with a population variously estimated at from 4,500,000 to 8,000,000. The Jews number about 300,000, chiefly in the cities. Among the chief products of the country are wheat, barley, maize, beans, peas, oil, esparto, and hemp; among fruits, the fig, almond, pomegranate, lemon, olive, orange, and date are common; but agriculture is greatly neglected. Morocco is said to be rich in mineral treasures: antimony, iron, coal, copper, lead, tin—the last three in considerable quantities. Gold and silver also are found, and wool is plentiful. The chief ports are Tetuan, Tangier (where the Representatives of foreign nations reside), El Araish (Laraiche), Rabat, Casa Blanca (or Dar-al-baida), Mazagan, Saffi, and Mogador. There are no railways, and telegraphic communication from Tangier is by submarine cable of Eastern Telegraph Company to Gibraltar, by Spanish Government telegraph to Tarifa, and by French cable to Oran (Algeria); there are wireless stations at Tangier, Rabat, Casa Blanca, and Mogador. The principal exports (1908) we barley (£631,851), oxen (£285,000), goat-ski £178,217), eggs (£222,846), almonds (£101,10 and olive oil (£100,952); and the imports a cottons (£1,048,474), sugar (£701,428), t (£221,216), iron and hardware (£121,288), line muslin and woollen goods, coffee, candles, clot silk, &c. The army consists of between 15,0 and 20,000, one-half of whom are negroes, S tan's bodyguard, and a sort of militia, of vario arms, amounting to 80,000 men. An Engli newspaper, Al Moghreb-al-Aksa, several French and Spanish and a German paper, a published at Tangier. There are three capita of which Fez, population 120,000, is the seat government, and Morocco (Marrakesh), 50,0 is the capital of the Moorish Empire; a Mequinez, 56,000.

A maritime Kingdom of Central Europe, situate on the North Sea, in lat. 50° 46′—53° 34′ N. and long. 3° 22′—7° 14′ E., consisting of 11 provinces, and containing a total area of 12,582 square miles, with a population, on Dec. 31, 1906, of 5,672,237. The majority, about three-fifths, belong to the several Reformed Churches; and the remainder are Roman Catholics, with a small number of Jews, mainly in large towns such as Amsterdam, where there are about 70,000. The land is generally flat and low, intersected by numerous canals and connecting rivers—in fact, a network of water courses. The principal rivers are the Rhine, Maas, and Yssel, with the mouths of the Schelde. The chief native products are herrings and other fish, cattle, horses, swine, sheep, poultry, eggs, seeds, potatoes, oats, rye, wheat, barley, beans, peas, buckwheat, beetroot, chicory, flax, hemp, tobacco, and dairy produce. The principal manufactures are shipping, bricks, margarine, cocoa, chocolate, linen, rich damasks, cottons, woollens, cigars and other manufactured tobacco, candles, confectionery, earthenware and pottery, chemical and pharmaceutical products, sugar, printing, bicycles and automobiles, boots and shoes, starch, potato flour, engines, metal substances, oils, beer, "geneva" and other liqueurs. Diamond-cutting employs numerous hands in Amsterdam.

Communications.—There are 3,125 kilometres of railway open (31 Dec., 1907), and 34,369 kilometres of telegraph. The mercantile marine, on the 31st Dec., 1905, consisted of 271 steamers, tonnage 1,009,746 cubic metres, and 479 sailing vessels (170,524 cubic metres), employing 10,198 men on 31 Dec., 1905.

Defence (for Army, see p. 667).—The royal Navy consisted, on July 1, 1908, of 109 vessels (8 of them ironclads, 7 protected cruisers, 15 coast and harbour defence vessels, 3 river gunboats, 45 torpedo-boats (9 for the colonies), 20 special service vessels and 11 for special service in the colonies.

Education (see p. 669).

Trade and Commerce.—Holland figures largely in the trade returns of this country, a quarter of the value of which is represented by agricultural produce, but much of the merchandise sent to Holland was for distribution in Germany and other parts. The following are the Board of Trade figures for imports from the United Kingdom in the year 1909:—

Timor, together with WESTERN NEW GUINEA, with an area of 738,000 square miles, and a population (1905) of 37,815,400, of whom as many as 30,098,000 live in the islands of Java and Madura. JAVA and MADURA (customs receipts, 1909, £1,318,708) produce a sufficient supply of food for a dense population, besides furnishing sugar, tobacco, tea, coffee, and other products for exportation to Europe. The "outlying" islands are frequently administered by their own princes, subject to the directions of a Dutch Resident. There is a colonial army of 1,396 officers and 35,183 men. The colonial revenue for 1909 was estimated at £15,128,343, and was largely derived from the sale of coffee, salt, bark, and tin; whilst the estimated expenditure was £16,161,549. The exports, in addition to the above, include also tobacco, indigo, gums, and spices, and amounted in 1907, for Java, Madura, and the other outlying islands, to £28,962,552, while the imports for the same year amounted to £19,387,166.

In South America the colony of SURINAM, or Dutch Guiana (imports, 1907, £313,800; exports, £267,662), embraces 46,072 square miles and contains 84,113 inhabitants; and in the West Indies, CURAÇAO (imports, £170,493; exports, £19,680; population 30,883) and five other small islands belong to Holland, having an area of 436 square miles, with a population of 53,065.

The largest State of Central America, with a long seaboard on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, situate between 9° 45′—15° N. lat. and 83° 40′—87° 38′ W. long., containing an area of 51,660 English square miles, including a large portion of the Mosquito Territory, and a population of about 600,000 (1906), of whom about three-quarters are mixed blood and the rest Indians, besides the Mosquitos, who are mostly in a savage state. There are 172 miles of railway open, and about 250 miles under contemplation, with 1,591 miles of telegraph, connected with the Pacific cable from Mexico to Peru. A ship canal to connect the Pacific with the Atlantic was commenced in Oct., 1890, but the company collapsed in 1899; in 1899 a new company obtained the concession, but failed to comply with the terms obtained, and the concession was revoked in August, 1900. The canal, which had been begun in 1890, is now almost entirely filled up.

OMĀN.

Sultan, or Sovereign, Seyyid Feysal bin Turki, G.C.I.E., born 1864, succ. 4 June, 1888.

Omān (area 82,000 sq. miles, pop. 400,000) is a Mohammedan State in N.E. Arabia with a coast-line of about 1,500 miles along the Persian Gulf, the Gulf of Omān, and the Arabian Sea from El-Katar to Ras Sair. The country, much of which is arid and desert, attains in Jebel Akhdar an elevation of 10,000 feet. The rainfall averages only about 5 inches annually. Among the Bedouins the authority of the Sultan is nominally recognised, but in the interior his authority is slight, and trade is hampered by tribal warfare and robbery. The population is chiefly Arab, but includes also a considerable foreign element—Indians, Persians, Baluchis and Swahili negroes. The Sultan is in treaty relations with, and subsidised by, the Government of India, who have a political agent at his court. A joint Anglo-French declaration of 1862 guarantees his independence. Since 1798 the relations between Muscat and England have been friendly, and nine treaties and conventions have been made. British warships have upheld the Sultan's authority against rebellious tribesmen. The Sultan is pledged not to cede territory to any Power but the British Government. Omān has no independent coinage except copper piece; the Indian rupee is the chief currency at Muscat and the Maria Theresa dollar in the interior. Muscat, the capital, with its commercial suburb of Muttra, possesses the only good harbour, and has a considerable trade, amounting in 1909–10 to £831,300. About 71 per cent. of the foreign trade is with India and the United Kingdom, and 88 per cent. of the shipping is British. Indians (who numbered 1,300 in 1903) do most of the business, Bombay serving as an entrepôt. Dates, the staple food product, are the chief export, and rice, grain, wheat, coffee, cotton and silk goods the chief imports. Transport is by pack animals. The general import duty is 5 per cent. There are three British steamship lines, as well as a German and a Russian line, direct from Europe, and a weekly mail service to Karachi and Bombay. There is a cable to India via Jask.

One of the nine Departments of Colombia revolted in Nov. 1903, and established a separate Government. A treaty was concluded with the United States which guarantees the independence of the Republic, and also paid ten millions of dollars, in return for which Panama grants to the United States, in perpetuity, a zone of land for the construction and operation of a canal, of the width of ten miles, extending to the distance of five miles on each side, with sovereign rights within the strip. A new port has been established at Cristobal, in the Atlantic, and Port Ancon, on the Pacific, is also administered by American officials and laws. The area of the Republic is 31,890 square miles, the population (1910) about 450,000. There are 255 primary schools, at which 16,498 children attend (excluding 1,721 children enrolled in the Canal Zone free schools); the present system of public instruction is to be thoroughly reorganised and reformed. The once famous pearl-fisheries in the Gulf of Panama yield now but little, but other beds are being worked along the North coast. The prosperity of the State depends upon its favourable geographical position, which facilitates transit from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The distance from Limon Bay to Panama on the latter is only 35 miles, and the highest elevation of the watershed does not exceed 278 feet. Until 1896 Panama and Colon were free ports. A general import duty is now levied at the rate of 10 per cent. gold on the value of all imports, except liquors, which are provided for separately. A special agreement between the U.S. and Panama was signed in December, 1904, establishing free trade between the Republic and the Canal Zone. Merchandise entering the zone for consumption pays import dues to the Panama Government identical with those levied on the importations into the Republic. All supplies imported for account of the Isthmian Canal Commission are exempted from all taxation. A railway 47 miles in length (fare, first class $2.40, second class $1.50) (luggage 2 cents a lb.) (U.S. gold) joins the two oceans. The imports in 1909 were valued at £1,751,261 (from U.S., £999,325, exclusive of canal materials; from U.K., £352,480; from Germany, £182,952), and consisted chiefly of manufactured goods and foodstuffs. The exports (principally gold dust and bars, hides, rubber, mother-of-pearl shells, cabinet woods, bananas, and medicinal plants) at £300,495.

The Panama Canal. A ship canal was commenced in 1879 by Ferdinand de Lesseps, the diggings being begun in 1881, but in March, 1889, work ceased owing to lack of funds. A French syndicate then assumed charge of the property and continued the works at the Culebra cut until the sale of the property to the U.S. for forty millions of dollars in 1904. A lock canal has been definitely decided upon, in 85 ft. level, with 6 locks; 3 will be located at Gatun, 1 at Pedro Miguel, and 2 at Miraflores, all in duplicate. With the work already done it is estimated it can be completed by 1915; the official opening has been set for 1 Jan., 1915. Of the works are fully one year ahead of that dat Total length will be about 46 miles, and surface of water 300 to 500 ft.; depth, 40 ft.

Persia—called by the natives Irán—compri 630,000 sq. ms., with a population estimated 10,000,000. By the Anglo-Russian Convention Aug., 1907, Great Britain and Russia mutua gaged to respect the integrity and indepen-nce of Persia, while marking out certain regions

S.E. and N.W. Persia respectively in which ch had, for geographical and economic reasons, ecial interests. Russia engaged not to seek litical or commercial concessions (for railays, mines, &c.) beyond a line running from the ghan frontier viâ Gazik, Birjand, and Kerman Bunder Abbas, while Great Britain made a e engagement as regards a line running from sr-i-Shirin viâ Ispahan, Yezd, and Kakhk to the int of intersection of the Russian and Afghan ntiers. Russia did not deny the special terests of England in the Persian Gulf, the sult of British action in those waters for over o years. The ill-defined western frontier of rsia marches with Turkey, with which there ve been serious boundary disputes since 1906.

Persia is mostly a bare and arid table-land, circled, except on the east, by mountains, ose in the north rising to 18,700 ft. The ntral and eastern portion is a vast salt desert.
ne only navigable river is the Karun, which as opened to foreign navigation from Mohamerah to Ahwaz in 1888. Messrs. Lynch Bros., ded by a British-Indian subsidy, run a fort-ghtly steamer to Ahwaz, whence there is a w road to Ispahan made by British capital.
he Upper Karun, navigable as far as Shuster, is served to the Persian flag. There is one elgian) railway of eight miles running south om Tehran. Most of the telegraphs are managed the Indo-European Telegraph Department of e Government of India. The main telegraph is om Julfa, on the Russian frontier, to Bushire, hence there is a cable to Bombay. The conuction for this telegraph lasts till 1925. A new od telegraph has been constructed by British ency from Karachi (India) viâ Quetta, Robat, zd, and Kerman, to Tehran. It is leased to the rsian Government, but maintained by British rectors and staff. The chief routes to Persia are ose viâ Batoum-Tiflis-Tabriz and Baku-Resht, nstructed and controlled by Russians, and sed to non-Russian merchandise, except tea;
e Trebizond-Tabriz route, long and costly; the nder Abbas route to Kerman, Yezd, and Seistan, ble to robbery; the Bushire-Shiraz-Ispahan ute, long and difficult; the Bussorah-Baghdadrmanshah route, suited for bulky or heavy ods; and the increasingly popular Mohamrah-Ahwaz-Ispahan route, shorter, cheaper, d better than the Bushire route. Several good rt-roads have been made or are in progress.
avelling is mostly by caravans, and transport pack-animals. The cost of carriage is, there-re, very heavy. The chief products are cereals, tton, gums, dried fruits, silk, tobacco, and
ium. The minerals (little worked) are salt, n, coal, copper, lead, sulphur, &c., with rquoises. Oilfields in Southern Persia have en successfully worked by an English com-ny since 1902. The only important manucture is that of woollen carpets (mostly a mestic industry), but shawls, silks, and cotton brics are also produced. There are extensive ests in the north and west. Sheep and goats numerous, and good wool is produced.
e principal towns are Tehran (pop. 210,000), briz (180,000), Ispahan (60,000), Meshed (80,000), rman (50,000), Yezd (60,000), and Shiraz (60,000).
e Persians are mostly Shiah Muhammadans;
there are many adherents of Babism and Arnian Christians. The laws and popular educa-n are based on the precepts of the Koran.

Persia is divided into provinces, of which the principal are under Governors or Governors-General. Owing to increasing popular discontent with a corrupt and incompetent administration and an extravagant Court, a nationalist movement began in Dec., 1905. In Aug., 1906, the Shah, admitting the need for reforms, granted a Constitution. The first elections for the Mejliss (National Council or Consultative Assembly) were held in Oct., 1906. A Cabinet of eight responsible Ministers was formed in Sept., 1907. In Oct., 1907, the Shah signed a new Constitution, limiting the sovereign prerogatives and ecclesiastical authority, and granting liberty of conscience, of the person, of education, of the press, of association, and of speech. But he broke his pledges and violently dissolved the Mejliss. A fresh nationalist movement sprang up, Tabriz being the centre of revolt. Owing to the vacillation of the Shah and the anarchical state of affairs, England and Russia made strong representations in favour of the restoration of a constitutional régime. A Russian force eventually crossed the frontier, while the revolutionary bands concentrated on Tehran, which was occupied without much fighting on 13 July, 1909. The Shah was deposed by the National Council, and his son, aged eleven years, appointed to succeed him. Brigandage and disorder have been rife in the provinces. A new Cabinet was formed in July, 1910. It has announced its intention of strengthening the army, punishing disorders, reforming the police and law courts, improving education and provincial administration, and employing foreign advisers in certain offices. Political disturbances continued up to August, 1910, when a military mutiny in Tehran was quickly suppressed. In October, 1910, England demanded the restoration within three months of security on the southern trade routes, failing which she will take over the policing of the Bushire-Ispahan route, charging the cost to Persian customs receipts. The country is in serious financial difficulties. The revenue, estimated at £7,000,000 for 1907-8, is derived from land tax, Crown lands, customs, and lease of monopolies. The total imports of merchandise into Persia in 1908-9 amounted to 372,500,000 krans, and the exports to 326,200,000 krans. Russia had about 48 per cent. of the imports and 70 per cent. of the exports; the British Empire 40 per cent. of the imports and 10 per cent. of the exports. Turkey and France were the other chief participators. Proximity to the best cultivated and most populous provinces, railways in Transcaspia, bounties on sugar, &c., and new roads from the frontier, have extended Russia's trade and influence. Persia's trade with Russia is chiefly through ports on the Caspian (on which only Russian vessels are allowed) or by the Trans-Caspian Railway, and with England and British India by way of the Persian Gulf. The seaborne trade of Persia passes chiefly through the ports of Bushire, Bunder Abbas and Mohammerah, and viâ Baghdad. There are several English firms at Bushire, the chief port on the Gulf and an entrepôt for trade with Shiraz, Ispahan, and Tehran, and many European business houses at Tehran, now the central exchange and money market, and at Tabriz, the entrepôt for European goods coming viâ Trebizond. The shipping of the Persian Gulf is principally British. A subsidised Russian line runs four steamers a year from Odessa, and a German line runs from Hamburg. Persia's chief imports are cotton piece-goods (mainly from England, India, and Russia) and sugar (from Russia and France), with woollen goods, silk goods, cotton yarn, tea, metal wares, gold and silver, petroleum, and indigo. The principal exports are dried fruits, raw cotton, pearls, opium, rice, wool, fish, hides and skins, carpets, and silk cocoons. A new specific tariff on imports and exports was introduced in 1903, when vexatious internal dues were abolished. The customs (as also the post-office) have, since 1900, been managed by European officials. Native dealers are reputed to be dishonest, and legal redress is hard to obtain. The (English) Imperial Bank of Persia has its head office at Tehran, with branches in the chief cities, and issues notes. There are also one Russian and several native banks. A concession for a German bank was granted in 1907. The foreign debt of Persia is about £3,400,000, at 6 per cent., borrowed in 1900 and 1902 from the Russian Banque d'Escompte for 75 years, and irredeemable for 10 years. It is guaranteed by the Russian Government, and secured on the customs. A new loan is being negotiated.

Peru is a maritime Republic of South America, situated between 1° 31′ 29″ and 19° 13′ S. latitude and between 62° 6′ and 81° 20′ 4 W. The territory between 17° 47′ S. and 19° S. is still occupied by Chile. The question of the provinces of Tacna and Arica is due to be settled by a plébiscite, which will determine to which the two countries these territories are to belon but it has not yet been possible to arrive at arrangement for carrying out the stipulations the Treaty of Ancon concerning these tw provinces. Peru has a coast line of about 1,3 miles. It is bounded on the north by t republics of Ecuador and Colombia, as the latt claims a territory in the Amazonian basin; on the east by the Brazils and Bolivia, and on t south by Chile and Bolivia. It is customary estimate the area of Peru at about 500,000 squa miles, but if the extreme claims of Peru be tak into consideration, the area is, of course, infinit larger. The population is estimated at 4,000,0 by the Lima Geographical Society. The count is traversed throughout its length by the And running parallel to the Pacific coast. The co region is sandy desert, except where water by transverse mountain streams, but capable cultivation in the highest degree by irrigati The valleys running to the coast are very ferti and the mountains are rich in minerals, amo which silver, quicksilver, copper and coal inferior quality) are conspicuous; while in t department of Tumbes, along the coast, there important beds of petroleum. Gold is found many districts, but especially in the province Carabaya, where mining on an important sc is carried on. An American syndicate has bou four-fifths of the whole mineral zone of Cerro Pasco, and many others in neighbouring min districts, and has constructed a railway fr Oroya to Cerro de Pasco. The eastern provin are of vast extent and fertility, with a tropi climate. The medicinal productions of t region are of great value, comprising cincho or Peruvian bark (of which little is now exporte sarsaparilla, copaiba, &c. India-rubber is important product of the country. Coca, coc and coffee are grown on a small scale. Suga the staple agricultural article of the count The Lobos and other islands on the Pacific co provide the guano.

The total length of the railways open (1 was 1,471 miles; the Central line runs from C to Oroya and Huancayo; the Southern line fr Mollendo by Arequipa to Puno on Lake Titi ith a branch to Cuzco. There is also steam avigation on that lake and the River Desaguaero. The eastern rivers are also navigated to me extent by steam craft. Wireless telegraphy ations have been established in many places, d several are contemplated in the near future. The Navy consists of six vessels, all in good condition, including two swift cruisers built at Barrow. The principal imports are coal, cotton, woollen, linen, and silk goods, drugs, earthen and stone ares, machinery, explosives, metals and manufactures thereof, oils, stationery, paper manufactures, timber, and wheat. The chief exports are ugar, copper and other ores, guano, gold, silver, otton, llama and alpaca wool, rubber, and cocaine. A small quantity of coffee is also exported.

For Education, see pp. 669–670.

Peru has no foreign debt. An arrangement as concluded in January, 1890, by the Peruvian overnment for the cancelling of the external bt (which amounted, with arrears of interest, over £50,000,000), under which the State always, the guano up to 2,000,000 tons, certain ghts in the Cerro de Pasco district, and vast acts of land are vested in the Peruvian Corporation. The disputes between the Government d the Corporation were settled in June, 1907. loan of £1,200,000 was concluded early in 1909 ith French financiers, and was partly used in payg off the £600,000 loan from the German Bank. he loan is guaranteed by the salt monopoly.

The total amount of the capital of the interest-earing funded debt is £2,660,645, bearing terest at the rate of 1 per cent. Claims of ery kind upon the Government are being conerted into a non interest bearing funded debt alled Deuda de Amortizacion), redeemed at a w rate, which fluctuates. On 30 June, 1907, the pital of this debt was £2,171,165.

Peru has now a gold standard. Exchange ctuates at about 24*d.* to the 5.

In October, 1910, King Manuel of Portugal was deposed and a Republic was proclaimed, order being quickly restored by the provisional Government.

Portugal lies in 37°—42° 8′ N. lat. and 6° 15′—9° 30′ W. long., being 360 miles in length from N. to S., and averaging about 100 in breadth from E. to W. Continental Portugal contains an area of 34,254 square miles, with a population in 1900 of 5,016,267, exclusive of the colonies. The Azores and Madeira (1,237 square miles, pop. 406,865) form part of the kingdom, which thus has a population of 5,423,132. The chief products are wheat, barley, oats, maize, flax, hemp, and the vine in elevated tracts; in the lowlands, rice, olives, oranges, lemons, citrons, figs, and almonds. There are extensive forests of oak, chestnut, sea-pine, and cork, the cultivation of the vine and the olive being among the chief branches of industry; the rich red wine known to us as "port" is shipped from Oporto. Its mineral products are important—copper, lead, tin, antimony, coal, manganese, iron, slate, and bay-salt, which last, from its hardness and purity, is in demand. Its manufactures consist of gloves, silk, woollen, linen, and cotton fabrics, metal and earthenware goods, tobacco, cigars, &c. The exports consist to the extent of 50 per cent. of wine, which is the chief industrial product of the country; others are cork, cattle, copper-ore, fruits, oil, sardines and salt. The imports are manufactured goods—hardware, cotton and woollen stuffs, machinery, wheat, sugar, dried fish, coal, &c. The commercial marine (1906) numbered 630 steam and sailing vessels, of which only 17 steam and 5 sailing vessels exceeded 900 gross tonnage. Railways 1,504 miles in extent were open for traffic in 1906, and there are 5,301 miles of telegraph wire in 1902. For many years the national income has been considerably less than the expenditure; this deficiency has added to the national debt.

Defence (for Army, see p. 667).—The Navy consists of 39 steamers and 16 sailing vessels, many scarcely seaworthy, and about 4,898 sailors.

COLONIES AND DEPENDENCIES.

MADEIRA (imports, 1906, £454,506 ; exports, £232,840) and the AZORES are an integral part of Portugal proper ; the CAPE VERDE ISLANDS, off the Cape of that name in Senegambia, consist of St. Antonio, St. Nicolas, Fogo, Santiago, Bonvista, Sal, and some smaller islands, having a total area of 1,490 square miles, and a population of about 150,000 ; the capital is Porto Praia. In West Africa a portion of the GUINEA COAST, with the BISSAGOS ISLANDS, was acquired in 1885 ; the capital is Bolama, and the territory has an area of 14,370 square miles with about 1,500,000 inhabitants. In the Gulf of Guinea the two islands of ST. THOMAS (direct and transit trade with mother country, 1904, £1,715,000 ; principal export, cocoa) and PRINCIPE were obtained in 1879 ; area 420 square miles (population about 40,000). Between the French Congo and the Free State are the territories of LANDANA and CABENDA, area about 2,030 square miles (population 30,000); and extending from the left bank of the Congo river to the right bank of the Cumene river is the vast province of ANGOLA, Gov.-Gen., Maj. H. de Paiva Conceiro (direct and transit trade with mother country, 1904, £2,163,000 ; principal export, rubber), with about 1,350 miles of coast-line and an area of 510,670 square miles (population about 4,000,000). The capital of Angola is St. Paul de Loanda ; railways, 300 miles open, and about 250 miles of telegraph wires. LOURENZO MARQUES and MOZAMBIQUE together constitute PORTUGUESE EAST AFRICA, Gov.-Gen., Col. Freire d'Andrade ; area about 297,750 square miles, population 2,000,000. In the southern province are the ports of Lorenzo Marques (Delagoa Bay and Beira, and in the northern, Quilimane, Mozambique, and Ibo : the exports of Portuguese East Africa amounting to £1,500,000 in 1903, and the imports to £750,000. Parts of Mozambique are leased to the Mozambique Company and to the Nyassa Company ; Railways —Delagoa Bay Railway from Lorenzo Marques north-west to join the Transvaal system on the frontier, about 60 miles, and the Beira Railway, from Beira to Umtali on the border of Rhodesia, about 200 miles. PORTUGUESE INDIA.—The territory of GOA contains an area of 1,301 sq. miles, and a population of 475,51[illegible] (1901). The city of NOVA GOA (New Goa or Panjim), capital of that territory, and of all the Portuguese possessions east of the Cape of Good Hope, is situated on the Malabar Coast, about 265 miles S.S.E. of Bombay. Old Goa, five or six miles inland, has fallen into decay, but is still remarkable for its cathedral and ancient buildings. The Portuguese West of India Railway (51 miles) connects the rising port of Mormuga with the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway in British India. The chief products are rice, coco-nuts, and salt. The direct foreign trade is small, but there is a large transit trade with British India. Commerce is chiefly in the hands of natives of British India. The principal imports are cotton piece-goods, food-grains, kerosene, sugar, tobacco, &c. ; the principal exports are coco-nuts, manganese ore, salt, fish, &c. The other Portuguese possessions in India are DAMAUN (area 149 sq. miles, pop. 41,671), to the north of Bombay ; and DIU, a town and fort on an island off the Gujarat coast (pop. 14,61[illegible] area 20 sq. miles). Of the total population (531,798) of Portuguese India, 262,548 are Catholics, 260,144 Hindus, and 8,431 Mohammedans. The revenue of the Portuguese possessions amounts to about £155,000.

Governor-General, Dr. C. da Costa.

Portugal also possesses rather more than half the island of TIMOR in the East Indian Archipelago and MACAO, an island near the mouth of the Canton river.

The Kingdom of Rumania consists of the Moldo-Wallachian provinces formerly belonging to Turkey, but which by the Treaty of Berlin, 13 July, 1878, were recognised as an independent State, and the territory of the Dobruja added to them. On the 26th March, 1881, Rumania was raised to a Kingdom. The entire area is 50,702 square miles, with a population of about 7,700,000. The dominating religion is that of the Greek Church (5,200,000); Roman Catholics, 14,200; Protestants, 13,800; Jews, 400,000. The soil is among the richest in Europe, and, but for the fearful summer droughts, would be also the most productive. The climate is extreme, for summer heats and winter colds are intense. The agricultural produce consists of wheat, maize, millet, barley, rye, beans, and peas. Vines and fruits are abundant. The forests are of great extent and importance, but the riches of the country consist mainly in its cattle and sheep. Minerals and precious metals are said to be abundant, but only salt and petroleum are obtained. The imports are chiefly the manufactured goods of Western Europe; the exports consist principally of wheat, barley, maize, petroleum (over £1,000,000 in 1906), rock-salt, spirits, hides, wood and cattle. The total length of railways is 2,295 miles (1904), and there are 223 telegraph offices with 9,915 miles of wire.

An International Commission, created by the Treaty of Paris, 1856, and whose powers were enlarged by the Treaty of Berlin, 1878, has its seat at Galatz, and exercises sovereign powers over the navigation of the Danube. Its income, principally derived from shipping dues, amounts to about £60,000 per annum. On November 10, 1892, a large dock was opened at Ibraila, and in 1896 a canal through the "Iron Gates" rendered that hitherto dangerous part perfectly navigable.

Defence (for Army, see p. 667).—There is a small navy of 45 vessels.

An Empire comprising one-sixth of the territorial surface of the globe, stretching over a large portion of its northern regions, and approaching very nearly in extent to the dominion under British rule. In addition to Russia in Europe (exclusive of the Caucasus), situate between lat. 44° 28′–76° 33′ N. and 17° 40′–64° 33′ E. long., and embracing more than half of that continent, it comprehends one-third of Asia, and until 1867 included also a large section of North America. The empire comprises:

Central Asiatic possessions, 10·5 in Finland, and 8·3 for the whole Empire.

In the European parts of Russia alone the population increases annually at the rate of nearly a million and a half. The largest towns are St. Petersburg (1,678,000), Moscow (1,173,427), Warsaw (756,426), Odessa (449,673), Lodz (351,570), Kieff (329,000), Riga (256,197), Kharkoff (197,405), Vilna (162,633), Saratov (143,431), Kazan (143,707), Ekaterinoslav (135,552), Rostoff (119,880), Astrakhan (121,580), Tula (109,279), and Kishineff (125,787); whilst Nijni Novgorod, Nikolaieff, Samara and Minsk have populations between 90,000 and 95,000. In Asiatic Russia the Caucasus contains two towns with over 100,000 inhabitants, Baku (179,133) and Tiflis (160,645); Turkestan contains five large towns, Tashkend (156,000), Namangan, Samarkand and Andijan; in Siberia Tomsk, Irkutsk, and Ekaterinburg have each about 50,000 inhabitants. Nijni Novgorod, though small, is a station on the Trans-Siberian Railway, and has annually the largest fair in the world.

Nationalities (1905)*.—The various nationalities were represented about as follows:—Russ, two-thirds of the whole population, or 65·5%; Poles, 6·2%; Lithuanians, 2·4%; Germans, 1·6%; Armenians, 0·9%; Jews, 3·9%; Caucasians, 0·9%; Finns, 4·5%; Turco-Tartars, 10·6%; Mongols, 0·4%; various, 2·0%.

Religions (1905)*.—The established religion of the empire is the Russo-Greek Church, officially called the Orthodox Catholic Faith. According to religions there were:—Orthodox, 69·9%; Mussulman, 10·83%; Roman Catholics, 8·91%; Protestants, 4·85%; Jews, 4·05%; other Christian beliefs, 0·96%; other non-Christian beliefs, 0·50%.

European Russia consists mainly of an immense plain; the Valdai hills in the west rise only to about 1,000 ft., and the Lublin hills in the south-west to about 1,500 ft. On the right bank of Lake Imandra, in the Kola peninsula, is an elevation of 3,300 ft. The Timanski range, in the province of Archangel, rises to about 3,000 ft., and Mount Lujaur-Ort in Finland to about 3,400 ft. In the Crimea and Caucasus various heights are over 4,500 ft., and the Obdorsk and Ural Mountains, which form the borderland between Europe and Asia, rise in many places to between 4,000 and 5,000 ft. In Siberia the principal ranges are the Altai, Sayansk, Baikal, Yablonoi and Verkhoiansk mountains, with a volcanic chain in Kamtchatka. In Russian Turkestan are portions of the Thian Shan range, and in Bokhara are the Pamirs, the "Roof of the World," and in all these ranges are heights of over 5,000 ft. The principal rivers are the Volga, Ural, Dnieper, Dniester, Don, Dvina, Duna, and Neva. The Volga is the largest river in Europe, and is navigable almost to its source. In Siberia, the Ob, Yenisei, Lena, and Amur are each larger than the Volga, with many important tributaries. The river Amur, dividing Manchuria from Eastern Siberia, is navigable from its mouth to Chita, in the Trans-Baikal province, by shallow draught steamers, and is of importance, together with the Trans-Siberian Railway, in spreading Russian influence in the outlying portions of the Chinese Empire.

Agriculture.—A great portion of Russia is unfit for cultivation; in the north the tundras are almost constantly frozen, but in a short summer provide good pasture and certain berries fit for human food; in the south, round the head of the Caspian Sea, is an immense sandy desert steppe; whilst some of the interior provinces (to the extent of about 460,000,000 acres) and nearly the whole of Siberia are clothed with forests, in which the fir, pine, birch, oak, lime, maple and ash predominate. The country between the Baltic and Black Sea, however, is eminently fertile, producing abundance of grain. †The chief cereals raised in 1909 were‡: rye (winter-sown, 442,490,968 cwt.; spring-sown, 6,121,613 cwt.), wheat (winter 110,852,903 cwt.; spring, 308,945,161 cwt.), oats (327,396,451 cwt.), barley (203,070,000 cwt.), millet (40,281,428 cwt.), buckwheat (19,530,000 cwt.) maize (30,583,928 cwt.), potatoes (641,567,742 cwt.). Hemp and flax are extensively cultivated and of late years potatoes (29,010,855 tons in 1908 and tobacco (100,000 tons in 1907).

Minerals.—The Obdorsk and Ural Mountain contain very great mineral riches, and, with the Altai range, are the principal seat of mining and metallic industry, producing gold, platinum copper, iron of very superior quality, rock-salt marble, and kaolin, or china-clay. Silver, gold and lead are also obtained in large quantities from the mines in the Altai Mountains. Russia is now the largest producer of petroleum in the world, the output amounting to 410,000,000 poods (of 36 lb.) in 1905. An immense bed of coal, both steam and anthracite, and apparently inexhaustible, has been discovered in the basin of the Donetz (between the rivers Donetz and Dnieper). †The coal output for the whole of Russia in 1906 was 21,000,000 tons; other mineral products in 1907 were pig iron (4,227,419 tons), gold, 1904 (1,193,936 oz.); platinum (306 poods = tons, being 95 per cent. of the world's output), steel and rails (1906, 2,000,000 tons), copper (14,401,000 poods in 1907), and quicksilver (325 tons in 1904).

Ports.—The principal ports are Petersburg, the naval depôt and fortress Kronstadt, Narva, Riga, Libau, Pernau and Vindau (Baltic), Hango (Gulf of Bothnia), Revel, Helsingfors and Wiborg (Gulf of Finland), Archangel and Ekaterinsk (Arctic and White Seas), Odessa, Nicolaieff, Sevastopol, Nova-Rossiisk, Berdiansk, and Batoum, Taganrog, Mariupol, Rostoff and Kertch (Black Sea and Sea of Azov), Astrakhan, Derbent and Baku (Caspian Sea), and Nicolaieffsk, Vladivostok, and Petropaulovsk in Kamtchatka (Pacific).

† Trade and Commerce.—Exports of merchandise from European Russia in 1909 were estimated at £144,208,229, and the imports £83,213,500. The chief imports are cotton, tea, and other colonial produce, iron and machinery, wool, wine, fruits and vegetables, oil, &c. The chief exports are grain (56 per cent.), raw and dressed flax, linseed, timber, hides and skins, hemp, tallow, wool, spirits, tow and bristles. † The trade of Russia in 1909 was divided among the principal commercial nations as follows (in millions of £ sterling):—

Imports from:—	1908.	1909.
U.K.	12·0	13·5

Defence (for Army, see p. 667).—The Navy for which £11,957,064 was allowed in 1911) consisted of the Baltic Fleet, the Caspian flotilla, and the Black Sea Fleet, the number of vessels being shown on p. 473. In 1909 4 Dreadnoughts (23,000 tons) were laid down, and in 1910 4 battleships and 2 cruisers were completed for sea. The Navy was manned by 2,442 officers and 32,901 men.

Education (see p. 670).

†Communications.—The total length of lines open for traffic in 1909 was over 45,171 miles (28,553 Government, and 13,381 private lines), exclusive of 2,124 miles in Finland, and 1,114 miles of the Eastern China Railway; and 3,195 miles were under construction. In 1909 the gross revenue amounted to £91,012,742, an increase of 8¼ per cent. on 1908. The number of passengers carried was 111,183,257, and goods traffic amounted to 176,717,339 tons.

*There were (1907) 14,959 post-offices, carrying 1,634,329,000 letters, &c. Of telegraphs there were (1907) 7,403 offices, with 409,492 miles of line.

The sea-going commercial marine consisted in 1910 of 708 steamers, with a total tonnage of 760,785, and 638 sailing vessels of 211,612 net tons; the ocean shipping of the Russian Empire is comparatively insignificant, but the internal (lake and river) shipping is considerable.

Finance.—The main source of revenue is the liquor traffic. The revenue (1907) from the Government spirits monopoly (which has now been introduced practically throughout the Empire) was, gross revenue £71,000,000, and net £51,000,000.

National Debt.—The National Debt amounted on 1 (14) January, 1909, to £935,014,094. The total of gold in the State Bank at 1 (14) October, 1909, was £140,000,000, being an increase of £13,000,000 as compared with 1908.

THE GRAND DUCHY OF FINLAND.

Grand Duke, The Emperor of Russia.

Governor-General, General Seyn.

A Grand Duchy on the gulfs of Finland and Bothnia, which was conquered by Russia from Sweden, and finally annexed in 1808. The area is 144,254 square miles, with a population of about 3,000,000 in 1907, of whom about 2,600,000 are Finns, 400,000 Swedes, 19,000 Russians, 3,000 Germans, and 2,000 Laps, leading a nomadic life in the north. Nearly all the inhabitants are Lutherans. There is a university at Helsingfors, with 2,512 students, of whom 518 are women. The leading crops are rye, barley, oats, potatoes. Saw mills and paper manufacture provide the chief industry, and the forests are a great source of wealth, immense quantities of timber being prepared for export; dairy produce is also exported. There are 2,582 miles of railway; and a merchant fleet of 3,120 vessels (mostly small), of which 399 are steamers.

The country was formerly governed by the Imperial Finnish Senate, of 22 members, with a Diet of 4 estates elected by the people. This form of government gave way on Jan. 1, 1907, to a new Constitution involving a single Chamber elected by universal suffrage of both sexes. Women are likewise eligible for election to the Chamber. Finland is thus the first country to concede woman suffrage and representation, and it is noteworthy that it has been gained without agitation. The Finnish troops only exist in name, the Diet having voted £400,000 per annum to the Russian Treasury in lieu of furnishing Finnish recruits to the army or navy, and Finland has been made part of the Petersburg Military District. The estimated revenue in 1909 is £3,109,000, and the estimated expenditure £3,318,000; the debt amounts to £5,556,420. †The imports in 1908 were £14,504,000 (of which 60 per cent. was timber), and the exports £9,728,000. The capital is Helsingfors; population, 160,000 (including Russian garrison).

Salvador extends along the Pacific coast for 170 miles, with a general breadth of 43 miles, and contains an estimated area of 7,230 square miles, with a population estimated at 1,000,000. It is divided into 14 departments, and has four ports, Acajutla, La Libertad, La Union, and El Triumfo. The principal exports are coffee, indigo, tobacco, sugar, silver, balsam (known as balsam of Peru), rice, hides, cedar, and fustic. A railway nearly 100 miles in length connects Acajutla with the capital and Santa Ana, the coffee centre. Earthquakes are frequent, and the capital (now rebuilt) was entirely destroyed by one in 1873; but the country has of lat years suffered comparative immunity. There ar 85 post-offices and 168 telegraph offices, wit 2,800 miles of wire.

A Kingdom of Eastern Europe, separated from Hungary by the Danube and Save. By the constitution of 1889 a "Skupstchina," a parliament elected by ballot, represented the people; this constitution was re-established by the present king. By the Berlin Treaty, 1878, it received a large accession of territory, and now has an area estimated at 18,757 square miles, with a population in 1905 of 2,700,000. The surface of the country is mountainous, containing the remains of formerly extensive forests and uncultivated heaths. Agriculture is carried on in a somewhat primitive fashion. The principal crops are maize for home consumption, and wheat for export; flax, hemp, and tobacco are also grown, and silk-culture is carried on to a limited extent. The imports consist mainly of cottons, sugar, and colonial goods, hardware, woollens, &c.; the export, of dried prunes (11·6 per cent.), pigs, and wool, besides wheat, wine, hides, cattle, and horses. The bulk of the trade is with Austria. There were (1909) 400 miles of railway, and, in 1908, 2,200 miles of telegraph, with 1,460 post-offices and 1,100 miles of telephone.

SIAM.

King, Somdetch Phra Paramendr Maha Vajiravudh Mongkut Klao, born 1 January, 1880; succeeded 23 October, 1910.
Foreign Minister, H.R.H. Krom Luang Dewawongse.

The Kingdom of Siam, or Muong T'ai, (area about 200,000 square miles; pop. about 6½ millions), is a buffer State between British Burma and French Indo-China. The boundary of Burma and N.W. Siam was demarcated in 1891. By the Anglo-French agreement of May, 1896, the main central part of Siam, including the basins of the rivers Menam, Petchaburi, and Petriu, was neutralised, the two Governments agreeing not to send troops or obtain any exclusive advantages in it, while retaining freedom of action in the regions west and east of the neutralised zone. The western portion, adjoining British territory, includes the Malay States dependent on Siam. The eastern portion, the Mekong Valley, including Battambang and Angkor, adjoins Cambodia and the territories acquired by France under the treaty with Siam in 1893. By the Anglo-French Agreement of April, 1904, both Powers disclaimed any intention of annexing the Siamese territory in their respective spheres of influence. By an arrangement with Siam France abandoned Chantabun and the 25-kilometre neutral zone of the 1893 treaty; but the port of Krat became French, while France received trading concessions on the right bank of the Mekong and power to make railways where navigation of the river is impossible. The provinces of Melupre and Bassac were recognised as French. By a further treaty in 1907, the territories of Battambang, Siem-reap, and Angkor (total area 20,000 sq. kils., pop. 200,000), on the frontier of Cambodia, were ceded by Siam to France, which, in return, gave back to Siam the district of Krat, and made slight concessions in Dansai (Laos), at the same time concluding an arrangement for the gradual abandonment of the ex-territorial privileges hitherto enjoyed by French Asiatic subjects and protégés in Siam. In 1909 Siam transferred to Great Britain all rights over the Malay States of Kelantan, Tringganu, Kedah, Perlis, and adjacent islands. In future British subjects are to come under the jurisdiction of the ordinary Siamese Courts, though European legal advisers will be present. The upper part of Siam is mountainous, the lower flat. Siam contains many Chinese (largely engaged in trade and industry), besides Shans, Laos, Malays, Burmese, and Cambodians, and over 1,600 Europeans. The principal religion is Buddhism, and education is mostly conducted by the Buddhist monks. Bangkok is the only much-frequented port. Over 75 per cent. of Siamese sea-borne trade, which centres at Bangkok, is with the British Empire, and is largely in the hands of British firms or of Chinese trading from Singapore and Hong Kong. German shipping now largely exceeds British through the purchase of certain British steamship lines. Norwegian shipping also exceeds British. The chief products of Siam are rice and teak. The area under rice has been much enlarged by irrigation. There are about 60 rice mills, mostly in or near Bangkok. The teak industry in the great forests of N. Siam is mainly in English hands. In 1909-10 rice constituted 83 per cent. and teak 7 per cent. of the exports; while hides and marine products are also exported in considerable quantities. Among imports are treasure, cotton goods and yarn, silk goods, provisions, gunny bags, kerosene, sugar, opium, metals and metal wares, machinery, &c. The general tariff rate is 3 per cent. ad valorem. In 1909-10 the total imports by sea were £5,279,000, and the exports £7,756,000 (rice £6,433,000, and teak £527,000). Burma imports teak and cattle overland from Siam, and exports thither cotton and silk goods, &c. Except tin, rubies and sapphires, there are no important mineral products. The King is an absolute monarch. He appoints his successor. King Chulalongkorn, who died in 1910, after a reign of 42 years, was the author of many reforms. There is an Executive Council of Ministers and a European general adviser, and, since 1895, a Legislative Council of State, consisting of the Ministers, eight royal princes, and over twenty members appointed by the King, who has an absolute power of veto. A number of English, French, Germans, Italians, Danes, and Japanese are employed in the various State departments. The administration of the revenue and of justice and the police has been improved. The revenue (about 50,000,000 ticals) is derived from opium and spirit monopolies, land, fishery, and capitation taxes, customs, &c. A 4 per cent. loan of £4,000,000 has been arranged for railways in the Malay Peninsula. Siam has an army of about 20,000 men, and a few small gunboats. A system of compulsory military service has been introduced. About 650 miles of railways (mostly State-owned) are now open for traffic. Bangkok is connected by rail with Petchaburi (95 miles to the west), and with Korat (165 miles to the north-east). The former line is being extended southwards down the Malay Peninsula. The northern State line, in the direction of Chiengmai (pop. 50,000), the second town in size and near the Burma-Siam frontier, has reached Meh Puak, its terminus for the present. The eastern State line from Bangkok was opened as far as Petriu in 1908. Good roads are few. There are 3,000 miles of telegraph lines.

The currency is the silver tical, worth about 1s. 6½d.; the introduction of a gold standard is contemplated whereby the value of the tical will be fixed. The Mint was closed to the free coinage of silver in Nov., 1902. In N.W. Siam the Indian rupee is more or less current. The Government issues notes.

A Kingdom situate in the south-west of Europe, between 36° 0′—43° 45′ N. lat. and 4° 25′ E.—9° 20′ W. long., bounded on the south and east by the Mediterranean, on the west by the Atlantic and Portugal, and on the north by the Bay of Biscay and France, from which it is separated by the Pyrenees; and occupying the larger portion of the great Iberian Peninsula. Its coast-line extends 1,317 miles—712 formed by the Mediterranean and 605 by the Atlantic. It was formerly divided into 14 kingdoms (now forming 49 provinces); the ancient Provinces still best understood are New Castile, La Mancha, Old Castile, Leon, Asturias, Galicia, Estremadura, Andalusia, Murcia, Valencia, Aragon, Catalonia, Basque Provinces, with the Canary Isles and the Balearic Isles (Majorca and Minorca), comprising a total area of 196,173 English square miles, and an estimated population, 31 Dec., 1907, of 19,712,585. The principal towns are Madrid (pop., 540,000), Barcelona (700,000), Valencia (214,000), Seville (150,000), Malaga (130,000), Murcia (112,000); Carthagena (100,000), and Saragossa (100,000); and there are also eleven towns with over 50,000 inhabitants. The Constitution upon which the present government is formed is dated 30 June, 1876. The interior of the peninsula consists of an elevated tableland, surrounded and traversed by mountain ranges—the Pyrenees, the Cantabrian Mountains, the Sierra Guadarrama, S. Morena, S. Nevada, Montes de Toledo, &c. The principal rivers are the Douro, the Tagus, the Guadiana, the Guadalquiver, the Ebro, and the Minho. Spain is rich in iron, copper, and lead; its mineral resources are only partially exploited, and principally by foreign capital under foreign direction. The country is generally fertile, and well adapted to agriculture and the cultivation of heat-loving fruits—as olives, oranges, lemons, almonds, pomegranates and dates. The agricultural products comprise wheat, barley, maize, oats, rice, with hemp and flax of the best quality. The vine is cultivated in every province; in the south-west, Jerez, the well-known sherry and tent wines are made in the south-east, the Malaga and Alicante. The principal articles imported are raw cotton, spirits, fish, wheat and flour, sugar, coal, timber, woollen manufactures, machinery and railway materials, hides, &c. The principal exports are wine, copper and copper ores, lead, iron ores, olive oil, raisins, oranges, cork, esparto grass, wool, salt, quicksilver, grapes, &c. Trade was for many years mostly confined to France and Great Britain, but Germany has now become a serious competitor, while the United States and Belgium share an increasing proportion of Spanish trade. Home manufacture is rigidly protected by high customs duties.

The sea-going mercantile marine on Jan. 1, 1910, consisted of 550 steamers and 305 sailing vessels over 50 tons, of a total tonnage of 745,521. During 1909, 20,284 vessels of 20,026,96 tons entered, and 18,024 vessels of 19,684,10 tons cleared at Spanish ports.

Nearly all the 49 Provinces are now connected by railways, of which about 11,268 miles of normal gauge were open in 1906; there are about 20,000 miles of telegraph.

The principal exports to the United Kingdom in 1909 were:—

Copper	£1,224,200	Lead	£1,143,127
Cork	188,184	Pyrites(iron&copper)	951,947
Grapes, Raw	320,350	Quicksilver	296,663
Nuts (inc. Almonds)	557,666	Esparto, &c.	192,968
Oranges	2,024,542	Olive Oil	108,191
Raisins	375,883	Onions	630,312
Other Fruit	268,06	Silver Ore	113,061
Iron Ore	3,683,692	Wine	449,455

And the chief domestic imports from the United Kingdom in 1909 were:—

Chemicals	£214,583	Metals, all sorts	£415,124
Coal and Coke	1,404,890	Ships and Boats	182,388
Cottons	320,028	Wool, &c.	253,280
Machinery	523,731	Yarn. Jute & Linen	96,221
Manure	741,423

Defence (for Army, see p. 667).

The Navy was almost entirely destroyed during the war of 1897 with the U.S.A., and there now remain one second-class battleship of 10,000 tons, the Pelayo (1887); a cruiser of 10,000 tons, the Carlos V. (1895), two of 7,000 tons, the Cataluña (1900), and Princesa de Asturias (1896); one of 6,000 tons, Reina Regente (1906); two old armoured coast defence ships of 7,300 tons, Numancia (1863) and Vitoria (1865); the royal yacht Giralda, 2,057 tons; two cruisers of about 2,000 tons, five destroyers, three training ships, and small craft. Under a scheme of reconstruction, three large battleships are to be built, the keel of the first having been already laid at Ferrol.

SPANISH OVER-SEA POSSESSIONS.

The over-sea possessions are regarded as an integral part of Spain, the headquarters of the local administration being Teneriffe, in the Canary Islands. In the Gulf of Guinea, the island of FERNANDO Po, and ANNOBOM, CORISO and ELOBY islands off the coast of French Congo. On the mainland CAPE SAN JUAN and the right of navigation over the rivers Benito and Muni, with the district bounded on the north by the German Cameroons, on the east by the 9th meridian E. of Paris, and on the south by the Muni river, while the district between Capes Bojador and Blanco is under protection. To the north-west are the CANARY ISLES (area about 3,000 square miles, population 334,521), the capital being Santa Cruz (Teneriffe). In Morocco are several "Presidios"; and TETUAN and CEUTA (30 square miles, population 16,000), opposite Gibraltar, and the coast towns of Gomera, Alhucemas, Melilla, and the Zafarin Islands. These possessions have drawn Spain into an expensive though not inglorious war with the Sultan of Morocco. The total area of Spain's African possessions is about 244,000 square miles, with a population of about 135,000.

Sweden comprises the eastern half of the Scandinavian peninsula, and, except the capital, is divided into 24 governments, "Län," with an area of 172,876 square miles, and a population, 31 Dec., 1909, of 5,476,441, nearly all Protestant. Nearly 51 per cent. of the population are devoted to agriculture, about 299,000 being owners and 53,000 tenants of the land they cultivate. The country for the most part is flat, with pleasant undulations, rising in the north-west to the Kölen Mountains, which separate Sweden from Norway; and may be divided into three separate districts—the northern, forest; central, mining; the southern, agricultural. The lakes cover about one-twelfth of the surface. The climate in the south is favourable for producing grain. The principal articles of cultivation are the various cereals—oats, rye, barley, wheat—and potatoes. The forests are very extensive, covering one-half of the surface of the country, and consisting of pine, birch, fir; these are of great importance, supplying timber, pitch, and tar, and also the chief fuel. The mineral products are extremely rich; iron of excellent quality, that known as the Dannemora iron being converted into the finest steel; gold and silver in small proportions; copper, lead, nickel, zinc, cobalt, alum, sulphur, porphyry, and marble. There is a railroad opening up the rich iron-ore districts of Lapland, and mineral trains run from Gellivare and Kiruna to Lulea on the Gulf of Bothnia and to Narvik on the Atlantic. Considerable mines of coal are being worked in Scania. The chief imports are coffee, wine, tobacco, and other ordinary colonial produce, coal, cloth, yarn, wool, cotton, hides, manure, iron, fish, oils, wheat, rye, pork, and machinery. The chief articles of export are timber, butter, iron, steel, wood pulp, paper, matches, stone, iron and zinc ores, &c. The chief domestic exports to Great Britain in 1907 were butter, iron, paper and paper-making materials, and timber; and the chief domestic imports from Great Britain in 1907 were coal, machinery, metals, wool and woollen manufactures.

Commercial travellers in Sweden are compelled to take out a licence, costing 100 crowns a month, or they incur the risk of being fined.

Railways 8,458 miles in length (of which 2,717 are the property of the State) were open at the end of 1909; and 19,924 miles of telegraph wires (exclusive of 16,929 railway telegraph wires), 177 stations, and 1,701 railway and 871 other telegraph stations (1909). There were at the same date about 200,000 miles of telephone wires.

Defence (for Army, see p. 667). The Navy consists of 82 fighting vessels (438 guns), 23 being ironclads, with submarines, submersibles and some training ships, &c.

The Helvetia of the Romans, a Federal Republic of Central Europe, situated between 45° 50′—47° 48′ N. lat. and 5° 58′—10° 30′ E. long. It is composed of 22 Cantons, of very dissimilar size, united under a Constitution dated 29 May, 1874, and comprises a total area of 15,469 square miles, with a population of 3,463,609 in 1905, who are divided between Roman Catholics, 40 per cent., and Protestants, 59 per cent., Jews numbering 7,400 and others 11,000. The population is formed by three nationalities, distinct by their language, as German 71 per cent., French 21 per cent., Italian 6 per cent., and Romanshe (in the Grisons), 1½ per cent. The most important cities are Zürich, pop. (1909) 190,000, Basle 130,000, Geneva 120,000, Berne 75,000, and Lausanne 56,000. It is the most mountainous country in Europe, having the Alps, covered with perennial snow and glaciers, rising from 5,000 to 15,213 feet in height, not only along its southern and eastern frontiers, but throughout the chief part of its interior; and the Jura mountains in the north-west. Agriculture is followed chiefly in the valleys, where wheat, oats, maize, barley, flax, hemp, and tobacco are produced, and nearly all English fruits and vegetables are grown. The forests cover about one-sixth of the whole surface. The manufactures consist chiefly of silks, cottons, linen, lace, thread, woollens, &c. ; clocks and watches have long been the staple products of Geneva and Neufchâtel, while leather, gloves, pottery, tobacco and snuff, cheese, &c., are made. Being an inland country, the direct trade with the United Kingdom is comparatively small. In 1909 there were 3,200 miles of railway in working order, 5,500 miles of telegraph line, 11,000 miles of telephone line, and 1,850 post offices.

The legislative power is vested in a Parliament, consisting of two Chambers, a National Council of 167 members, and a Council of States of 44 members ; both Chambers united are called the Federal Assembly, and the members of the National Council are elected for three years, an election taking place in October. The executive power is in the hands of a Federal Council of 7 members, elected by the Federal Assembly, presided over by the President of the Confederation. The President has a salary of £720 ; the Vice-President and other members of the Federal Council £600 each. The members of the Federal Council are elected for three years : each year the Federal Assembly elects from this council the President and the Vice-President ; they are elected for one year, the five other members for three years. Not more than one of the same canton may be elected member of the Federal Council. (For Defence, see p. 667 ; for Education, see p. 670.)

the frontiers of Tunis to those of Egypt, a distance along the coast line of nearly 1,100 miles, and inland to the south a distance of about 800 miles. Formerly (1713–1835) it was under a native (Karamanly) dynasty, and passed under direct Turkish control in 1835. It comprises the four sub-provinces or Mutesarificks of Tripoli, Khoms, Jabel-el-Gharb and Fezzan, and also of Benghazi or Cyrenaica, the latter being under the direct government of Constantinople since 1875. It has an area of 410,000 square miles, and a population of over 1,000,000 in Tripoli proper and Cyrenaica. There are no rivers in the country, and, the rainfall being precarious, a good harvest can only be reckoned on every four or five years. The military force of the country now numbers 10,000 men. The revenue is chiefly raised by a poll-tax, regulated according to the wealth of each individual, and by tithes, but steps are being taken to co-ordinate the incidence of taxation with that obtaining in other parts of Turkey. Barley, dates, olives, oranges, lemons and vegetables are produced, and the principal imports are metals, British and other European manufactures, tea, beads, wine and spirits, besides a number of articles for barter in Wadai, Bornu, and the Western Sudan, whither caravans proceed from Tripoli; but the caravan trade, once the mainstay of the country, has seriously diminished of late years. The principal articles of exports are ostrich feathers, ivory, skins, sponges, hides, esparto grass, cattle and horses. The ancient ruins in Cyrenaica, i.e., at Cyrene, Ptolemais, and Apollonia, are interesting to explorers, as well as those at Leptis Magna, which is close to Khoms, or 70 miles from the city of Tripoli; agricultural colonies of Cretan Moslem refugees are being formed in the neighbourhood of Cyrene and Apollonia (Marsa Susa). The town of Benghazi has a population of about 21,000, consisting of Arabs, Greeks, Maltese, and a few Levantines. The commerce in cereals, wool, cattle for Malta, and other agricultural produce, is considerable, when a sufficient rainfall causes good harvests.

(French Protectorate.)

Bey, Mohamed en-Nasir Bey; born 1855; succ. 12 May, 1906.
Heir Presumptive, Mohamed Ben Mahmoun Bey, b. 1858.
French Resident-General, Gabriel Alapetite (7 Feb., 1907).

The Regency of Tunis—the ancient Lybia—was occupied (it is believed) by the Phœnicians so far back as the 14th century B.C.; by the Romans in 146 B.C.; by the Vandals in 439 A.D.; and by the Arabs in 698 A.D. This latter period witnessed a succession of powers—Berber (1048), Spanish (1535), Turkish (1573), and Husseinite (1705). Finally, by the Treaty of "The Bardo" (12 May, 1881), the Regency passed into the hands of France, and is under the control of a French Resident General. By its terms the occupation is to terminate when both French and Tunisian authorities mutually recognise that the local Government is capable of maintaining order. By a convention of 18 Sept., 1897, all previously executed treaties and conventions between the U.K. and France were extended to Tunisia, and Article 2 of this convention, dealing with British cotton goods, remains in force up to the end of 1912. By convention of 10 July, 1882, the Bey is granted a civil list of £37,500, and the Beylical princes £30,000. Area, 44,920 square miles. Population, 1,800,000. Exports: Barley, beans, blankets, bran, carpets, cork, dates, esparto grass, Fez caps, goats, hides, lead, oats, olive oil, phosphates, sheep, silk goods, tan bark, tunny fish, wheat, wine, wool, zinc, &c. Imports: Alcohol, boots and shoes, building material, clocks and watches, coal, cotton goods, cars and carriages, flour, glassware, hardware, milk (condensed), motors, rail and tram cars, wrought iron, and steel.

The chief town, Tunis (pop. 227,519 composed of—Moslems 100,000, Jews 50,000, French 18,626 Italians 52,076, Maltese 6,174), is an inland port, with a basin of 1,800 square mètres with 21½ feet of water, 1,875 feet of quays, cranes up to 20 tons, connected with the sea by a canal 10 kilometres long, 98 feet wide, and dredged to 21½ feet. Port dues 1 fr. per ton (phosphates 50 c.), harbour dues 30 c., sanitary dues 18 c. N.E. of Tunis is the site of ancient Carthage (15 kilometres). There are 713 miles of railroad and 3,906 of telegraph.

Area.—The Ottoman Empire comprises an area of about 66,500 square miles in South Eastern Europe, about 680,000 square miles in Asia, and about 399,000 square miles in Africa, containing altogether about 25,000,000 inhabitants. The Sultan is also suzerain of Crete, Cyprus, Samos, and Egypt; and until the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria-Hungary, and the declaration of independence by Bulgaria in 1908, of those territories also.

Government.—A form of constitution modelled on that of Western European countries was suggested by various reformers from 1856–1878, but until 1908 the rule of the Sultan was based on the precepts of the Koran. On 24 July, 1908 an Imperial Iradé promulgated a constitution which embraced an elective legislature.

I. TURKEY IN EUROPE, formerly very extensive, is now reduced to 66,500 square miles, with a population (1901) of about 6,000,000, including about 700,000 Turks, 1,500,000 Albanians, and 1,300,000 Greeks, Bulgarians, and Wallachians. About 2,500,000 are Mohammedans. European Turkey comprises the vilayets of Adrianople, Salonika, Monastir, Kossovo, Scutari, and Janina, together with the administrative district of Constantinople and the separate sanjak of Chatalja. The principal towns are Constantinople, the capital (pop. 1,100,000), Salonika (120,000), and Adrianople (80,000). A great part of the surface is covered with mountains of moderate elevation. The principal rivers are the Vardar, the Struma, and the Maritza. The soil is for the most part fertile, but owing to various causes little progress has been made in agriculture. The cultivated products are maize, rice, barley, millet, sesame and other oil seeds and tobacco; the natural products are the pine, beech, Valonia oak, oak, lime, and ash, with the palm, maple, sycamore, walnut, chestnut, carob, box, myrtle, laurel, &c., south of the Balkans; large forests of pine and fir in the north-west; the olive, orange, citron, vine, peach, plum, and fruit trees in Albania. The breeding of sheep is carried on extensively, and wool constitutes an important article of trade. The mineral products are iron in large quantity, lead blended with silver, copper, sulphur, salt, alum, and coal. Its manufactures are almost entirely domestic, such as woollen and cotton stuffs, carpets, shawls, leather, firearms, with dyeing and printing works. About 1,200 miles of railway were open in 1901.

II. TURKEY IN ASIA, the larger of the two divisions, has a total area of 680,000 square miles, and an estimated population of nearly 17,000,000 inhabitants. Asia Minor (pop. about 9,400,000) comprises the following vilayets: Broussa, Smyrna, Castamouni, Angora, Konia, Adana, Sivas, Trebizond, the islands of the Archipelago, and the Mutessarifats of Ismid and Bigha; in Armenia (pop. about 2,500,000) the vilayets of Erzeroum, Mamouret-ul-aziz (Kharput) Diarbekir, Bitlis and Van; in Arabia (pop. about 2,500,000) Mossul, Baghdad, Basra, Hedjaz and Yemen; in Syria (pop. about 3,250,000) Aleppo, Zor, Syria and Beyrout, with Jerusalem (see pp. 633–4) and Lebanon. The principal towns are Smyrna (200,000), Baghdad (145,000), Damascus (200,000), Aleppo (125,000), and Beyrut (120,000). Not far from Baghdad is Kerbela, the most sacred centre of pilgrimage for the Shia (Persian) Mohammedans. The trade of the Shat-el-Arab and its branches is considerable; much of it is carried by the vessels of the (British) Euphrates and Tigris Steam Navigation Company. The foreign trade, which passes chiefly through Bussorah, is mainly in the hands of the British India Steam Navigation Company. Beyond the Arabian desert, and lying along the N.E. coast of the Red Sea are the Turkish vilayets of the Hejaz and Yemen. The Hejaz includes the sacred cities of Mecca and Medina, the home of Mohammed, with the port of Jeddah (pop. 40,000), the mainstay of which is the pilgrim traffic. In Yemen are the towns of Sanaa, Assir, and Taiz. For some years past Yemen has been the scene of a serious rebellion. Hodeida (pop. 33,000), is its chief port. The Damascus-Mecca railway was opened for traffic as far as Medina in Sept., 1908. The Sinai peninsula belongs politically to Egypt.

In AFRICA, Turkey rules Tripoli and Barka (see p. (653–4).

Commerce.—The exports include tobacco, cereals, fruits, silk, opium, mohair, cotton, coffee, skins, wool, oil-seeds, valonia, carpets, &c., and are largely derived from the Asiatic provinces. Recently large quantities of wine and of raisins for the manufacture of wine have been exported. Among the imports, cotton and woollen manufactures take the foremost rank. Since the establishment of the Anatolian railway by German enterprise, the export of cereals, chiefly malting barley, has largely increased. The British Chamber of Commerce was established at Stamboul, Constantinople, in 1887, with branches at Smyrna and Salonica, and in the North of England (Manchester); Pres., Sir Adam Block, K.C.M.G.; Sec., H. E. Mountain. The commercial marine of Turkey consisted in 1901 of about 180 steamers, 60,000 tons, and 200 sea-going sailing vessels, 50,000 tons.

There are British Post-offices at Constantinople, Salonica, Smyrna, Beyrut, and Baghdad.

The principal domestic exports to the United Kingdom are corn, fruit, wool, and mohairs; the chief domestic imports from the United Kingdom are coal, Manchester goods, metals, and woollens.

Defence (for Army, see p. 667). In 1910 the Navy consisted of 7 battleships (2 bought from Germany), 2 protected cruisers, 3 torpedo gun-boats, 8 t.b.d. (4 bought from Germany), and about 14 torpedo boats, manned by a total peace force of about 15,000 men. Besides this, there is the Makhsussa Fleet of about 75 steamers of various sorts, worked by the Government and available as transports, storeships, and coast-guard cruisers. In 1909 a British flag officer was engaged, with six junior officers, to reorganise the Navy.

Education (see p. 670).

Finance.—The first official budget was published in March, 1909. By the Russo-Turkish agreement of the same year Russia relinquished 40 out of 74 annuities of £T350,000. A loan of £T7,000,000 was raised in 1909.

A Federal Republic, consisting of 46 partially independent States, 4 organized and 2 unorganized Territories, occupies the central portion of North America, between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, in lat. 25° -49° N. and long. 67°—124° 30′ W. The area is estimated at 3,622,933 square miles, of which rivers and lakes cover 55,562 square miles, excluding the water area of Alaska and Hawaii. This area includes the vast district of Alaska, in the extreme northwest of the continent, purchased from Russia 20 June, 1867, comprising 369,529,600 acres. About one-third of the country is estimated to be in a state of cultivation. The population of the whole of the States and Territories, according to the Census of 1900, was 76,356,000. In 1890 the Indians on reservation numbered 133,417; off reservation, 115,836 (including 58,806 civilised Indians); Chinese, 107,475; Japanese, 2,039; and Alaska, 32,052 (23,531 Indians). The increase in the ten years, 1880–1890, was 12,466,467, and 1890–1900, 13,018,609, exclusive of certain districts above alluded to.

Its coast-line on both oceans is reckoned to have a length of about 13,200 miles, besides 3,620 miles on the great lakes. The principal river is the mighty Mississippi-Missouri, traversing the whole country from north to south, and having a course of 4,500 miles to its mouth in the Gulf of Mexico; with many large affluents, the chief of which are the Yellowstone, Nebraska, Arkansas, Ohio, and Red rivers. The rivers flowing into the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans are comparatively small; among the former may be noticed the Hudson, Delaware, Susquehanna, Potomac, and Savannah; of the latter, the Columbia, Sacramento, and Colorado. The Mobile and Colorado of Texas fall into the Gulf of Mexico, also the Rio Grande, a large river partly forming the boundary with Mexico. The areas of the water-basins have been estimated as follows:—Rivers flowing to the Pacific, 644,040 square miles; to the Atlantic, 488,877; and to the Gulf of Mexico, 1,683,325 square miles, of which 1,257,547 are drained by the Mississippi-Missouri. The chain of the Rocky Mountains separates the western portion of the territory from the remainder, all communication being carried on over certain elevated passes, several of which are now traversed by railroads; west of these, bordering the Pacific coast, the Cascade Mountains and Sierra Nevada form the outer edge of a high table-land, consisting in great part of stony and sandy desert, and in which occurs the Great Salt Lake, extending to the Rocky Mountains. Eastward the country is a vast, gently undulating plain, with a general slope southwards towards the marshy flats of the Gulf of Mexico, extending to the Atlantic, interrupted only by the Alleghany Mountains, of inferior elevation, in the Eastern States. Nearly the whole of this plain, from the Rocky Mountains to some distance beyond the Mississippi, consists of immense treeless savannahs and prairies of luxuriant grass. In the Eastern States (which form the more settled and most thickly inhabited portion of the territory) large forests of valuable timber, as beech, birch, maple, oak, pine, spruce, elm, ash, walnut; and in the south, live-oak, water-oak, magnolia, palmetto, tulip-tree, cypress, &c., still exist, the remnants of the wooded region which formerly extended over all the Atlantic slope, but into which great inroads have been made by the advance of civilisation. The Mississippi valley is eminently fertile. The mineral kingdom produces in great abundance copper, iron, coal, lime, salt and lead, the production of lead in Missouri, Colorado, Utah, and Idaho being very large, with good outputs also from Montana, Nevada and Wisconsin. California produces silver, copper, and lead, and gold in large quantities. The petroleum output (mainly Illinois, Oklahoma, and California, with growing importance in Mexico) in 1908 was over 179,000,000 barrels of 42 gallons, valued at $129,000,000.

Finance.—The financial condition of the United States of America exerts a great influence on that of other nations. The following is a statement of the debt on 1 Oct., 1909 and 1910:—

Constitution and Government.—The government of the United States is, by the Constitution, entrusted to three separate authorities —the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial. The Executive power is vested in a President, who is elected every four years, and is eligible for re-election. The mode of electing the President is as follows:—Each State appoints, in such manner as the Legislature thereof directs, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative, or anyone holding office under Government, shall be appointed an elector. The electors for each State meet at their respective State Capitals on a day appointed, and there vote for a President by ballot. The ballots are then sent to Washington, and opened by the President of the Senate in presence of Congress, and the candidate who has received a majority of the whole number of electoral votes cast is declared President for the ensuing term. If no one has a majority, then from the three highest on the list the House of Representatives elects a President, the votes being taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote. There is also a Vice-President, who, on the death of the President, becomes ex-officio President for the remainder of the term. In case of the removal or death of both President and Vice-President, a statute provides for the succession of the Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, and others, so that the State can never be without a Head or Ruler.

The Legislative power is vested in two Houses, the Senate and the House of Representatives, the President having a veto power, which may be overcome by a two-thirds vote of each House. Two Senators from each State are elected by the Legislature thereof for the term of six years: and Representatives are chosen in each State, by popular vote, for two years. The number of Representatives for each State is allotted in proportion to its population—at present 1 for 173,901. The Senate consists of 90 members, and the House of Representatives of 357 representatives and territorial delegates.

The supreme judicial authority is vested in a Chief Justice and eight Justices, who are appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to hold their offices during good behaviour.

Of international money orders the number issued was 4,499,603, value $99,742,686; postal expenditure, $229,977,224.

PRECIOUS METALS.—The Director of the U.S. Mint estimates the (1909) production of gold at 4,800,359 fine oz. ($99,232,200), silver 53,849,000 fine oz. ($28,010,100 commercial value), the total value therefore being $127,242,300.

TERRITORIAL EXPANSION.

In the year 1898 the U.S.A. became involved in war with Spain on account of the unsettled state of affairs in the neighbouring island of Cuba. The result of the war was the freedom of that island from Spanish control and the cession of the Philippine Islands and the Island of Guam, the Island of Puerto Rico, which was captured during the war, being retained; these conditions were confirmed by a Treaty of Peace signed at Paris (10 Dec., 1898). During the year the independent islands of the Hawaiian group were annexed by a resolution of Congress, and in 1899, under the provisions of the Samoan Convention, those islands of the Samoan Archipelago not annexed by Germany fell to the share of the U.S.A.

In a few months, therefore, the U.S.A. assumed the responsibility of a vast over-sea dominion, with between 9,000,000 and 10,000,000 inhabitants.

Hawaii is a group of islands in the N. Pacific in lat. 19° to 22° 15′ N., and long. 154° 48′ to 160° 20′ W., with a total area of about 6,449 sq. miles, and a population of about 170,000 (Orientals 95,000, Latins 27,000, Teutons 13,000, Hawaiians 35,000). The capital is Honolulu in Oahu, pop. about 39,300.

The Samoan Islands.—By the Anglo-German agreement of 14 Nov., 1899, the island of Tutuila and all other islands in the Archipelago east of 171° E. long. were reserved to the U.S.A.

In the West Indies: The Island of PUERTO RICO, captured during the war, has an area of about 3,600 square miles, and 1,118,012 inhabitants; the capital, San Juan, has a population of 48,716, Ponce (35,027) and Mayaguez (16,591) being also towns of importance. The products are sugar, coffee, and tobacco. Census of (1910), Aguas, 10,357; Arecibo, 9,612; Guayuma, 8,321.

In the East Indies: The PHILIPPINE ISLANDS have an area of about 121,395 square miles, with a population (1903) of 7,635,426 (civilised, or partly so, 6,987,686; wild and uncivilised 647,740). The capital is Manila, in the island of Luzon (population 219,928), other large towns being Cebu (34,459), Lipa (37,943), Bauan (39,094), Batangas (33,131). The principal products are hemp, sugar, coffee, indigo, and copra, in addition to the tobacco plant, which is extensively grown in the island of Luzon. The total trade for 1909 was $27,792,397 for imports, and $10,993,563 for exports.

Guam, the largest island of the Ladrone (or Marianne) group, is situated in 145° E. and 14° N., and has an area of about 150 square miles, with about 11,490 inhabitants. The capital is Agaña.

FEDERAL CAPITAL, Washington (3,850 miles from London). Pop. 1910, including the District of Columbia), 331,069.

A Republic in South America, on the east coa of the Rio de la Plata, situate in lat. 30°—35° and long. 53° 25′—57° 42′ W., containing an ar of 72,172 square miles, and an estimated popul tion of 1,039,078 (1908): was formerly a dependen of Spain. United to the Argentine Confederati early in the present century, it was afterwar annexed by Portugal, and became later a pr vince of Brazil; but through the bravery of t patriotic "thirty-three" it succeeded in throwi off the Brazilian yoke and declared its indepen ence 25 August, 1825. A war in consequen ensuing between Brazil and the Argentine Co federation, both the Powers agreed, through t mediation of Great Britain, to recognise Uruguay as a sovereign and independent State. The imports from the U.K. are numerous, the principal being woollen and cotton goods, hardware, and coals. The chief exports are wool, hides, horn, hair, tallow, and jerked beef. Wheat, barley, and maize are cultivated, but the wealth of the country is obtained from its pasturage, which supports large herds of horned cattle (9,000,000 in 1908) and sheep (26,000,000 in 1908), the wool of which is of excellent quality. Gold mines exist at Cuñapirú. The principal river is the Uruguay and its affluents, of which the Río Negro is the chief. There are 1,220 miles of railway open (1907), all in British hands, and the prolongation of the Central Railway eastern extension from Nico-Perez to Artigas on the Brazilian frontier is now completed, and 4,945 miles of telegraph in 1907. There are about 300 kilometers of electric tram lines in Monte Video.

The most northerly Confederation of South America, situated approximately between 1° 40′ S. lat. and 12° 26′ N. lat. and 59° 52′ 73° 15′ W. long. It consists of 20 States and 2 federal territories. The best authorities calculate the actual present area to be approximately 363,728 square miles. The census of 1891 gave the population as 2,323,527; it was estimated to be 2,661,569 at 31 Dec., 1908. The principal imports are cotton prints and cotton drill. The principal articles of export are, coffee (£1,579,299 in 1908-9); cocoa £710,748; balata gum, cattle, and hides. The U.S. is the principal customer.

The decrees of ex-President Castro directed against trade with Trinidad and Curaçao were abolished at the beginning of the year 1909, but so far trade with those islands has not shown the improvement that was to be expected. This is no doubt due to the 30 per cent. differential surtax which, in defiance of treaty stipulations, is still levied by the Venezuelan Customs on all importations from the Antilles.

The prevailing religion of the country is Roman Catholic, there being but few of the Protestant faith. Education, which is in a very backward condition, is nominally free. The State provides schools for primary instruction; there are also some secondary schools and two universities. The Army has a nominal strength of nearly 9,000 men, and service in the national militia is compulsory. The Navy is composed of 8 vessels (3 gun-boats, 1 tug, 2 transports, 1 torpedo boat destroyer, and 1 torpedo boat). The length of railways opened and under construction is 526 miles.

Geographical Progress and Territorial Changes, 1909–10.

Europe.—Research in scientific geography is being prosecuted with vigour in many parts of Europe. In this country an inquiry into the régime of the rivers of the south and west has been continued by various observers, under the general supervision of Dr. A. Strahan, F.R.S. Abroad, too, river investigations are attracting a good deal of attention; and besides similar work elsewhere, a department of hydrology has lately been organised in Italy for the study of the rivers of the north-east, particularly those descending from the Alps in Venetian territory, and the collection of data has been begun. Underground exploration still gives work to specialists in the subject like M. Martel in France, and M. Perkò in Austria. The former has during 1910 given a preliminary account of his second campaign (of 1909) among the gorges and caverns of the Northern Pyrenees, which has brought to light many new features. In the Austrian Karst region new light has been thrown, by experiments with chemicals, on the underground flow of the classical Timavo, near the head of the Adriatic. A valuable paper on the relation of existing Alpine valleys to the Ice Age was read before the Royal Geographical Society in June, 1910, by Prof. Garwood, who showed strong reasons for believing that the ice exercised a far smaller erosive action than is supposed by some foreign writers. Both an Austrian and an Italian organisation for the scientific study of the Adriatic have lately taken shape, it being proposed to carry on the work more or less in concert. Oceanographical studies have also received a fresh impetus from the formal opening of the fine Oceanographical Museum built by the Prince of Monaco.

In Iceland, among other explorations, good work has been done by the young German explorer Dr. H. Spethmann in the region of Mount Askja and the great lava-waste of Odadahraun. A number of mountains were ascended, changes due to volcanic action noted, and materials collected for the correction of the map.

Asia.—Less first-rate exploring work than usual has been accomplished in inner Asia, Tibet having for the time reverted to its old condition of a more or less closed land. The Russian expedition of Col. P. K. Kozloff returned to Europe in 1909, after supplementing its work in Mongolia by surveys in the little-known borderlands of N.W. China, south of the Upper Hwang-ho. The young Japanese traveller Zuicho Tachibana, who had returned in 1909 from an expedition for antiquarian research in Mongolia and Turkestan, has started on a more extended expedition to the same region, with a view to carrying out archæological, geographical, and natural history researches, aided by two expert coadjutors. A British expedition organised by Mr. D. Carruthers (whose interesting trip in Northern Arabia was referred to in last year's summary), with the support of Messrs. J. H. Miller and M. P. Price, has begun work in a corner of Northern Mongolia never before explored systematically—the extreme upper basin of the Yenesei River, shut off by rugged mountains from the more frequented parts of that province. Although politically part of the Chinese Empire, the explorers report that its physical and ethnological characters are essentially Siberian; and they have brought to light the interesting fact of the existence of wild reindeer further south than they have hitherto been found. The expedition has proceeded towards Kulja through the Tanna and Altai ranges, also the scene of recent explorations by the Russian savant, Prof. Saposhnikoff. An expedition to the Tian Shan and its southern borderlands, carried out in 1909 by Dr Paul Gröber, a German geologist, has supplied corrections of existing maps; as has also, in a less degree, a sporting trip to the same range by Capt. Gardyne. Another British officer, Lieut. Etherton, has completed an interesting journey from India to Siberia across the Tian Shan and Altai ranges. An American expedition for magnetic research, under Mr. D. C. Sowers, returned to Washington in December, 1909, having traversed the Chinese Empire from east to west. Another expedition across the whole extent of that Empire, from north-west to south-east, has been completed by Mr. C. Clementi.

Of expeditions in China proper, an American officer, Capt. R. Clark, completed a journey for survey purposes in the provinces of Shansi, Shensi, and Kansu towards the close of 1909. The French traveller M. J. Bacot, after failing in an attempt to penetrate Tibet from the east, went south through the border country in the direction of Burma, reaching the source of the Irawadi, and returning through the country of the Mossos. Another French traveller, the Count de Polignac, has carried out, in association with Capt. Audemard, an examination of the course of the Upper Yangtse and its tributary the Yalong, with a view to testing the capabilities of these rapid rivers for navigation. Capt. Audemard had previously made an unusually successful ascent of the rapids of the Middle Yangtse in a French gunboat. A British gunboat on the same river is under the command of Lieut. Mulock, who did excellent work as surveyor on Capt. Scott's first Antarctic expedition; while a regular service through the rapids has been established by means of a specially constructed twin vessel built in England.

In Indo-China, some little-known parts of Southern Annam and Cambodia have been explored by a young French traveller, M. Henri Maitre. In the Malay Archipelago the most important work has been done in the island of Celebes, where Mr. Abendanon, a Dutch mining engineer, has added to his previous exploration a new examination of the central mountain mass. The Dutch portion of the island of Timor has lately been brought under effective control, and the well-known geologist Dr. Molengraaf has undertaken an investigation of the physical features of the interior.

In Arabia, now perhaps the least-known part of Asia, the Austrian traveller Dr. Alois Musil, who in 1908–9 had at considerable risk carried out a series of exploring journeys in the desert area between Palestine and the Euphrates, devoted his attention during part of 1910 to the country on either side of the Hejaz railway, and one result of his explorations is said to have been the discovery of the true site of the Biblical Mount Sinai, which had already been placed by some scholars east of the Gulf of Akaba, rather than in the so-called Sinai peninsula.

On the political side, events deserving mention are the forward movement of China in Tibet, resulting in the flight to India of the spiritual ruler—the Dalai Lama—and the imposition of closer, if not yet very firmly established, control y the suzerain power; and the formal annexation of Korea by Japan, in September, 1910.

Africa.—No very striking achievement is to be recorded from Africa during 1910. The boldly planned expedition of Lieut. Boyd Alexander, who went inland from the Kamerun towards the close of 1909, met with disaster, involving the regrettable death of the leader, on the threshold of its more special field of action. Lieut. Alexander unfortunately reached Wadai when that country was in a somewhat disturbed state, but, gallantly deciding to push onwards towards Darfur, was killed in a fracas just on the borders of the latter country. A career of great promise as well as positive achievement was thus prematurely ended. An expedition planned on somewhat similar lines by the Duke of Mecklenburg, known for his previous important journey across Equatorial Africa from east to west, has started by way of the Congo, intending to strike for the Upper Nile across the southern borders of Wadai and Darfur. The somewhat similar journey from Nigeria to the Nile, carried out in 1909 by Dr. Kumm, was the subject of a lecture before the Royal Geographical Society in 1910.

In the Central Sahara, Capt. Cortier and M. Villatte have carried out useful surveys; while the campaign in the Western Sahara (Adrar) nder Col. Gouraud in 1909 has resulted in the etter mapping of that region. For the first ne for many years the West Central Sahara was ossed in 1910 by an English traveller, Captain aywood, who, proceeding by the Upper Niger and Timbuktu to Gao on the middle course of the same river, went north to Algeria, crossing the waterless Tanezrufft desert under somewhat trying conditions. The Eastern Sahara, the most difficult and dangerous part of the whole area, is the object of a daring expedition of Messrs. Artbauer and Helmbacker, which left Vienna at the close of September, 1910, proposing to enter the desert viâ Murzuk.

Regular surveys are in progress in many of the European territories in Africa, and a new departure has been taken by the authorities of Italian Somaliland in the inauguration of a survey of the coast districts between Brava and the Jub River. As regards frontier questions, the most important event has been the definition of the long-disputed boundaries between the Belgian Congo and British and German East Africa. The unsatisfactory frontier between the two former adopted in 1894, in the form of the 30th meridian, has been modified so as to give the Uganda Protectorate some territory to the west of that line in the Ruwenzori-Lake Edward region, Belgium obtaining compensation farther north by securing the whole western shore of the Albert Nyanza (see map). The German claim to the eastern shore of Lake Kivu has been conceded by Belgium, the boundary running through the lake to the east of Kwijwi island. The lease to the Congo of the portion of territory within the Nile basin known as the Lado enclave having lapsed owing to the death of King Leopold, the territory was formally transferred to the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan in June, 1910. The disturbed relations between Wadai and Darfur, in the Central Sudan, have shown the importance of a precise definition of the boundary between the French and British spheres in this region. The frontier between Tunis and Tripoli, long a matter of dispute, was regulated, as regards its more northern section, by an agreement arrived at early in 1910. As a result of the surveys of the joint commission on the Franco-Liberian frontier, small modifications of the line previously agreed upon have been introduced. The defective control exercised by Liberia over the interior has led to much discussion as to the political future of the country, suggestions being made for a joint guarantee of its neutrality by Great Britain, France, and Germany.

The name of the French West African territory, hitherto known as French Congo, has been changed to French Equatorial Africa; and the capital of the Italian possession of Eritrea has been transferred from the low-lying island of Massaua to Asmara, on the interior plateau.

America.—Two important expeditions across the little-known northern interior of Labrador were carried out during the summer of 1910. Mr. Hesketh Prichard, starting from the east coast at the mission port of Nain, made his way across to the George River, ascending the Fraser River by its deep cañon cut through the interior plateau. Somewhat farther south, where the general altitude is lower, an American party led by Prof. Macmillan (a member of Peary's last expedition) also crossed the country from east to west, striking inland from Davis inlet to the George River and Nascopi country, and finding several lakes, one of them—Misternipi—said to be 25 miles wide. Apart from these journeys, exploration in North America has been, as usual, chiefly concerned with North-West Canada and Alaska. In the former, Mr. H. V. Radford has explored a tract north of the Peace River and west of the Slave River, which is the only remaining habitat of the little-known wood bison, of which he has obtained a fine specimen. He has made a careful study of its life conditions, and has also been able to rectify errors in the maps of the district. Further north, Mr. Leffingwell has continued his geographical and geological work along the Arctic coast between the Mackenzie and Point Barrow. Mr. J. Keele, of the Canadian Geological Survey, has given an account of an important journey of exploration across the most extensive unexplored area previously existing in Northern Canada, between the head waters of the Yukon and the western feeders of the Mackenzie. It is traversed by a portion of the main mountain backbone of the continent, to which the name Mackenzie Mountains has been given. Mr. Keele has made a useful map of the whole region, and studied its orographical features. In Alaska, the ascent of Mount McKinley, the highest known summit of North America, is said to have been achieved early in 1910 by a party of miners headed by Thomas Lloyd. They seem to have gone about the task in the most systematic manner, adopting the methods of Arctic travellers, and gradually pushing camps and stores to higher levels. Much scientific work relating to the glaciers of Alaska continues to be carried out by American specialists like Prof. R. S. Tarr. Further south, the first ascent of Mount Robson, the highest summit in the Canadian Rockies, was accomplished by Mr. Kinney in the summer of 1909, though no full account became available till 1910.

The well-known ethnologist Carl Lumholtz has carried out some interesting journeys of exploration in the arid regions of North-West Mexico, and neighbouring parts of the United States.

In the heart of South America, Major P. Fawcett, who had returned in 1909 from his adventurous journeys for the survey of the northern and eastern frontiers of Bolivia, has started on a new expedition on behalf of the Bolivian Government, this time for the survey of the north-west frontier of that country, as recently agreed upon with Peru (see below). His first task will be the exploration of the Heath River (forming part of the new frontier), after which he hopes to examine the head waters of the Madidi (a tributary of the Beni), and to make his way back across the Andes along the frontier line. Eastern Bolivia and adjacent regions have been the scene of the latest expedition of Baron Erland Nordenskiöld, who has returned with a rich harvest of ethnological and other observations. In Brazil, a lady traveller, Miss Snethlage, of the Para Museum, has crossed the unexplored tract between the Xingu and Tapajos, southern tributaries of the Amazon. The little-known region watered by the north-western tributaries of the same river has been explored by an English traveller, Capt. Whiffen, who came in contact with tribes hitherto hardly touched by outside influence.

In the United States of Colombia, a step of some importance for the better mapping of that country has been taken in the establishment of an Office of Longitudes, and the same country is the field of research chosen by a Swiss scientific expedition under Dr. Fuhrmann. In the Andes, the altitude of Mount Huascaran, lately claimed by an American lady alpinist as probably the highest summit of the whole range, was fixed triangulation towards the end of 1909 by an expedition under M. de Larminat organised Mrs. Bullock Workman. The higher of the tw peaks proved to be 22,182 ft., a figure clos agreeing with that generally accepted previous and considerably lower than that assigned Aconcagua. Further south, in the same ran explorations of the imposing glaciers betwe Mounts Aconcagua and Tupungato have lat been carried out by a German scientist, Reichert.

Of boundary questions in the Americ continent, one of very long standing (thou affecting a very small area) between Canada a the United States, at the seaward end of t Maine-New Brunswick frontier, was set at r by a treaty signed at Washington on 22 M 1910, by which the precise course of the int national line through Passamaquoddy Bay a the Grand Manan Canal was for the first ti defined. In Central America, where the Co Rica-Panama boundary was thought to h been settled in 1905 (see this Almanack for 19 p. 648), but was reopened by the action of Congress of Panama, a new step towards a fi settlement was taken in March, 1910, by signing of a protocol submitting the matter arbitration. In South America, the most imp tant recent events have been the conclusio treaties between Peru and Bolivia, and betw Peru and Brazil, in September, 1909, the resu of which are shown by the accompanying sket By the former, the previous award of the Pr dent of the Argentine Republic was modif chiefly to the advantage of Bolivia; and by latter a long-standing question regarding frontier from the source of the Yavari to t was at last settled to the satisfaction of parties on the general principle of uti possid on of Western New Guinea, one of the last rongholds of the unknown in this part of the orld. The efforts put forth by the Dutch for veral years past to reach the snows of the great ntral range were at last crowned with success owards the end of 1909, when a party under Dr. . A. Lorentz ascended a little above the limit f perpetual snow (14,635 feet) on Mount Wilhelina, the summit of which was fixed at about 5,580 feet. The ascent of a still higher peak rther west (Mount Carstensz) has been a part f the programme of the expedition organised by he British Ornithologists' Union under Mr. W. oodfellow. The geographical work is in charge f the well-known Tibetan explorer Capt. Rawng, assisted by Dr. Eric Marshall (a member of r E. Shackleton's Antarctic Expedition) and r. A. F. R. Wollaston, who took part in the ritish Museum Expedition to Ruwenzori (Cenral Africa) a few years ago. These explorers ave met with almost insuperable obstacles in he way of an advance to their goal, owing to ransport difficulties and the impenetrable forest ith which the whole country is clothed. They ave made, however, an interesting discovery by bstantiating the existence of a pygmy tribe pparently of Negrito race) in this region.

The Dutch have been active in exploring the any rivers which run south from the snowy nge, views of which have been obtained a good eal east of Mount Wilhelmina. From the north, o, an important advance by way of the Mamramo River towards Mount Carstensz has been ade by Lieut. F. Herderschee; still further ccess being only prevented by a severe outreak of beri-beri and malaria. Further east, the utch and German parties for the survey of the 141st meridian (their common frontier) pushed uth across the coast ranges and reached a wide ain drained by a large river. They were comlled to return after reaching 3° 20′ S., but have nce successfully ascended the Kaiserin Augusta iver (in German New Guinea), and have again ached the 141st meridian south of their preous farthest. The coast districts east of e frontier have been explored by the German hnologist Dr. Friederici.

Polar Regions.—The controversy which raged rough the winter of 1909–10 regarding the val claims of Commander Peary and Dr. F. A. ook to the conquest of the North Pole has reulted in a general verdict in the direction voured from the first by geographical experts. eary's claim has been admitted by the most mpetent authorities, who concur in holding at, within the limits of accuracy possible with e means of position-determination at his disal, Peary attained the object of his life's bition in March, 1909. The distance of his rning point from the actual position of the le must be limited to a very few miles at most. e papers submitted by Dr. Cook in support of s claim to have reached the same spot a year rlier have been found on examination to give substantial evidence in his favour. Expedions now in the field include that of Capt. E. kkelsen (previously known for his enterprising rney over the ice of the Beaufort Sea) to st Greenland, in search of the remains and rnals of the ill-fated Mylius Erichsen and his o companions, who perished during the nish expedition of 1906–8. Though partially ccessful in this object, the expedition has en unfortunate in losing its ship, and though portion of the personnel has been brought back in another vessel, the leader and two companions were still away in the far north when the return voyage was begun. It is hoped that he may carry out a plan formed in anticipation of such an eventuality, and make his way over Northern Greenland to the west coast. A new expedition among the Arctic islands of Canada has been begun by the Canadian voyager Capt. Bernier, who sailed in July, 1910, purposing to achieve the north-west passage by way of Lancaster Sound and Melville Island.

A new period of activity in the matter of Antarctic exploration has lately begun. Capt. Scott's second expedition left England in the summer of 1910, and, proceeding by the Cape to Melbourne, sailed for Lyttelton, New Zealand, its final starting point, in October. Capt. Scott, who is once more supported by able scientific coadjutors, will endeavour to reach the South Pole by the route already followed in part by himself and Sir E. Shackleton. A German expedition under Lieut. Filchner (known for exploring work in Tibet) proposes to attack the unknown area from the opposite side (i.e., from the Weddell Sea), and, by advancing as near as possible to the Pole itself, to throw light on the general form of the Antarctic continent. A somewhat similar plan has been put forward by Dr. W. S. Bruce, who is endeavouring to organise a new Scottish expedition with a view to crossing the South Polar continent from the neighbourhood of Coats Land, discovered by him on his former expedition. A project set on foot for the despatch of an American expedition in Peary's ship the Roosevelt has made no great progress; but a new competitor appeared on the scene in the autumn of 1910 in the person of Capt. R. Amundsen, the Norwegian Arctic voyager, who had for some time been organising a scientific expedition to attempt the voyage across the North Polar basin from Bering Strait. At the moment of sailing Capt. Amundsen surprised the geographical world by announcing that he would proceed first to the Antarctic, apparently with the intention of entering the race for the South Pole. His precise plans are still unknown.

The second French Antarctic Expedition under Dr. Charcot returned during 1910, having done some good work in the region south and southwest of Graham Land, in spite of adverse conditions of health and weather. Towards the south, a vast gulf and a considerable extent of new coast were discovered, and Alexander I. Land was visited. An advance was also made to the west, between 69° and 71° S., as far as 126° E.

General.—The scheme originally put forward by Prof. Penck for the construction, by international co-operation, of a map of the world on a uniform plan and scale, has come decidedly nearer realisation as the result of a conference which met in London in November, 1909. Many matters of detail regarding the methods to be adopted were decided on, and real progress may now be anticipated. Oceanographical work has been carried on by the Anglo-Norwegian expedition of Sir J. Murray and Prof. Hjort in the Michael Sars; by Dr. Nansen and Capt. Amundsen (before sailing south) in the Fram; and by Prof. J. Schmidt (Danish) in the Thor—all in the Atlantic. The first voyage of the magnetic research vessel Carnegie, also in the Atlantic, was completed in 1909, and a new voyage, planned to last three years and cover portions of all the great oceans, was begun in June, 1910.

BUDGETS, Establishments, etc., as stated, represent the most recent data obtainable. These figures cannot be used to determine by simple division the cost per head of the soldier, owing to wide variations in objects of expenditure and methods of accounting.

The essential difference between "universal (compulsory) military service" and "conscription" requires emphasis. The former involves the liability of all able-bodied males, and confines exemptions to prescribed individual cases, such as the only sons of widows, young men entering upon a learned profession, clergy, &c. The latter involves the choosing by lot of a regulated annual conscript contingent from amongst a considerably larger number of young men of military age, and the possibility of exemption upon payment, or the finding of a substitute. Conscription has been almost universally abandoned, universal service almost universally adopted.

In Militia armies and forces training is intermittent only. It is recognised that troops thus maintained lack the solidity and moral essential for great or long-sustained operations of war, and especially for offensive war. This system, therefore, is relied upon only by States whose exterior policy is avowedly neutral, and who aspire only to safeguard their neutrality.

Except Great Britain, no State recruits ad hoc for forces legally restricted to home defence. The States Militia of the U.S.A., and the Austrian and Hungarian Landwehrs, are available for exterior employment.

Explanations.—Where two periods of service in an Active Army are mentioned, the shorter is that for the dismounted, the longer that for the mounted arms. A.A. = Active Army. A.R. = Reserve of Active Army. T.A. = Territorial Army. N.G. = National Guard. Trg. = Training. P.E. = Peace Establishment. W.E. = War Establishment. Formations legally available for interior defensive action only are enclosed in square brackets.

China.—Land forces cannot yet be regarded as capable of offensive warfare or of withstanding trained European or Japanese troops. Loyalty of some formations is very doubtful. Energetic measures of reform aim principally at (a) establishment of central control, and limiting powers of provincial govts., (b) increasing prestige of military service, (c) education, (d) formation of reserves, (e) establishment of manufactures of war matériel. Univ. comp. serv. will be considered by the Imperial Parliament of 1913. Forces include (1) "New Army" of abt. 152,000, of whom 120,000 fairly well trained and equipped, but administrative services are weak; (2) Provincial Police and L. of C. Troops (pending formation of Res.); (3) Manchu Banner contingents will be extinguished by 1916; (4) Residue of "Green Standard" Forces; (5) Rural Militia, of small military value; (6) Mongolian and Tibetan Militias. P. R. COLES.

THE following summaries present in as brief a form as possible the various educational systems of the countries of the world.

Argentina.—(i.) Primary: Age 6–14; Secular, free, and nominally comp. (but only some 45 p.c. attend). Schools maintained by provincial taxation and controlled by provincial boards (in capital by National Council) with grants from Central Govt. (ii.) Secondary: Control by Central Govt.; lyceums, and normal schools. Average attendance, over 6,000. (iii.) Special Govt. Schools: 1 naval, 1 military, 1 mining, 1 agricultural. (iv.) Universities: National, Buenos Aires, Cordoba; Provincial, La Plata, Santa Fé, Parana.

Austria.—(i) Primary: Age 6–12, 13, or 14; free and comp. (91 p.c. attend). Schools maintained by local taxation, State grants exceptional. (ii.) Secondary: Controlled by Central Govt., including private schools; Gymnasia (8-yrs. course) and realschulen (7-yrs. course) prepare for the Universities and Govt. technical high schools. Attendance, over 135,000. Pupils attaining a prescribed standard qualify for military service as 1-yr. volunteers. (iii.) Special: 8 Govt. engineering, 1 Govt. agricultural, 2 higher, 7 lower mining, numerous technical institutes, commercial, art, music, and industrial schools. (iv.) Universities: State-maintained, Cracow, Czernowitz, Graz, Innsbruck, Lemberg, Prague (2), and Vienna.

Hungary.—Primary: Free and comp. Maintained by local taxation. Infant Schools (numerous), with nursing staffs; ages 3–6. Lower Elementary, 6–12; repetition courses, 12–15. Higher do. (sexes separate) with 3 yrs. course for boys, 2 yrs. for girls; City High Schools, 6-yrs. course for boys, 4-yrs. for girls; average attendance, over 77 p.c. (ii.) Secondary Schools not State-maintained are State-aided; their 8-yrs. course prepares for University and Budapest Polytechnic. (iii.) Special Schools are less numerous than in Austria, but well attended. (iv.) State Universities: Budapest, Kolozsvar, Zagrab. Both in Austria and Hungary there is an extraordinary diversity of language—in the former German, Czech, and Slav dialects predominate; in the latter Magyar.

Belgium.—(i.) Primary: Comp. and free; schools maintained by communal taxation with provincial and State grants; in addition, many are under ecclesiastical control, Roman Catholic predominating. (ii.) Secondary: 128 State high schools (40 for girls), and numerous private institutions. (iii.) Special schools, communal and private, abound; music and fine arts schools a special feature; 35 Royal Athenæums. (iv.) Universities: State, Ghent and Liège; free, Brussels and Louvain.

Brazil.—(i.) Primary: Secular and free, but not comp. Maintenance and control by State Govts. Public instruction has progressed of late, but a high proportion of the population is still illiterate. (ii.) Secondary: Controlled by Central Govt.; national gymnasium. (iii.) Special: 1 naval, 1 military, 1 mining, 1 polytechnic, 4 law, 2 medicine. (iv.) No universities.

Bulgaria.—(i.) Primary: Age 8–12, free and nominally comp., fees in higher grades only. State bears two-thirds, local taxation one-third cost. Attendance good. (ii.) Secondary: State bears one-half cost. Foreign schools numerous. (iii.) Very few special or technical schools. (iv.) University: Sofia.

Chile.—(i.) Primary: Free, but not comp. A large proportion of the population is yet illiterate. Nevertheless, existing schools have a good attendance. (ii.) Secondary: State lyceum (sexes separate) in provincial capitals. (iii.) Numerous special and technical schools. (iv.) Universities: State, Santiago; one private do.

China.—Persistent missionary zeal and imperative necessity of military re-organisation must share the credit of substituting occidental learning for the time-honoured study of Chinese classics, which, until the Imperial Edict of 1905 formed the only passport to State employment. Schools spring up daily, the study of Japanese and European languages naturally assuming peculiar importance in view of the lack of scientific text-books in the vernacular. Japanese influence is strong, particularly in the now numerous military institutions, whilst there are several medical schools. The Imperial University at Pekin and the Tientsin University are staffed by Europeans and Japanese, as well as by Chinese professors.

Denmark.—(i.) Primary: Free and comp. Age 7–14. Schools maintained by local taxation. (ii.) Secondary: Schools that are not State-maintained are State-aided. (iii.) Special schools are numerous, horticulture and agriculture predominating. (iv.) University, Copenhagen.

Egypt.—Of the ancient village schools, those proving most progressive are State-aided, and primary education is being greatly developed. (i.) Govt. Primary Schools (38 in 1909) with 4-yr course, prepare for admission to minor Govt posts, the secondary schools, the agricultural college, &c. English predominates, and is used ing French. Majority of pupils pay small fee (ii.) Govt. Secondary Schools, also a 4-yrs. course admit to intermediate Govt. posts, or the three Cairo Colleges of Law, Medicine, and Engineering Staff usually English. (iii.) Special schools a numerous, keeping pace with the rapid development of the country. Private enterprise and benevolence does much, and foreign schools abound.

France.—Educational system highly developed. Central Administration comprises (a) Ministry of Public Instruction; (b) Superior Education Council, charged with the actual administration; (c) Consultative Committee (advisory); (d) Educational Bureaux and Inspecting Staffs, who heads report direct to the Minister. Local Administration comprises (a) Territorial Academies, with inspecting staffs for all grades, and (b) Departmental Councils, presided over by the préfet, charged especially with primary education. By the Law of July, 1904, all congregationist institutions are to be suppressed with 10 years, and many were at once closed, some re-opening under lay management. (i.) Primary, Secular, comp. and free. Age 6–13. Schools include (a) infants; (b) lower primary; (c) higher or Supplementary courses, and courses for adult Lower and higher primary certificates granted. Numerous private courses are aided from local funds. Schools are for boys, for girls, or mixed. (ii.) Secondary: State lycees, communal colleges and many private establishments, 7-yrs. course either (a) purely classical; (b) purely modern (c) Latin and sciences; or (d) Latin and modern languages. Degree of Bachelor conferred on completion. For females, a similar organisation, course 5–6 yrs. Sèvres school and the Sorbonne Association well-known. (iii.) Special Schools are very numerous, many public institutions being dependent on ministries other than that of Public Instruction. (iv.) Universities (State universities alone grant degrees, but numerous private faculties and private institutions further higher education): Aix, Algiers, Angers, Bordeaux, Caen, Clermont, Dijon, Grenoble, Lille, Lyon, Marseilles, Montauban, Montpelier, Nancy, Nantes, Paris, Poitiers, Rennes, and Toulouse.

Germany.—Educational system is remarkable for the ease with which it meets the requirements of every social class. Its efficiency is best exemplified by the annual military recruiting statistics, which in 1907 disclosed a proportion of only 02 p.c. of illiterate recruits. It is, moreover, practically homogeneous in all branches throughout the empire. The Prussian administration may be cited as typical, comprising (i.) a general control by the Minister of Public Instruction over all educational establishments, public or private, save those special Schools dependent on other ministries, (ii.) a provincial organisation charged with management of public elementary schools, and (iii.) Special Provincial Boards charged with the management of Secondary and Normal Schools, their curricula, appointment of teachers, and leaving examinations. (i.) Primary: Comp. and free, age 6–14. Average attendance, 94 p.c. Maintained by local taxation, with State grants. (ii.) Secondary: Evening continuation schools for children of working classes; city intermediate schools in two grades; gymnasia (some State-maintained) preparing for university and learned professions with a 9-yrs. course. The standard to qualify for military service as a 1-yr. volunteer is that for advancement from the lower to the upper second class of a State gymnasium; progymnasia, similar, but lacking the highest class of the gymnasia; Real gymnasia confining classical instruction to Latin; real progymnasia similar, but lacking higher classes of the foregoing; Oberrealschulen and Realschulen making a special feature of modern languages; Lehrer-Seminarien and Fachschulen supplying specialised instruction. Private institutions are comparatively few. For girls, special Tochterschulen (high schools). Here private establishments predominate. (iii.) Special Schools are very numerous throughout the empire, special attention being devoted to agriculture, commerce, mining, forestry and music. Polytechnica grant degrees in engineering, &c. Secondary Education generally is neither free nor comp., but abatement or remission of charges is discretionary. (iv.) Universities, State-maintained and administered, are: Berlin, Bonn, Breslau, Erlangen, Freiburg, Giessen, Göttingen, Greifswald, Halle, Heidelberg, Jena, Kiel, Königsberg, Leipzig, Marburg, München, Münster, Rostock, Strassburg, Tübingen, and Würtzburg.

Greece.—(i.) Primary: Free and nominally comp.; age 5–12. Maintained by local taxation, with State grants. (ii.) Secondary: State-controlled, backward, especially in country districts. (iii.) Special: Ill-attended. Private Trade and Industrial Academy at Athens instructs in local agricultural and commercial pursuits. (iv.) University, Athens, largely attended by Turkish subjects.

Italy.—The law of July, 1904, imposing special disabilities on the illiterate, has afforded a needed stimulus. Prior to that date 49 per cent. of the population over age 20 were thus classed. (i.) Primary: Secular, free and comp. in the lower of two grades (age 6–9), where only lower grade schools exist, but comp. also in the higher grade (age 9–12) where schools have been provided. Evening continuation courses are compulsory for military recruits drafted to Territorial Army (see Military Systems), and illiterate recruits of the Active Army are instructed in their corps. Maintained by local taxation, with State grants. Private establishments must conform to State curriculum. (ii.) Secondary: Lyceums and gymnasia supply classical education and prepare for university, mainly State-maintained. (iii) Special Schools, State-maintained or State-aided, are increasing in numbers and attendance. (iv.) Universities, State: Bologna, Cagliari, Catania, Genoa, Macerata, Messina, Modena, Naples, Padua, Palermo, Parma, Pavia, Pisa, Rome, Sassari, Siena, and Turin. Many of these are of very ancient foundation (e.g., Bologna, A.D. 1200). Free: Camerino, Ferrara, Perugia, Urbino.

Japan.—Primary: Lower grade, comp., and free. Age 6–10. Kindergarten and Schools numerous and well attended (82 p.c.). Some 55 p.c. complete the higher primary course, age 10–14, for which a small monthly fee of 30–60 sen (7*d.*–1*s.* 2*d.*) is required. (ii.) Secondary: State-aided public intermediate schools, 5-yrs. course. High schools prepare for the Universities with a 3-yrs. course, largely devoted to study of European languages. For girls, high schools, course 4–5 yrs., with extensions of 2–3 yrs. for special subjects. (iii.) Special Schools of industries, commerce, and technics are well attended. (iv.) Universities: State, Tokio, Kyoto, and Tohoku.

Mexico.—Large numbers of the partially civilised native Indian races and many half-castes are entirely illiterate, and these categories comprise some 80 p.c. of the total population. (i.) Primary: Free and nominally comp.: maintained by local taxation, with Federal grants. Many private schools, mostly under clerical control. (ii.) Secondary Schools are not numerous, and attendance is not high. (iii.) Special Schools are better attended. (iv.) No University.

Netherlands.—System peculiar, in that private State-aided primary instruction is encouraged rather than public, though latter is provided by local taxation where private institutions are lacking. (i.) Primary: Age 7–13, comp., and free in public schools, maintained jointly by State and communes. Average attendance, 95 per cent. Disciplinary schools for neglected children. (ii.) Secondary: Not free, numerous adult schools for working classes, others not numerous, but well-equipped and attended. (iii.) Special Schools make a feature of agriculture and horticulture. (iv.) Universities: Amsterdam, Groningen, Leiden, Utrecht, and a small private university.

Norway.—(i.) Primary: Comp. and free, age 6½ (town) or 7 (country) to 14. Schools maintained by local taxation, with State grants. (ii.) Secondary schools are State, local, or private; latter mainly for girls, many of the others are mixed. A complete and practical reformatory system, age 6–18 or 12 21, is State-aided. (iii.) Special Schools: Chiefly industrial and technical institutes. (iv.) University: Christiania.

Peru.—(i.) Primary: Only nominally comp., free in towns. Average attendance scarcely 20 per cent. (ii.) Secondary: Govt. high schools in provincial capitals, charging small fees. A few private schools controlled by foreigners. (iii.) Special Schools: Confined to Lima Schools of Art, Mines and Engineering. (iv.) University: St. Mark's (Lima).

Portugal.—(i.) Primary: Nominally comp. and free, but over 70 per cent. of population over 6 yrs. of age remain illiterate. (ii.) Secondary: A State lyceum in each of the provinces, and a few municipal schools, also a good many private institutions. (iii.) Special: Fairly numerous, but attendance small. (iv.) University: Coimbra.

Rumania.—(i.) Primary: Free and nominally comp., but number of schools is quite inadequate. Nearly 60 per cent. of population over 7 yrs. of age remain illiterate. (ii.) Secondary: Considerable number of high schools tolerably well attended. (iii.) Special Schools: Mainly of agriculture. (iv.) Universities: Bucharest, Jassy.

Russia.—(i.) Primary: Very backward, especially in country districts. Probably not more than 10 per cent. of total population have received instruction of any kind. Control and maintenance of primary schools divided nearly equally between Ministry of Public Instruction and Holy Synod (governing body of Orthodox Church). To the latter is allotted a large proportion of the sum annually voted for education by the Central Govt. In many of the remoter district schools are said to exist only on paper, and the qualifications of teachers are frequently nil. However, a distinct advance is perceptible. (ii.) Secondary Institutions comprise gymnasia and progymnasia and real schools (main features similar to Germany, q.v.), both for girls and boys, but numbers and attendance are alike small considering the enormous territorial area and population. The foundations of the Empress Marie (mother of the Tsar Nicholas I.) are administered by a private Imperial cabinet, providing gymnasia and institutes. The Holy Synod has numerous seminaries and intermediate schools for both sexes, and there are a few private schools. The Cossack voiskos (districts) maintain their own gymnasia and progymnasia. (iii.) Special Schools are few, and confined to the principal cities of European Russia. (iv.) Universities: Kazan, Kiev, Kharkov, Moscow (2), Odessa, St. Petersburg, Saratov, Tomsk, Yuriev, and Warsaw.

Finland.—(i.) Primary: Comp.; age 7–15 yrs.; well-attended. (ii.) Secondary: Lyceums (half being State-maintained); realschools and country high schools for both sexes, also well attended. (iii.) Special Schools make a feature of cattle-farming, dairy and agricultural instruction. (iv.) University: Helsingfors.

Servia.—(i.) Primary: Free and nominally comp., but attendance does not exceed 25 p.c. State-aided. (ii.) Secondary: Gymnasia and progymnasia, and girls' high schools, State-maintained. (iii.) Special: Schools are few. (iv.) University: Belgrade.

Spain.—(i.) Primary: Nominally comp. and mainly free, public schools maintained by local taxation. Many private schools are under clerical control, and recent legislation provides for closer supervision of their curricula, condition, and staffs. (ii.) Secondary: A high school in each province, curriculum defective. (iii.) Special: Schools few. (iv.) Universities: Barcelona Granada, Madrid, Salamanca, Santiago, Saragossa, Seville, Valencia, and Valladolid.

Sweden.—(i.) Primary: Comp. and free. Illiteracy rare. Maintained by local taxation with State grants. Attendance good. (ii.) Secondary: Well-developed, schools numerous and efficient. (iii.) Special schools make a feature of technics and navigation. (iv.) Universities: Lund Upsala, and a few private faculties.

Switzerland.—Control by cantonal and communal authorities. No central organ. Illiteracy rare in Protestant cantons. (i.) Primary: Free and nominally comp., but attendance is not strictly enforced in the essentially Roman Catholic cantons. School age varies. (ii.) Secondary: Age 12–15 for boys. Schools numerous and well-attended, and there are many private institutions. (iii.) Special schools make a feature of commercial and technical instruction. (iv.) Universities: Bâle, Berne, Fribourg, Geneva Lausanne, Zurich, and Neuchâtel.

Turkey.—(i.) Primary education (nominally comp.) takes the form of instruction by Mahommedan priesthood attached to principal mosques and is consequently deficient. (ii.) Secondary: Schools far from numerous; in a few, French or English is taught. (iii.) Special Schools scarcely exist. (iv.) The University of Constantinople supposed to have been founded in 1900, has not yet materialised. Under the new régime conditions may improve.

United States of America.—System of public instruction extends from the kindergarten to the university. Control is vested in the State and local authorities, the only Central Organisation being the Bureau of the Educational Commission, charged with statistical and advisory functions only. The number of illiterates is swollen by immigrants, and by the fact that some 44 p.c. of the coloured population receive no instruction. It is said that no home is beyond reach of a school, whilst in some cases pupils are conveyed to and fro at public expense. (i.) Primary: Age 8–14 yrs., free and comp. in majority of States, though in all the machinery is fully maintained. Eight grades of public primary schools, numerous kindergartens, and evening continuation classes in towns. Very many and well-equipped private institutions. Public schools are maintained by local taxation, Federal subsidies taking the form of income derived from grants of land. (ii.) Secondary: Numerous high schools, both public and private, including many so-called "colleges" and "universities," whose curriculum corresponds rather to that of a German gymnasium, or an English public school. A salient feature of the American system is co-education of the sexes throughout, there being comparatively few institutions where the tuition is not dual. The advantages of this have recently been strenuously disputed. Powerful aid is afforded by private and philanthropic initiative. (iii.) Special Schools and Professional Establishments are too numerous to mention, well-equipped and well-attended. (iv.) Universities: Those corresponding most closely to the British definition are California, the Catholic University of America, Chicago, Clark, Columbia, Harvard, the Johns Hopkins, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Princetown, Stanford, Wisconsin, and Yale.

P. R. COLES.

THE year 1910 has been eminently satisfactory so far as concerns the maintenance of the British position. New construction in this country has gone ahead with at least the expected rapidity; but on the Continent, and particularly in Germany, there has been considerable delay. Details will follow in their respective places, but as an instance may be mentioned the case of the German armoured cruiser "H," which has already been on order twenty-three months, and has not yet been launched.

Great Britain.—Three battleships have been completed and passed into service—St. Vincent, Collingwood, and Vanguard. On a displacement of 19,250 tons they carry ten 50-calibre 12-in. guns (those of earlier Dreadnoughts being only 45 calibres), and steam 21 knots. The Vanguard was prepared for trial within nineteen months of the laying of the first keel-plate. The armoured ships launched during the year are the Colossus (April), Hercules (May), and Orion (August), battleships, and Lion (August), cruiser. The first two will be completed during the summer of 1911, and the Orion and Lion in November. The number of armoured ships to be passed into service during 1911 will be raised to six by the Neptune (battleship) and Indefatigable (cruiser). The Neptune, Hercules, and Colossus are sister ships of 19,000–20,250 tons, carrying ten 12-in. guns on a new system of distribution. Three turrets are on the centre-line, one forward and two aft, the inner of the latter being raised to fire over the outer. The beam turrets are placed diagonally, and the Neptune will thus be the first British Dreadnought to have a ten-gun broadside. The Indefatigable is an improved Invincible of 18,750 tons. The new 13·5-in. gun, as stated last year, will be mounted in some of the ships of the 1909–10 programme. The battleships Orion, Thunderer, Monarch, and Conqueror will have ten, mounted in five centre-line turrets; and the cruisers Lion and Princess Royal eight, in four turrets. The fleet of 20 so-called Dreadnoughts which we shall have complete in April, 1912, will thus mount 56 13·5-in. and 132 12-in. guns.

The five Bristol class cruisers have been passed into service, one, Newcastle, replacing the armoured cruiser Bedford in the Far East. The latter ship was wrecked on August 21. During 1911 the four Yarmouths will be completed, and four other cruisers are to be laid down under the 1910–11 programme. The fifth, Active, was commenced at Pembroke in July.

Destroyer work has been marked by great activity. The sixteen Beagle class ships (1908–9 programme) have been passed into service, the first of the twenty Acorns (1909–10) have commenced their trials, and the twenty 1910-11 vessels (Acheron class) have been ordered.

Greater Britain.—The Canadian Government has purchased the Rainbow (3,600 tons) and Niobe (11,000 tons) from the Admiralty, and has renamed the latter Ottawa. A protected cruiser of the Yarmouth class has been ordered for the Dominion, and also for Australia and New Zealand. The Australian armoured cruiser Australia, and the New Zealand, the cost of which that Colony is defraying, were laid down on the Clyde in June. The three Australian destroyers Yarra, Parramatta, and Warrego have been despatched, and a similar number ordered for service in New Zealand.

Germany.—By the completion of her fifth Dreadnought Germany now takes precedence of the United States in ships of that type. During 1910 the Nassau, Westfalen, Rheinland, and Posen (battleships) were added to the High Sea Fleet, the first two in May, the others in September. All are of the same type—18,500 tons, 19·5 knots (designed), and armed with twelve 11-in. and twelve 5·9-in. guns. The Von der Tann, the first non-British cruiser-Dreadnought, has also joined the fleet. On 18,700 tons she carries eight 11-in. and ten 5·9-in., steaming 27 knots on trial. Until the official publication of her equipment the power of this ship was consistently exaggerated. Only two ships have been launched, where at least five were expected. These are the cruiser Moltke (April) and the battleship Oldenburg (June). The four ships of the 1910-11 programme were all ordered in April, but it is reported that work has been abandoned on them pending alteration of the designs. The reason ascribed is the advent of the British 13·5-in. gun; but it has been known for two years that such a gun was being manufactured, and Krupps for some months have been working on a 13·5 or 14-in. model. The fact remains, however, that German construction is much in arrears, and there seems to be no likelihood of even 13 Dreadnoughts being in service in the spring of 1912, to say nothing of the 17 which Mr. Asquith last year thought probable. Three of the ships required to make 13 are not yet launched, and four others (1910-11 programme) are believed not to have been seriously commenced yet.

Programme.	Total.		Launched.		Completed.
	B.	G.	B.	G.	B.	G.
1905–6	4	0	—	—	4	—
1906–7	3	2	—	—	3	2
1907–8	3	3	—	—	3	3
1908–9	2	4	—	4	2	—
1909–10	8	4	4	1	—	—
1910–11	5	4	0	0	—	—

United States.—The Delaware and North Dakota (20,000 tons, ten 12-in. guns) have been passed into service. The Arkansas and Wyoming (26,000 tons, twelve 12-in. guns) were launched in January and February respectively; and orders have been placed for the two battleships authorised in June, 1910. They will probably be named Texas and Nevada, and will be the first ships to carry the 14-in. gun described last year. Only ten will be mounted instead of the twelve at first intended, and the displacement will be kept down to 27,000 tons. Twenty-two 5-in. will form the secondary battery, and the speed will be 21 knots. During 1911 the Florida and Utah will be completed. On 21,825 tons they carry ten 12-in. and sixteen 5-in. guns. Only two armoured ships will be laid down in 1911, this annual number having now been maintained since 1906. The U.S. Dreadnought total will then be 12, compared with 21 for Germany, and 25 + the 1911 programme for Great Britain.

It is intended to increase the strength of the Atlantic Fleet to 21 battleships and 4 armoured cruisers, which, allowing for four ships to be constantly absent, will leave two squadrons of eight ships and an independent flagship for the admiral commanding.

France.—Under Admiral Boué de Lapeyrère great administrative advances have already been made, and an Organic Law has been introduced to govern new construction, although it has not yet been definitely adopted. Its provisions are as follows:—

Year.	Battle-ships.	Scouts.	Destroyers.	Sub-marines.
1912	2	—	3	10

The object is to raise the fleet in 1919 to a strength of 28 battleships, 10 scouts, 52 destroyers, 45 coastal torpedo-boats, and 94 submarines. Under a special provision the first two ships have been started, the Jean Bart at Brest, and the Courbet at Lorient. With a tonnage of 23,026 these ships will carry twelve 12-in. guns (10 on the beam) and twenty-two 5·5-in. They are to be completed by the autumn of 1913—by which time Great Britain, the United States, and possibly also Germany, will have ships afloat with 13·5 and 14-in. guns. The Voltaire, first of the Danton class, has commenced her trials, having been laid down in June, 1907. The armoured cruisers Edgar Quinet and Waldeck Rousseau have also commenced their trials, the dates of laying down being November, 1905, and June, 1906, respectively. They are of 13,780 tons, and carry fourteen 7·6-in. guns. The average time taken to complete these three ships (laying down to trials) is fifty-one months. Only eight battleships have been completed for the French fleet since 1900, compared with Great Britain, 27; Germany, 18; U.S.A., 20. There seems to be no idea of attempting to regain the second place among the world's navies; there is no such inspiration behind the Organic Law, which, if carried out, will leave Germany about 100 per cent. ahead of France at sea.

Italy.—One battleship of the Dreadnought type, the Dante Alighieri, has been launched (August); she will carry twelve 12-in. guns. In the estimates for 1909–10 a small sum (£131,000) was set aside for the Conte di Cavour, with which it is believed a start has been made. On the Leonardo da Vinci and Giulio Cesare £200,000 each is to be spent in 1910–11, but no actual facts as to the progress with their construction (if any) is available. The armoured cruisers Amalfi and Pisa were completed towards the end of 1909; they carry four 10-in. and eight 7·5-in. guns on 9,980 tons. Three 3,600-ton scout-cruisers (Quarto, Nino Bixio, and Marsala) are building.

Austria.—Of the three Lord Nelson type battleships the Erzherzog Franz Ferdinand has been completed; the Zrinyi was launched in April; and the Radetzky is to commence her trials this winter. These are powerful ships of 14,226 tons, armed with four 12-in., eight 9·4-in., and twenty 3·9-in. guns—the first modern Austrian ships to carry 12-in. weapons. No official progress has been made with the much-talked-of Dreadnought programme, although no doubt is entertained as to the ultimate inclusion of the four ships in a national programme. Two vessels have actually been laid down by the Stabilimento Tecnico at Trieste, the builders declaring them to be a speculation. The heir-apparent is believed to have been largely instrumental in bringing about the commencement of these ships, whose names are suggestive. One is named Kaiser Franz Josef, after the reigning Emperor, and the other Tegetthof, after the victor of Lissa. After that battle it was decreed that an Austrian warship should always bear the name of the victorious admiral. A slip for a Dreadnought has been prepared at Pola, and two are under way at the Danubius Yard, Fiume. Things at present seem to depend on the conversion of the Hungarian delegates to the idea of naval expansion. It is pointed out by opponents of the project that Austria's military liabilities have been considerably increased by the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and that it will be impossible to provide adequately for land defence and at the same time to embark on ambitious naval schemes which will be met by Italy as fast as, or faster than, they advance. The small cruiser Admiral Spaun has been completed.

Russia.—The expected financial and administrative obstacles continue to retard the construction of the four ships laid down in June, 1909, none of which has yet been launched. There is some talk of laying down four ships for the Black Sea; but this rumour (apart from the fact that it takes six years or so to build a ship at Nikoleff) need not yet be treated seriously. The only real progress during the year is represented by a reorganisation of the training scheme for officers.

Spain.—Two of the three battleships decided upon have been laid down, their names being Espana and Alfonso XIII. The Jaime I. will be commenced in 1911. The three destroyers building are to steam 28 knots; they have been named Bustamente, Requesens, and Villamil. The battleships were described last year.

Turkey.—The scheme of new construction still hangs fire, but a number of ships have been purchased from Germany. These are the old battleships Weissenburg and Kurfurst Friedrich Wilhelm, for which £900,000 was paid, and the destroyers S165 to S168, bought for £420,000. Rear-Admiral H. P. Williams has succeeded Rear-Admiral Sir D. A. Gamble as naval adviser to the Ottoman Government.

Japan.—The boasted constructive ability of Japan has not been confirmed during the last twelve months. Of the battleships laid down in 1909 the Kawachi (Yokosuka, Jan.) was launched in October last, and the Settsu (Kure, April) is to be launched in March, 1911. The Satsuma was commissioned in April, having been five years under construction, while the Aki, now on her running her trials, was commenced two months before the Satsuma. These ships are armed with four 12-in. and twelve 10-in. guns, the Kawachi and Settsu, the first real eastern Dreadnoughts, having twelve 12-in. and ten 6-in. Many of the Japanese ships reported at one time and another to be building turn out to have been myths; indeed, the only armoured vessel under construction besides those mentioned is the cruiser Kurama, now concluding ier trials. A large armoured cruiser, reported o be of 18,650 tons, is to take the place of the Kawachi on the stocks; while under the programme for 1911 three armoured ships will be built, thus exhausting the new construction under existing programmes. A new programme may be looked for in the near future, although the popular outcry for more ships which arose early in 1910 was only of short duration. Adequate excuse could be found for a new programme in the action of Australia and New Zealand, and in the further fact that the British Admiralty is reported to have decided on sending the battleships Triumph, Swiftsure, and Albemarle to the Far East.

Brazil.—The battleships Minas Geraes and Sao Paolo, as well as the ten destroyers built by Messrs. Yarrow, have been completed, and have arrived at their home ports. A third battleship, the Rio de Janeiro, is building at Elswick, and is a remarkable instance of the progressive spirit of the South American Republics. On a displacement of 32,000 tons—12,750 tons larger than the Minas Geraes—this ship will carry twelve 14-in. guns, fourteen 6-in., and fourteen 4-in. Both Armstrong and Beardmore are making a gun of 14·3-in. calibre, which is larger than any gun mounted in existing European ships of modern design. The speed designed for the Rio is 22·5 knots, and the cost of the ship will be £2,900,000, for which three battleships could have been built twelve or fifteen years ago. The remarkable power of this ship is understood to be in the nature of a reply to the two ships laid down for the Argentine.

Argentine.—After a great deal of bother on the question of tenders and designs, the Argentine Government placed orders in February for two 27,940-ton ships with the Fore River Co. This company will build the Rivadavia, and has sublet the Moreno to the New York Shipbuilding Co. The ships are to carry twelve 12-in. guns (with a full broadside), twelve 6-in., and twelve 4-in., the speed being 22·5 knots, and the cost £2,190,000 apiece; they are to be completed in twenty-four and twenty-seven months respectively. Twelve destroyers have also been ordered in the Argentine Navy—four in England, four in France, and four in Germany; they will be of 1,400 tons and 32 knots.

Naval Airships.—The British naval airship No. 1 is now complete, and is about to commence her trials. Lieut. N. F. Usborne is in command, and Capt. M. F. Sueter has been appointed Inspecting Captain of Naval Airships. The first vessel is 500 ft. long and 50 ft. in diameter. Duralumin a new metal patented by the builders (Vickers, Maxim), has been used for the body, which is of the rigid type, the motive power being provided by two 200-h.p. motors. For the French service a Farman biplane has been purchased, and the construction of a number of "aérodromes marins" around the coast is contemplated. The old torpedo depot-ship Foudre is to be fitted up as a sea-going aeroplane depot-ship, and will be fitted with apparatus for the stowage, launch, and recovery of heavier-than-air craft. Japan is stated to have ordered thirty-eight aeroplanes in Europe. In America experiments are being made with a craft designed to start from and to return to the water, the place of the usual wheels or runners being taken by light canoes.

PERCIVAL A. HISLAM.

The Army in 1910.

HAVING regard to the unaccustomed rapidity of change and reorganisation in recent years, 1910 may be said to mark a period of comparative stagnation. No conspicuous reform has been introduced or adumbrated, though general military policy has been debated as keenly as ever, and perhaps with a fuller measure of understanding. Peculiar importance always attaches to the estimates of foreign critics who are interested in our national standard of military efficiency. Reference must be made to a series of articles which has appeared in the French Press, embodying the views of General Inglois and other competent observers as to the military aspects of the entente. In the opinion of these authorities, the value to France of any alliance with this country hinges upon our ability to place a force of not less than five divisions in the most probable theatre of operations, within fifteen days of mobilisation, and irrespective of any naval action. Without enforcing this precise proposition, it will be well to bear in mind that the recent bouleversement of our strategical conditions cannot be considered as affecting the dispositions and functions of the Fleet alone. Intimate co-operation of Fleet and Army is essential, and the capacity to act effectually in a European theatre has replaced the fitness for Indian, colonial, and savage warfare which endured so long as the criterion of our Land Forces. This apparently simple truth raises incidentally the entire question of the validity of our voluntary system, and of the practability of a Territorial Army that is recruited ad hoc in competition with our Regular Forces. The radical defect in our present military policy is that we are elaborating our second-line formations at the expense of our first-line, concentrating money and attention on a Territorial Force which should be composed of men who have passed through the mill of an Active Army, and refusing to recognise the palpable breakdown of the voluntary system. We are hourly being drawn face to face with these grave problems. A prominent feature of the moment is the alarming shortage of candidates for commissions in all branches of the Army. The causes are not obscure. The progressive impoverishment of the classes which formerly furnished a majority of officers, even though it be relative rather than actual, and dreaded as a contingency of the future rather than of the present, is undoubtedly a factor. Moreover, in the Regular Army there unfortunately exists a certain amount of uneasiness and vague discontent. Disappointment of expectations based upon hard work and good service records, a general lack of "prospects," and the inadequacy of pay to meet enhanced standards of living, may each be said to affect distinct categories of serving officers. Eligible might-be candidates are reluctant to accept service which can offer but few prizes, and those scarcely comparable to the rewards of commerce and industry. The social prestige of the officer's status may in many cases be poor compensation, and it is questionable whether it has not in recent years been diminished. The Special Reserve appeals in reality to a very restricted stratum, which supplied the old Militia with an insufficient number of officers. More onerous (if more honourable) obligations have not tended to widen that stratum. For the Territorial Forces it is apparently impossible to obtain enough officers uniting the requisite social position with the leisure to qualify themselves for instruction and leadership. It does not appear that the Officers' Training Corps will make good deficiencies, which in the Territorial units alone amounted on April 1st, 1910, to 1,488 in an establishment of 11,214. The Training Corps musters some 3,500 senior (University) cadets in 16 contingents, and 16,000 junior (Public School) cadets in 139 contingents. During 1909 about 50 ex-cadets accepted commissions in the Special Reserve or T.F.

No less serious than the officer question is the horse question. Our peace establishment of horses is inadequate, as are the annual replacements by casting. The extraordinary rate at which automotor transport is replacing horse-drawn transport in the general carrying services of the country bids fair to extinguish the medium-draught animal so indispensable for military use. Our purchases of horses do not suffice to induce breeders to cater for our possible needs. In 1909 only 940 horses were bought in England, only 2,265 in Ireland. In the same year Ireland alone exported 4,417 horses, mainly for the armies of foreign Powers. Our annual expenditure towards the encouragement of breeding has hitherto been but £5,100, as against £233,000 by France (of which £180,000 for her army), £378,000 by Germany (£250,000 for army), and £227,000 by Austria-Hungary. It is now, however, proposed to enable the Board of Agriculture to spend annually £50,000 in subsidies. A small addition of 18 men and 36 horses has been made to the establishment of line cavalry regiments, and the principle (mentioned in the ALMANACK for 1910) of "boarding-out" horses with farmers may be extended. A census of horses in the United Kingdom, too, is in progress, but as it is to be conducted by police authorities, who are neither empowered nor competent to decide age or suitability for military purposes, its exact value is not obvious, since the general total is already known approximately. Whilst all modern armies experience in some degree the difficulty of obtaining officers, no observer of foreign armies can question the fact that all the great military Powers, and many of those in the second rank, are far in advance of ourselves as regards both quality and quantity of horseflesh. In every other direction, moral, physical, and technical, our Regular Army makes constant progress. Recent reductions in establishment, however, are to be deplored. Their full effects will not be felt until the curtailment of reserve-producing power is apparent. The strength of the Regular Army Reserve was 134,556—a figure which must fall rapidly in future, influenced both by these reductions and by longer periods of colour-service. In 1909 only 33,837 recruits were required for the Regular Army, this number being much below the normal.

The condition of the Special Reserve cannot be regarded as satisfactory, in view of its peculiar functions. It is composed largely of youths who enlist with the object of qualifying physically for the Line, and therefore includes a high proportion of immature personnel. On October 1st, 1909, it exhibited a deficit of no less than 20,710 officers and men in an establishment of 90,664. The periods of training, whilst more rational and more valuable from the standpoint of efficiency than the trainings of the former Militia, do not always cater for the tastes of the classes which used to enter the latter. Other classes hold aloof. In 1909, 26,157 recruits were taken of whom many passed subsequently to the Regular Army, thus being included in the 33,837 Regular recruits above-mentioned. It must be remembered that of all the Special Reserve battalions only the 27 "extra" or "fourth" battalions are available for employment as units, and in any campaign of importance their proper place appears to be on the lines of communication of the Field Army. It is difficult, therefore, to see how, in the very probable event of Regular units being withdrawn from oversea garrison to join the Field Army, their posts can be filled without calling upon the Territorial Forces to do duty which it was never originally intended to impose upon them, and for which they are not legally constituted. A commencement, indeed, has already been made, in the shape of the Special Service Section of the T.A., composed of men who engage to serve as individuals oversea, either with the Field Army or in garrisons.

The Territorial Army itself has now been in existence long enough to permit of a deliberate opinion as to its utility and prospects for the future. It is universally agreed that better organisation, more systematic recruiting, more clearly defined obligations, and devoted exertions have provided a force which represents a notable advance from the former Volunteer formations. But the organisation is still large on paper only. Recruiting has been stimulated (particularly in some quarters) by methods which cannot be permanent, and which are in any case undesirable. In the all-important matter of training, too, the average unembodied Territorial soldier is but little better qualified than the average Volunteer. Some of the most stringent provisos as to training have had to be whittled down to vanishing point. Discipline in a few isolated instances has been lacking, though the spirit of the Force as a whole is excellent, if naturally dependent upon good will rather than upon the moral born of military solidity. A more strict conduct of musketry practices and tests has revealed an indifferent average standard of marksmanship. Apart from the fact that in 1909 no less than 30,979 Territorials were unable to shoot at all, for want of range accommodation, of the 172,400 who were tested only 106,125 qualified in a test considerably less severe than that applied to the Regular soldier. On January 1st, 1910, 67,087 men had not fired even a recruit's course. Nevertheless, and despite these deficiencies, the Territorial Infantry represents better value for money than the Territorial Artillery, which, it would appear, cannot be given the minimum of field-training and combined practices that alone can justify its existence. Beside this practical field training the technical science of gunnery becomes a secondary affair, relatively easy of acquisition. As in the old Volunteer Force, a few units exceptionally recruited and exceptionally situated, reach a standard which is wonderful when the paucity of their opportunities is considered, but the average capacity for manœuvre and rapid delivery is too low for true efficiency.

The Yeomanry arm still has the greatest possibilities, but, as in the Artillery, the provision of horses is parious. It is indefensible to insist upon Regular units loaning their horses for drills and exercises.

A prudent step towards excluding from the T.A. elements which would in time of war be urgently needed elsewhere has been taken in the form of restricting the enlistment of dockyard employés to 2 per cent. of their number.

The numerical progress of the T.A., so much discussed, is shown as follows:—Jan. 1st, 1910, estab. 11,218 offrs., 301,272 others; Strength, 701 offrs., 262,036 others (of whom about 100,000 were under age 20). April 1st, 1910, Estab. 11,214 offrs., 301,363 others; Strength, 9,726 offrs., 269,255 others. During 1909, 8,181 offrs. and 230,056 others attended camp for 8 days or more. A tendency was noticed in 1910 to attempt during training elaborate operations involving large numbers, and many critics remarked that the time would have been better spent in perfecting the instruction of the individual and of the minor unit. On the other hand, it was pointed out that if the T.A. be ever called upon to take the field in home defence, it must act forthwith en masse, whatever the individual standard may be; and some practice is essential for senior officers and staffs.

A Special Army Order of March sketched the formation of a T.A. Reserve in three categories, viz.:—(a) The T.A. Res. proper, designed to include ultimately an establishment of 100,000 ranks, having the same obligations as regards mobilisation as the serving Territorial soldier, but subject only to voluntary training. (b) A Technical Res., composed of individuals who, without having necessarily served in any branch of the army, are qualified to render special services. (c) A Veterans Res., sufficiently examined by its title, being merely a register of names of persons who have served in one branch of the army or another, but who are not included in any other roll. How far such organisations, even if perfected, can add to our military strength appears dubious.

The County Associations continue to do excellent work, but complain bitterly of lack of funds, and it is becoming increasingly obvious that the T.A., even in its present form, must cost very much more than any original estimate. Demands, not in themselves unreasonable, are to be complied with. Nothing has yet been done towards shifting on to the Associations the duties of caring for and assisting reservists and time-expired regular soldiers.

In our Overseas Forces the tendency is evident to reduce the Regular Establishment to a minimum, and to confine it to sedentary troops. The Indian establishment remains practically the same as heretofore, 76,009 of all ranks. The South African establishment will assuredly be reduced materially in consequence of recent political developments. Apart from these, the Colonial and Egyptian establishments amount to only 35,047 of all ranks. Both by sea and by land we are perforce adopting a policy of concentration.

No very tangible results are as yet apparent in consequence of the inception of the Imperial General Staff, but Australia is on the point of adopting a system of universal compulsory service, and effective reorganisation will commence in 1912. Many years, however, must elapse before our great self-governing Dominions are in a position to render us material aid in European warfare.

A strange controversy has raged around the appointment of a "General Officer Commanding-in-Chief in the Mediterranean," a personage saddled also with the responsibilities of an "Inspector-General of Oversea Forces," and of membership of the Selection Board and Committee of Imperial Defence. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that this appointment is costly and unnecessary, the duties being both redundant and impossible of accomplishment by one officer.

Army Estimates for 1910-11 amount to £27,760,000, as against £27,438,000 for the previous twelvemonth, and call for little comment. The slight increase is due almost entirely to expenditure on the Territorial Army, whose cost is approximately £3,100,000, as compared with £1,971,000 in 1905-6 for the Volunteer Force. Large sums will certainly be required for equipment and ranges in the near future.

Some progress has been made in the direction of military aviation, the Aeronautical Establishment having been enlarged considerably. Organisation of the six Divisional Signal Companies required for the Expeditionary Force has been completed, and the services of intercommunication generally have been recast. The new quick-firing howitzer will shortly be issued to the Regular Howitzer Field Batteries, and experiments are being made with an improved form of rifle bullet.

By Army Order of April 30th, the disciplinary powers of a commanding officer were extended to an award of 28 days detention—a step which may diminish the number of regimental and district courts-martial. In the Territorial Forces the aid of the civil courts has been invoked, under the provisions of the Territorial and Reserve Forces Act, for the maintenance of discipline where offenders have ceased to be subject to military law. The wisdom of this procedure seems uncertain, and the sentences of presiding magistrates appear considerably more severe than those which probably would have been awarded by a military authority for the same delinquency.

By Special Army Order of July 1st, the new appointment of Aide-de-Camp General to the King was created, carrying no extra pay, and being limited to four General Officers on the active list, and to a period of four years, subject to possible extension. The first four officers thus honoured are: Gen. Sir W. G. Nicholson, G.C.B.; Lt.-Gen. Sir H. L. Smith-Dorrien, K.C.B., D.S.O.; Lt.-Gen. Sir A. H. Paget, K.C.B., K.C.V.O.; and Maj.-Gen. J. S. Ewart, C.B.

This article would be incomplete without some allusion to the loss sustained by the Army in the death of its head and chief, His Majesty King Edward VII., whose connection with the land services was intimate and personal. His Majesty served with the 10th Royal Hussars and the Grenadier Guards, was Colonel-in-Chief of numerous units in all branches of the Army, held high honorary rank in the German, Austro-Hungarian, Spanish, Danish, Norwegian, and Swedish forces, and invariably evinced a deep interest in all military affairs.

P. R. COLES.

General.—Reviewing the months of 1910, it may be said that no event of any seriousness has affected the position of Secondary Education, either politically or otherwise—in fact, politicians have left the subject severely alone.

But over the whole field of education important questions are coming up for consideration and settlement. The conferences held by the various scholastic associations at the beginning of the year have as usual not been productive of much result, and though resolution succeeds resolution, the position remains practically the same. We cannot fail to be impressed by the great efforts made to face the problems of the day, and we cannot but doubt that, with greater concentration of purpose, considerable progress will be made in the future. The State is gradually spreading its control over all classes of English schools and colleges, but it has been compelled to admit the supreme necessity of preserving freedom of type and individual initiative. The problem of the future will therefore be to find a modus operandi of opposing "principles in the details of Parliamentary statutes and of departmental administration, and is the task which is now pressing upon us in every grade of English education in its relation to national life."

Secondary Schools.—The amount of grant paid by the Board of Education to Secondary Schools in England was £449,653, as against £324,334 for the previous year. This money was distributed among 737 schools. Of these, 240 Council Schools received £201,194, 31 Girls' Public Day School Trust Schools £9,441, 48 Roman Catholic Schools £16,711, and 418 foundation and other schools £222,306. There are now 950 secondary schools under the influence of the Board—an addition of 100 in two years—with 10,000 teachers and 158,000 pupils, 50,000 of whom are free exelementary school scholars. In the latter case the period of average school-life in the secondary school has been lengthened from one year, and the Board have insisted that this rule shall in future be observed. On the subject of curriculum, Mr. Runciman recently stated that the Board have no desire to encourage uniformity of type of secondary school, but that they wish to develop experiment and variety and to respect differences in parental conviction. Even the great public schools will soon find themselves drawn into the meshes of administrative change, which will tend to unity in one educational system.

With regard to Free Places, the percentage will continue to be calculated on admissions, so that in grant-earning schools an ever-increasing proportion of scholars will be receiving free Secondary Education. It is now urged, both on behalf of Secondary Schools and of Local Authorities, that free places should be given for limited periods, and should only be renewable on the evidence of the scholar's industry and progress. This particular regulation prescribes that, in all free-charging secondary schools free places must be offered to pupils from the elementary schools, and the number so offered must ordinarily equal 25 per cent. of the total number of pupils admitted during the previous year. The fear, on the other hand, that the free places will swamp the schools may be disregarded so long as the Board, in considering proposals for the waiving of Article 20, have careful regard to the circumstances and character of each school, which, in effect, is now being done.

Registration of Teachers.—Much has recently been said with regard to the absorption of schoolmasters into the ranks of the regular Civil Service. This change would probably involve the grading of secondary schools into classes, each with different scales of salary, and in the present state of reorganisation of education would prove administratively difficult and politically impossible.

A representative conference of about thirty-seven Associations of Teachers was held in November, 1909, under the presidency of the Master of the Rolls, and attended by representatives of the Board of Education. All the nine resolutions put forward were carried, and it is hoped that the matter will now receive the serious consideration of the Board of Education, and that the practically unanimous demand of the teaching profession for a registration council will become statutory.

Tenure.—A joint deputation of the Association of Headmasters and the Association of Assistant Masters was received by the President of the Board of Education. It introduced certain phases of the tenure difficulty not settled by the Endowed Schools (Masters) Act, and submitted that it required supplementing by the insertion of a clause which would confer on an assistant master under notice of dismissal the right to appear in person before the governing body of his school in his own defence. This question up to the present has been barren of result, with the exception of a model tenure clause which has been forwarded by the Board to every educational authority in England and Wales. The clause in question has been adopted by a few authorities, and there is no doubt that the position of the assistant master has been enhanced by being made servants of the governing body. The model articles of government referred to provide also for the dismissal of the headmaster after six months' notice without cause assigned, whereas in most of the endowed school schemes there are usually provisions to prevent the dismissal of a headmaster otherwise than by a resolution passed at a special meeting by a two-thirds majority of the governors present.

Curriculum.—The most important question the year has been the proposed adoption of a revised curriculum in 1911 by over 100 of our great schools. The headmasters recognise that English and French are serious studies deserving no less serious attention than Latin and Greek. A resolution was passed by the Headmasters' Conference in 1908, "That a committee be appointed to confer with preparatory schoolmasters as to a scheme of studies for school boys from the age of 9 till about 16, and to draw up a report on the subject." The reference was so far modified as to frame a scheme of studies for boys from the age of 9 until the time of entering a public school, the principle being that a boy should not be allowed to take a third language, besides English, until the foundations of two of them have been securely laid.

The proportionate marks proposed for scholarship examinations will be:—Latin, 200 or more; English, 150; French, 150 or 100; Greek, 100; English to include grammar, literature, history and science. No reform or system as indicated is practicable unless the leading public schools agree to give practical encouragement to it by the conditions which they impose upon preparatory schools. It now remains to be seen whether the great schools will take action on the resolutions. The Hebdomadal Council of Oxford expresses its agreement with the main principles of the Headmasters' Conference resolution, which is in keeping with the lines followed by Council in drafting proposals for the reform of Responsions. Progress has also taken place in the teaching of individual subjects. The Board of Education have issued memoranda on the teaching of geometry, algebra, and history. At the end of last year an important memorial was addressed to the Board representing that German as a school subject was losing ground, and requesting the Board to call the attention of school authorities to the national importance of a knowledge of this language. To illustrate, the number of candidates in the Oxford Senior Local Examination in 1907 was four times what it was in 1895, but the number taking German was almost exactly the same; at the last examination in July the percentage taking German sank to 4·7. At the Joint Matriculation Examination of the Northern Universities in 1907 only 188 candidates out of 2,012, or about 9 per cent., offered German. At the London Matriculation Examination the percentage is usually about 7 or 8, and this though Latin is no longer obligatory. In the preliminary examination of March–April, 1909, held by the Scottish Universities, 46 out of 920 took German, while 372 offered French.

Inspection.—A system of simultaneous inspection of all secondary schools in a given area has recently been introduced—in fact, it may be called an inspection of the administrative arrangements of each local authority. The inspection of the Bradford Secondary Schools has attracted attention in that it was found that upwards of 70 per cent. of the pupils were under 14 years of age, and that more than one-third of the whole left the school in one particular year. The cause of this state of things was the provision of free places amounting to from 50 to 70 per cent. of the total school places. The authorities contended that a secondary school course ending at 14 years of age provides an excellent training. The inspectors noted that there was no undertaking that pupils should remain in the schools after 14 years of age, and a case established the fact that such undertakings have no legal force.

Litigation.—A notable action was brought by a parent against the Trustees and the Headmaster of Bedford Grammar School as to the advisability of corporal punishment. Judgment was given for the defendants with costs. Reference should also be made to a case which awakened considerable public interest, viz., Archer-Shee v. The King, in which, owing to a malversation of justice, an Osborne cadet was expelled for stealing. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. An action was also recently brought by a parent against the Headmaster of Richmond School for the wrongful expulsion of a boy, in which the verdict was given against the defendant.

Training for Teachers.—New regulations have been issued by the Board of Education, but some time must elapse before the results can be seen. A training college, partly theoretical and partly practical, has been inaugurated at Cambridge University. The theoretical work consists of lectures on the Theory, History, and Practice of Education, on school methods, and other kindred subjects. For the practical work special arrangements have been made for a student to be placed for one or more terms in charge of an experienced master at one or other of the three schools in Cambridge. During the period of school-practice insisted on by the Board of Education, each master is responsible for the student during the whole time he is in school, and, in addition, gives him private instruction in questions relating to school work and discipline. The headmasters of several public schools away from Cambridge have also offered practical assistance. The University grants a certificate of theoretical and practical efficiency to persons who have satisfied the examiners in theory and practice. The students must ordinarily be graduates of any university, the course of training to be for a year, consisting of three consecutive terms, and the fee for the course £22 10*s.*

Army Qualifying Examination.—The qualifying examination has been designed to secure a test of general school education before Army candidates should be allowed to specialise for the Army, and that the interval between that examination and the competitive examination was intended to be spent in advancing the education of candidates, at school, to a distinctly higher standard of knowledge in more special subjects for the competitive examination.

It is believed that the Army Council have no intention of dropping the competitive examination, and there is every prospect that the two examinations will in due course be combined.

School Cadet Corps are now units of the Officers' Training Corps. In addition to a specified number of drills and an Eight at Bisley, the cadets are expected to obtain Certificate "A" before they enter the senior division of the University, and qualify for the holding of Certificate "B," the latter representing 200 marks to the Sandhurst or Woolwich candidate. Arrangements have been made with the War Office that at the Public Schools Camp of 1911 two or three headmasters with experience of School Corps will also be present.

Public Schools Emigration League.—On all sides we are faced with complaints that parents do not know what to do with their sons after they have received a secondary education, consequently a league has been formed under the auspices of the Headmasters' Conference and the Headmasters' Association to furnish information, guidance, and protection to boys leaving the public secondary schools of the United Kingdom who intend to make a livelihood by farming or in other occupations in the outlying portions of the Empire. The league has now a central office in London, under the direction of a committee, and is in close touch with the headmasters of secondary schools. Local advisory committees, consisting of old public school boys, have been formed in the leading centres of population in the Overseas Dominions to co-operate with the committee in London, and to give advice and to help in other ways when any difficulties arise. To obtain the assistance of the league each applicant must produce a certificate of physical and moral fitness from his headmaster, and fill in a form showing his record at school. The league, in the past eight months, has been very successful in its labours, and has sent out over 40 selected candidates for positions on farms, banks, engineering firms, &c., and for entrance at the various colleges and universities.

WHILST the recent Press Conferences has forced this subject to receive immediate attention for newspaper purposes, it has been regarded as a matter of first importance for a number of years. Thus, in 1902, Mr. Charles Bright, F.R.S.E., strongly urged for an all-round Imperial rate of 1s., or 9d. a word with a proportional reduction for Press messages.*

Cable tariffs to certain outlying portions of the Empire still run as high as 7s. a word, and it is widely recognised to be contrary to the spirit of the age that, after a century of submarine telegraphy, there should be no alternative between waiting three months for an answer to a penny letter from Australia and sending a cablegram at 3s. a word. If only one class of the community had to be considered, and that class those who, at present, use the cable most, the prevailing agitation for a reduction of rates would have less meaning, for a reduced tariff points to competition amongst traders. It is, however, to the interest of the Empire to widen the scope of telegraphic communication by increasing the use of the cable, and this can only be accomplished by liberal reductions in the tariff. Turning to the individual, or domestic, aspect of the question, whilst there may not to-day appear to be any great demand for the interchange of social messages betwixt the various corners of the Empire, this demand would undoubtedly receive considerable impetus if, and when, the facilities rendered anything of the sort reasonably practical. To effect such a result would do much towards stimulating inter-Imperial trade. It has sometimes been stated that the volume of telegraphic communication between given points is practically determined by the volume of trade. It may, however, be pointed out that the volume of trade would be likely to receive substantial development by a lowering of telegraph rates. The question practically resolves itself into who is to take the initiative. Railways have done much, on their own account, towards opening up a country and its trade, and telegraphy might well be made to do more than it has so far in developing the trade of the Empire by a reduction in the tariff. At present, though the world's cables provide an eminently sure, speedy, and secret system of telegraphy, it is an eminently costly one. Thus by far the greater part of the traffic across the Atlantic, for example, is associated with Stock Exchange quotations, and but for these—where speedy delivery means everything—less than half the cables now working would serve the purpose.

Proposals have been made from time to time (notably by Mr. J. Henniker Heaton, M.P.) to employ foreign government telegraph lines, worked at lower rates, in substitution for cables, to carry our inter-Imperial messages. Unfortunately, however, apart from obvious strategic objections, land lines through foreign countries, worked by inefficient native clerks, are a constant source of delay, besides being somewhat unreliable, due to want of satisfactory organisation.

Owing to the strong financial position of the big cable companies, and to the fact that they practically form a combined force, it is conceivable that a uniform tariff of a modest description may some day become effective on the principle of taking the rough with the smooth. In considering this reform from the point of view of practicability, it has, however, to be borne in mind, as recently pointed out by Mr. Charles Bright,* that: (a) In any individual case, if the tariff is, say, halved, the number of messages transmitted requires to be materially more than doubled to make up for increased overhead charges; (b) The carrying capacity of any one cable is confined within circumscribed limits, and that if these limits are exceeded a new cable is involved to contend with the increased traffic; (c) Though we have enjoyed electrical communication with far distant lands for a number of years, we are still only able to do so at substantial cost, cables being fundamentally an expensive medium, and their carrying capacity in proportion to cost being, as already stated, closely limited; (d) By the contrariness of things, just where a low tariff would be peculiarly welcome—i.e., where, owing to the distance, the mail service takes so long in comparison with a cablegram—the difficulties are at a maximum, for here the additional cables entailed would be an especially serious item in the matter of cost; (e) The increase in working expenses entailed by a reduction in postal rates is insignificant compared with that involved by a drastic reduction in cable tariffs.

Some reference may be suitably made here to the vexed question of codes. Over 90 per cent. of the messages at present transmitted are in code; and by this method the equivalent of an enormous number of words is already sent at what amounts to comparatively cheap rates. Thus, it is possible to send in two words, at a shilling apiece, a trans-Atlantic message which, when decoded, works out at 170 words—representing no less than 7 words for a penny. Without the code system the Cable Companies would not be able to handle anything like even the present traffic, except by laying down more cables. Secrecy is one of the principal objects of codes. They, however, introduce—especially when in cipher—considerable scope for error. Apart from this, codes cannot, from a public standpoint, be recognised as a satisfactory substitute for low rates in plain English, involving, as they do, a great deal of work in "coding" and "decoding."

Whereas on land lines more than half of the messages sent are of a more or less domestic nature, the corresponding proportion on the cables of the world is at present only 5 per cent. Though no doubt this difference is largely accounted for by the inherently different circumstances in each case, it is also probably due to the comparatively high cable rates; for letters travelling so much more slowly by sea than land, the tendency should be towards the transmission of a greater number of private messages by cables than by land lines. In many instances delivery within two, or even three, days would meet the requirements of private cablegrams, and the same may be said of many official and business messages to far distant lands. This points to the classification of messages under the head of "Urgent" and "Non-urgent" such as was strongly advocated to the Cable Communications Committee by the above-quoted authority, and again subsequently.† Reduc-ates for "deferred" (non-urgent) messages have ince come into partial operation in Canada, as well as India and France, and general adoption of the principle may now well be found practicable on an Imperial basis. Without "deferred" rates, what happens is that though the cables are worked to their full capacity during "rush" hours, they lie quite idle for at least four hours out of the twenty-four—and partially so for a much longer period—due, in part, to the time difference at each end. By the general introduction of deferred, "non-urgent," rates, cables would be more uniformly fed—during slack periods as during mutual business hours. The Cable Communications Committee reported favourably on the matter in the following terms:—"By this plan the sender of the message would receive an inferior service for a lower price, and such a plan would be a considerable boon to the public, especially as regards messages which are domestic rather than commercial." In this connection it may be noted that the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies of America recently introduced what is known there as the "night-letter" system, under which telegrams are accepted at very low rates for transmission during the night. This has been found to result in an enormous increase of traffic which has strained available resources to the utmost. Moreover, with the dawn of 1911 "deferred" rates are to be introduced experimentally for the ordinary traffic between this country and Australasia, and it is hoped that this experiment in encouraging and stimulating the sending of private cablegrams will prove a sufficient success to ensure continuance and extension.

It is probable that radio (or wireless) telegraphy will, in due course, be turned to considerable account in this direction for comparatively unimportant, or non-urgent, messages, as well as for the simultaneous transmission of news to different parts of the Empire. In such cases economy is more essential than celerity or accuracy. On the other hand, for business messages of great urgency and importance, the first consideration will always be efficiency, and here the cable is likely to hold its own for many a day. It is not improbable that in the near future wireless systems will be largely adopted as auxiliaries to cables, every cable system between different parts of the Empire being accompanied by a "wireless" (radio-telegraphic) method of one description or another—whether in competition with the cable system or otherwise. A judgment could thus be formed as to whether the latter—which is cheaper and can therefore offer better terms—could eventually take the place of the former, which is at present more efficient.

An important point on which a decision should shortly be arrived at is as to whether further all-British telegraph lines throughout the Empire are now sufficiently needed, from a political and strategic standpoint, to warrant their being made, if necessary, a subject for taxation, on the same principle that prevails in the matter of battleships, where the only anticipated return is the security of the Empire. The principle has already been accepted in the less obvious case of subsidies to cable companies, as well as in regard to the mail service. Without going into the question of relative returns, there is considerably more argument in favour of the State establishing and controlling electric communication for Imperial purposes than for the railways being worked by Government, for in the latter instance the Imperial and political object is non-existent. This branch of the subject was usefully dealt with at a recent Mansion House meeting convened by Sir Edward Sassoon, Bart., M.P., as Chairman of the House of Commons Telegraph Committee.

On national grounds there is a strong feeling in favour of bringing the separate units of the Empire into closer telegraphic touch—politically, socially, commercially. It is also thought to be desirable, for strategic reasons, to complete the "All-British" electric girdle so usefully initiated by the Pacific cable. As has been pointed out by Mr. Charles Bright in the course of recommendations to the Cable Communications Committee, this could be effected by a cable from Ascension to Jamaica, viâ Barbados, and hence meeting the Atlantic Cable system viâ the Bermuda-Halifax Line. If this all-British system is to be a Government affair uniform with the Pacific cable, further lines will require to be laid to render the Imperial chain independent of other systems. There would have to be a cable between Australia and South Africa, and hence to Ascension. Such a plan would be preferable, in many ways, to the governments concerned buying up existing lines; and if a State Atlantic cable is decided on in connection with this movement, care will require to be taken to render it absolutely "All-British," as well as the land line system between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It should, indeed, be recognised that the general principle of instituting new Imperial State electric communicating links (of one sort or another) is preferable to laying hold of those owned and worked by vested interests. Some of the further lines needed would not, probably, prove remunerative for some time, but they would at once greatly benefit not only the Mother Country but her outlying possessions, in serving as an incentive to inter-Imperial trade. Both France and Germany have already realised the force of this by establishing for themselves a number of cables for communicating with their various outlying possessions, these lines serving political and trade, in addition to strategic, requirements. The Cable Companies having declined to undertake the All-British Pacific Cable—as well as other Imperial lines for which there has been a certain political and strategic demand—the Governments concerned would be fully justified in setting afoot such State cables or radio-telegraphic systems. It would, indeed, be more or less essential for these suggested systems of communication to be worked as one with the already existing all-British Pacific cable. Thus, though, from a point of principle, there is much to be said in favour of such concerns being retained as a subject for private enterprise under suitable Government subsidies, that would now seem to be out of the question in this instance. If there is to be a substantial development of inter-Imperial telegraphy, the All-British Pacific Cable will clearly require to be duplicated before long. This duplication might, however, take the form of a linking up with the American Pacific Cable, as suggested by Mr. Bright some years ago.* Such an arrangement might be made in a manner at once economical and satisfactory, by establishing the following electrical communications, which would be of mutual use to the countries concerned: (a) A satisfactory system of radio (wireless) telegraphy from Vancouver to San Francisco; (b) A similar system between Honolulu and Fanning; (c) Also between the Philippines and Australia, by way of either New Guinea or Borneo. This scheme would have the advantage of increasing the scope for traffic. Moreover, in view of the immense commercial field of China, added to the important commercial and political relations with Japan, it has obvious Imperial merits. If put into effect, the scheme would also serve as an excellent practical trial for radio-telegraphy; and in the last instance (c) a "wireless" installation would, in any case, be preferable to a cable, owing to the treacherous sea-bottom in the vicinity of New Guinea and Borneo.

In connexion with this question it is well to keep constantly in mind the contingency of a great European war, such as would, undoubtedly, entail the cutting of many cables on the Eastern trade route. Thus, though the duplicating system of the Pacific Cable (whether "wireless" or cable) may well be Anglo-American in character, the original line should be strictly "All-British" on the entire route to and from headquarters in London.

Since the above lines were written, the Pacific Cable Board has arranged for a direct and exclusive telegraph wire, worked by English clerks, between Montreal and Vancouver vid the Canadian Pacific Railway, thereby meeting requirements to some extent. It would seem, however, that the entire system from end to end should, really speaking, be under State control, and all news affecting the Empire under Government supervision. In any case, there can be little doubt that an Inter-Imperial news service should be free from the possible influence of a foreign neighbouring country in times of peace as well as war. With the recent reduction in Imperial Press rates important Imperial news and speeches will no doubt in the future be sent in far greater fulness, thereby avoiding the misunderstandings that have often arisen due to overmuch, or inaccurate, condensation. The Pacific Cable Board's offer in regard to the rates on their system eventually resulted in a corresponding agreement on the part of the associated cable companies with reference to rates between England, Australia, India, and South Africa. Thus, history has again repeated itself; for the Pacific Cable has, for the second time, been the means of lowering the rates to Australia, though in this case the Press rates only. The position is still, however, unsatisfactory in Canada, where the Dominion Government is faced with the double task of arranging with the Colonial telegraph companies on the one hand and the trans-Atlantic cable companies on the other. This points to the unsatisfactory character of an Imperial system such as is only half a Government affair—the land lines being open to interruption during war and the subject of negotiation with other interests in times of peace.

The position does not seem likely to be improved from any point of view with the projection of two further Atlantic cables by a recent combination of forces between the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on the one hand and the Western Union Telegraph Company—a similarly all-powerful American concern—on the other, especially as both will form part of the "Pool." On the contrary, the increasing number of Atlantic cables controlled by American interests accentuates the need for an invulnerable State line between this country and the further shores of Canada, constituting a real satisfactory connecting link with the All-British Pacific Cable.

The whole subject of Extended and Cheaper Imperial Telegraphy by cable and "Wireless" methods is one that should form an important item at the forthcoming Imperial Conference.

HOW PROPERTIES ARE ASSESSED.

THE average ratepayer is by no means familiar with the methods employed by the rating authorities in fixing the assessments of the various kinds of property, though the subject is one which concerns him closely. The law of rating and the procedure in connexion with the making of Valuation Lists in London differ from those outside the metropolis, but the principles of valuation are the same. In London the Act regulating assessments is the Metropolis (Valuation) Act. 1869, whilst in the provinces, the Union Assessment Committee Acts, 1862–1880, apply, except in only six places which do not come within their scope. In the United Kingdom all local rates, together with Income Tax (Schedule A)—sometimes called the landlord's property tax—Inhabited House Duty and Land Tax, are levied on the annual values of property.

GROSS AND RATEABLE VALUES.—It is the duty of the rating authorities to estimate two values for every property which is liable for the payment of rates. In London these are known as the gross value and rateable value, and correspond to the gross estimated rental and net annual value in the provinces. The definitions of the latter given in the Union Assessment Committee Act of 1862 were modified by the Valuation (Metropolis) Act of 1869 in the definitions of gross value and rateable value, the object being to substitute clearer words, though the intention was the same. The gross value of a property means the annual rent which a tenant might reasonably be expected, taking one year with another, to pay for it, if the tenant undertook to pay all the usual tenant's rates and taxes, and if the landlord undertook to bear the cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain the property in a state to command that rent. The term rateable value means the gross value after deducting therefrom a proportion to cover the probable average annual cost of the repairs, insurance, &c.

It should be noticed that the above definitions stipulate as the basis the annual rent which a tenant might reasonably be expected to pay, taking one year with another, that is to say, a full, fair rent. On whatever terms a property is held, the authorities have to estimate for the gross value, or gross estimated rental, a fair rent which a yearly tenant would pay if the landlord did all repairs and the tenant paid rates and taxes.

Nature of Deductions.—With regard to the proportion representing the average annual cost of repairs, insurance, &c., to be deducted from the gross value to arrive at the rateable value, there is an important difference between the Acts governing London and the rest of the country. Whereas the Valuation (Metropolis) Act specifies a maximum rate of deductions for various classes of property, the Acts which apply to the provinces contain no such provisions. Consequently the amount of the deduction is left to the discretion of the local rating authorities, with the result that there is great want of uniformity in this respect. The following maximum deductions specified in the Valuation (Metropolis) Act are almost invariably adopted in London, except in the cases of premises with machinery :—

Buildings without land other than gardens—
Where the gross value is under £20	¼
" " " £20 and under £40	⅓
" " " £40 and upwards...	½
Land with buildings not houses	⅒
Land without buildings	1/20
Mills and Manufactories.....	¼

METHODS OF VALUATION.—The methods adopted by Valuation and Assessment Committees in determining the annual values of property vary considerably in different unions in the provinces, and though in some cases attempts are made to secure the adoption of similar methods throughout the whole of the rating areas in a county, these on the whole are not very successful. In London, however, there is much greater uniformity of practice. Every five years the London County Council convenes a Conference of all the rating authorities in the metropolis, when questions relating to assessment matters are discussed and resolutions passed, which, while not binding on the local authorities, are followed to a large extent. The following notes will give an indication of the methods by which the annual values of various classes of properties are determined, within and without the metropolis.

Quarterly and Yearly Tenancies.—With regard to properties let on quarterly or yearly tenancies, the terms of letting generally correspond to those mentioned in the definition of gross value given above, that is to say, the landlord does the repairs and the tenant pays the usual tenant's rates and taxes. In these cases the amount of the rent—if a fair one—is usually taken as the gross value, and the rateable value is arrived at by making the necessary deduction to cover the cost of repairs, insurance, &c. Should the tenant be liable for the repairs, then the rent will be taken for the rateable value and a proportion added to obtain the gross value.

Weekly and Monthly Tenancies.—The rents paid for properties let on weekly and monthly tenancies usually include the rates and taxes and water rate. It is evident that these must be deducted to arrive at the gross value, or rent which a yearly tenant would pay if he were also liable for these charges. In most districts a scale is compiled by the rating authorities which allows for these deductions and commonly for a "contingency balance." This is a small allowance to cover any rise in rates while the scale is in force and also to take into account the fact that the rent on a yearly tenancy may reasonably be regarded as slightly less than 52 times the weekly rent or 12 times the monthly rent. Applications should be made to the local rating authorities for copies of such scales.

Short Leases.—The practice in the metropolis with regard to premises held on short leases differs considerably from that in the provinces. In London, where the tenant is liable for both internal and external repairs, 10 per cent. is usually added to the rent to obtain the gross value and the proper deduction made to arrive at the rateable value. In the provinces the rent is generally taken as the rateable or net annual value and a proportion added to fix the gross estimated rental. Often a premium is paid on taking up a lease and this must be taken into account. This is done by calculating what would be the equivalent yearly rent of such premium and adding this amount to the rent reserved under the lease. For instance, a premium of £400 on a 21 years' lease is regarded as equivalent to a yearly rent of about £34. The following examples will show the results arrived at by the methods generally followed in London and the provinces where premises are let on a full repairing lease for 21 years at (say) £120 per annum, with the payment of a premium of £400 :—

In London—	£
Rent on lease	120
Equivalent yearly rent of premium...	34
	154
Add 10 per cent.	15
Gross value	169
Deduct $\frac{1}{6}$	28
Rateable value	141

In the Provinces—	£
Rent on lease	120
Equivalent yearly rent of premium...	34
Net annual value	154
Add (say) $\frac{1}{2}$	30
Gross estimated rental	184

In cases where the tenant is liable for internal repairs only, the usual practice in London is to add 5 per cent. to the rent to obtain the gross value.

It must not be assumed that the rent on lease should be taken in every case as the basis of assessment. In some flourishing districts values have increased by 50 per cent. or more during the last 12 or 15 years, and obviously in such cases it would not be fair to expect an assessment based on a rent on a 21 years' lease with only three or four years unexpired. In London, if the lease has not run for more than five years, the rent is taken primâ facie as the full rental value; but where the expired term is longer then at any revaluation the rating authorities will ignore the rent if it should differ from the full market rent obtainable at the time. In the provinces large numbers of assessments based on rents under old leases are still in force, owing to there being no provisions for periodical revaluations of property, such as form part of the procedure in the metropolis.

Freeholds and Long Leaseholds.—In dealing with freeholds and properties held on long leases, the rating authorities will, if possible, value these by comparison with other similar premises or by taking the interior floor space at so much per square foot, having regard to the locality and the nature of the building. Where, however, this is not practicable, the gross value is generally arrived at by adding to the estimated annual value of the land an estimated annual value for the building. This method is commonly used when dealing with factories, warehouses, schools, fire-stations, &c. The value of the land is fixed in the case of freeholds by a percentage —three to four—on the capital value; in the case of long leaseholds, the ground rent, if it be the full market value, is taken. The annual value of the building is estimated by taking a percentage on the capital value thereof. This will vary between five and seven per cent. in London, according to the value and class of building, five per cent. being applied to the most costly buildings and seven per cent. to those of least value. In the provinces much lower percentages are frequently taken. For a building worth £6,000 on land the value of which is £2,000 a fair assessment would be £440 gross value and £367 rateable value, arrived at as follows :—

4 per cent. on £2,000	80
6 per cent. on £6,000	360
Gross value	440
Deduct $\frac{1}{6}$	73
Rateable value	367

Machinery.—The question of the rating o machinery is one which has been responsible fo a large number of important law cases from tim to time. The decisions of the Courts may b stated briefly. Fixed machinery which may b regarded as part of the freehold, e.g., fixe boilers, is rateable as part of the premise Other machinery which is not fixed to the so or building, but which is on the premises for th purpose of making and which make them fit fo the particular purpose for which they are use e.g., printing machines, drilling machine lathes, &c., should be taken into account in s far as it enhances the value of the premises fo such purpose. In determining the gross an rateable values, the rating authority has to est mate the rent a tenant might reasonably e expected to pay for the premises with th machinery installed ready for use. The metho employed in ascertaining this rent vary great in different parts of the country. In son districts a percentage on the value of s machinery is added to the annual value of th land and buildings, whilst in others the value the machinery is left out of account altogeth or only the first motive power is considered. London 7½ per cent. on the present value of t machinery is taken as the gross value.

With regard to the deduction between t gross and rateable value, as stated above, the A governing the metropolis stipulates one-third the maximum. This, however, is not alwa allowed unless there is a large amount machinery on the premises. Where the va of the machinery is not great, the rati authorities frequently adopt another meth The following examples will illustrate the pr tice in London :—

(1) Premises held on a yearly tenancy at £ per annum. Value of Machinery £1,00

Rent	60
7½ per cent. on £1,000	75
Gross value	135

OF NITRATE OF SODA, SALT, PETROLEUM, RUBBER, AND SULPHUR.

NITRATE OF SODA.

NITRATE of Soda is extensively used as a rtiliser, 80 per cent. of the nitrate exported om Chile being used for that purpose; and its e is largely increasing, the consumption in 909 being 1,000,000 tons in excess of that of 890. In the United Kingdom the sulphate of mmonia industry provides a substitute for gricultural purposes, and the consumption of trate in the United Kingdom has been prac-ically stationary for the last ten years, the creased demand being met by the production sulphate of ammonia. The nitrate formation Chile extends over an area of 8,620 sq. miles, nd it is estimated that over £27,000,000 is in-ested in that industry. SALT.

Salt is the basis of the alkali manufacture, d approximately 1,000,000 tons are decomposed nually in the United Kingdom for the manu-cture of sodium compounds. The production salt in America increases annually, and in 1908 s almost double that of the United Kingdom. 1904 2,753,750 tons were produced in the United ates. In China the manufacture has been rried on for nearly 2,000 years, mainly by the aporation of brine in large iron pans heated by tural gas; the annual Chinese output is about 0,000 tons. The bulk of the salt produced in ain, Italy, and Japan is by evaporation of sea ter; in England by the evaporation of brine direct heat. Good brine contains 1 part of lt in 3 parts of water, while a saturated solution brine at 226° Fahrenheit contains 40 per cent. salt.

showing a decrease of nearly 500,000 tons since 1882.

PETROLEUM.

The world's production of petroleum in 1908 was practically double that of 1900, the increase being due to the greater output of the American (and especially Californian) oilfields. Mexico is also becoming an important producer. Russia shows but slight increases in the past ten years, but Rumania and Galicia show a regular and constant increase (Galicia, 1898, 350,000 tons—1909, 2,150,000 tons; Rumania, 1898, 180,000 tons—1909, 1,300,000 tons). In all the oil-producing countries large quantities of crude oil and residues are consumed for power purposes. Oil is largely used as fuel in Russia, California, and Mexico, while Austria has decided to introduce oil fuel on the State railways in order to find an outlet for the rapidly increasing output of Galicia. Other producing countries are also using oil in place of coal. In 1908 America (63·09 per cent.) and Russia (21·85 per cent.) yielded 84·94 per cent. of the world's total production.

RUBBER.

During 1909 the price of rubber was abnormally high owing to the increased demand, and the industry attracted a great deal of public attention. Many new companies were floated, and vast areas of land have been planted with rubber trees.

The trees commence to yield when six years old, and it appears probable that there will be a considerable over-production in the course of the next few years unless the demand greatly exceeds the average annual increase. The total value of rubber exported from Brazil and Bolivia in 1909 is given as £18,926,061, and on this basis the value of the world's production for that year would be £33,462,260.

S. R. ADCOCK.

Produce of the Corn Crops (Great Britain), 1909 and 1910.

THE estimated yield of wheat in 1910 is nearly 2½ bushels per acre less than in 1909 and about half a bushel less than the average of the previous decade. The total production of Wheat, while less than last year by about 600,000 quarters, is above the ten years' average, mainly in consequence of an increase of acreage in recent years. Barley is slightly above an average yield in Great Britain, notwithstanding a deficiency of one bushel per acre in Scotland, but it is less than in 1909 by three bushels per acre. Oats are the most satisfactory of the corn crops with a yield per acre of over one bushel above average. Beans are well above average and still more above the previous year's return. The Hay crop, both from arable and meadow land, is above the average by nearly 2 cwt. per acre in the one case and 1¼ cwt. in the other. Altogether over 9 million tons of hay were grown in 1910 as compared with less than 8½ million tons in 1909. The average annual production is about 9 million tons.

DURING the last few years an appreciable reduction in the number of premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors in the metropolis has taken place, and a further reduction will probably be one result of the increased Licence Duties payable under the Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910. At the 31st March, 1910, the total number of un-licensed premises in London, including the City, was 6,922, and off-licensed premises 2,555. The following table shows the number of each in the City of London and each metropolitan borough, and in connexion with public-houses and beer-houses the population per house. In calculating these latter figures the Registrar-General's estimates of population in the middle of 1910 have been used.

As the result of proceedings under the Licensing Act of 1904, 437 on-licences were extinguished by Quarter Sessions in London in the years 1905 to 1909. The refusal of a renewal of an on-licence by Quarter Sessions must be accompanied by compensation, which is met out of a fund provided by an annual charge on all on-licensed premises which were in existence before the passing of the Act. The amount of the compensation awarded, according to section 2 of the Act, should represent the difference between the value of the premises as licensed and their value without a licence, plus the amount of any depreciation of trade fixtures arising by reason of refusal to renew the licence.

The following summary shows the number of on-licences extinguished and the compensation awarded in each year since the Act came into operation. Four licences have been excluded for the following reasons. In one case the character of the licence was quite distinct from all other licences extinguished; two cases have been referred to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for settlement of compensation; and in the remaining case, the premises having been pulled down, the licence was allowed to lapse and no compensation was claimed or awarded.

In a way, it is rather lucky for the reputation of our National Drama that the review of the year, as written for WHITAKER'S ALMANACK, should cover the space of twelve months between November 1909 and November 1910 instead of a season. For it was distinctly a year with the character of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which play, by the way, was produced in January by Mr. H. B. Irving at the Queen's Theatre. If I had merely to deal with the productions of the winter 1909–1910 I could ring some peals of joy, for the winter gave us a rich harvest. That is where Dr. Jekyll comes in. But the current season, which began in September last, the Mr. Hyde of my story, has been so lamentable, so abundant in failures, so poor in yield, that the Press has frequently propounded the question, What is amiss with our drama?

In order not to encourage the pessimist, who is the worst counsellor of art, I would answer that question by saying, there is nothing amiss, there is only abeyance. And it is a common thing, in the history of art as well as of nature, that a prosperous crop is followed by a year of dearth. For the drama like the soil, particularly in our country, where new processes a reconstantly applied, is apt to give unequal results. And it is quite possible that, if three months hence I had to deal with the same subject, I could have pointed to all-round well-being.

For the main facts are these: Our patent dramatists, those who have made career and record, have planned work but not been in readiness. Only Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, of the phalanx comprising himself, Sir Arthur Pinero, Mr. Claude Carton, Mr. Haddon Chambers, and Mr. Alfred Sutro, is represented by the revivals of "The Case of Rebellious Susan" and "The Liars," and two one-act plays, "The Knife," which was of no importance, and "Fall in, Rookies!" which, written for the music-hall, was a stirring appeal to the military spirit of the nation. Mr. Barrie, too, was represented by two plays in one act—the one a parody entitled "Old Friends," the other "The Twelve Pound Look," which was a delightful satire on the possibilities of matrimonial separation.

So practically, we have received little fare from our leading dramatists; but we are told that the coming year will prove that they are as alive as ever.

What then were the salient features of the space under survey? They were three in number and all of them significant.

The revival of melodrama indicated in a former record has become intensified. And it is pleasant to find that that healthy vigorous writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has supplied two great successes of the year, "The House of Temperley," a fine reproduction of the life of our immediate forebears, and "The Speckled Band," a stirring story, forcibly told.

The second feature, which shall have precedence for reasons of gallantry, is the progress of women as playwrights. The Stage Society in producing Lady Bell's "The Way the Money Goes" gave a vivid picture of the life, the poverty, and the struggles of the toilers in the provinces. Miss Symonds, better known to fame as George Paston, made people laugh with an irresponsible comedy entitled "The Naked Truth" (in collaboration with Mr. W. P. Maxwell), and exhibited great dramatic instinct and courage of opinion in "Nobody's Daughter," a play in which the somewhat hackneyed theme of the love-child is treated freshly and in an up-to-date manne with many a smile between moments of grea emotion. If I leave the finest play written b an English woman to the last, it is because t forms the bridge to the most cogent argument i favour of the past year—its third great feature the establishment of the Repertory Theatre b Mr. Charles Frohman. That Repertory Theatre I am sorry to say, has not borne the materi fruit which it deserved, mainly I fear becaus two works of its most important writers an leading spirits were found wanting.

Mr. G. B. Shaw in "Misalliance" convince even his most ardent admirers that mere talk however sparkling, neither makes a play no proves intensely amusing; and "The Madra House," by Mr. Granville Barker, in its tur proved that the imitation of Shaw is likely to b disastrous to his innate dramatic talent.

When Mr. Barker is himself, as in "The Voyse Inheritance," he is a powerful dramatist in small compass; but when he leavens his actio to excess with abstruse conversation of whic only Shaw is the master, he fails. But if th Repertory Theatre had done nothing else tha illuminate our drama by Miss Baker's "Chains and Mr. Galsworthy's "Justice" there would b ample justification for its existence, together wit the forcible evidence that at the present momer we have among the younger generation dramatis of great importance. "Justice" was the traged of our judicial system and of prison life. It one of those plays that mark an epoch. It w heart-rending to a degree, but the very fact th it hurt caused remedy.

It is said that the present Home Secretar founded his welcome prison reforms on wh was imparted to him by Mr. Galsworthy magnificent effort. That may be truth or it ma be legend, but the fact remains that, in spite the short run of the play, it turned the eyes our public—aided by the press—to that nethe world in our midst where human beings by th law are transformed into automatons.

"Chains," dealing with the boredom, the s responsibilities, the hopeless horizon of life the genteel middle class, has not so deeply e gaged public attention. But it is one of tho works which will find rank in our future Nation Theatre as representative of a class in co temporary society.

The reason why the Repertory Theatre, whi was wound up with an excellent revival of S Arthur Pinero's "Trelawney of the Wells," d not succeed as it deserved, that is to say, d not make the two ends meet for its maintenanc is not far to seek. It had no time to fasten i roots in the dramatic soil, and it suffer materially from the non-success of the Shaw a Barker plays, as well as a poor comedy by M Anthony Hope and Mr. Cosmo Stuart. In oth words, Mr. Frohman, the astutest manager our time, who deserves great thanks for h efforts, made a mistake in policy. Instead governing the Repertory Theatre on catho lines, it ran into a certain groove—it was a co tinuation of the Vedrenne-Barker campai without its scope. For this reason it is deep to be deplored that Mr. Frohman gave up t game after one season, for the lessons of the fi might have been a guide for the second, a founded the happy combination of art and pop larity. Before leaving the Repertory Theatre, should be mentioned that the one-act play titled "The Sentimentalists," by George Meredit moved emphatically that a great writer may not necessarily be a dramatist of consideration. It was not a happy thought to drag the name of George Meredith to the stage, where it had never gone during his lifetime.

Mr. Somerset Maugham, who still stands alone as a dramatist of many moods, gave two serious plays. The one, "The Tenth Man," may be dismissed as a drama of many recollections and little sincerity. The other, "Grace," is of greater importance, because it introduces the great question of "Shall she confess?" Unfortunately in this play Mr. Maugham, the artist, has allowed himself to be influenced by consideration of what the public wants. Thus, in spite of the public response, the artistic judgment on this work must be that it does not stand on the same high level as "A Man of Honour," that masterpiece far too little appreciated in the days when Mr. Maugham struggled in vain for fame, yet deserved it to the full.

Mr. Locke, too, failed in "The Man from the Sea" for want of sincerity. The back of the play was literally broken in the crucial scene between two lovers, when the man resorted to a dastardly device to curb her spirit. Up to that point the public was under the spell of Mr. Locke's charm of writing, but no sooner had the lie crossed the footlights than the fate of the play was sealed. Only geniuses (and melodramatists) can bamboozle the public into swallowing a camel.

Besides the Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's, the revival of Henry VIII. was one of the notable events of the year, and it is indeed of happy augury that one can say that Shakespeare no longer spells ruin. True, one would have preferred such success to have been achieved by a work worthier of the national poet and less spurious of descent, for now one may be uncommonly inclined to believe that it was the show, combined with the acting, which was the thing instead of the play. However, knowing the attitude of the English public towards serious plays, it behoves us to think in modesty that we should be thankful for small mercies, and that, at any rate, it is possible to maintain Shakespeare for some time in the Metropolis without fear that loyalty to the bard must mean sacrifice to his propagandist.

Shakespeare leads me to another classic of more modern days, who after some years of preliminary struggle has become a favourite of our public. I refer to Maeterlinck, whom everybody knows or affects to know, and whose "Blue Bird," a fairy tale of great fascination, and full of imagination, made the fortune of the Haymarket, and no doubt induced Mr. Trench definitely to prefer the old system of long runs to the revival of Repertoire. The same theatre fared well with "Priscilla Runs Away," hugely enjoyed by the crowd, but in my estimation wholly unworthy of the author of "Elizabeth and her German Garden." A play like this indicates retrogression, and almost makes one doubtful whether we live in the twentieth century or in the mid-Victorian era, when our drama was unconsidered and child-like in nature.

During the year we have had the now customary visits of the Irish Players and the Manchester Repertory Theatre. The latter is always welcome, because it places before our eyes, modestly but efficiently, works of men who stimulate thoughts and have all too soon departed from the London boards. I refer to the works of the late St. John Hankin and to Galsworthy's "Silver Box." The Irish Players by their various productions demonstrated the progress of writers like Lady Gregory and Padric Collum and the lost hopes caused by the death of J. M. Synge, whose "Deirdre of the Sorrows," unfinished as it was, was fraught with tragedy, and the dangers of vacillating and frequently changing management. In spite of our journalistic encomiums, quite natural where guests are concerned, it must be admitted that the efficiency of the Irish performances has somewhat declined; that the stage management leaves much to be desired, and that the amateur without pretension was superior to the amateur promoted to be an unfinished actor.

The Stage Society produced, besides the play of Lady Bell already mentioned and Mr. Ashley Dukes' promising but immature "Civil War," a cycle of one-act plays by Felix Salten which introduced a new humour of a new man; and among others Ludwig Thoma's "Champions of Morality," which hardly obtained a succès d'estime, because most of the actors failed to understand the nature of the play and its surroundings, and substituted grim earnest for sarcastic humour.

A series of revivals of Robertson's plays from "Cast" to "Society" at the Coronet should not be forgotten, because it was creditable in every sense to Mr. Robert Arthur, the impresario, and to the memory of that remarkable dramatist who began his career with the Bancrofts at the old Prince of Wales's Theatre. Of course, some of the methods and many of the ideas of Robertson would appear to be obsolete now, but they have withstood in a remarkable manner the attacks of time, because in some ways the author was a prophet of things to come, and because there is in every one of his plays the touch of human nature as Shakespeare characterises it.

Of American importations and adaptations it is hardly necessary to speak at length. The American drama is rarely appreciated here because its strenuousness and happy-go-lucky progress of action do not appeal to the taste of our public. When an American play is good, in spite of what our cousins may say, it is estimated here at its full value. "A Woman's Way," for instance, although by no means above our native comédies de salon, was praised by the press and patronised by the public. Of adaptations in the old sense of the word, it may fairly be said that they have received the death-blow during the past year; there have been ghastly failures and, like a bloody war, they have borne the healthy fruit of recognition. Henceforth it will not be necessary to deprive a foreign play of its nature in order to render it accessible to our public, and we may be credited that we are well able to enjoy a French or a German play, albeit somewhat whitewashed as in the case of Miss Gladys Unger's capital "Inconstant George," and Mr. Michael Morton's "Tantalising Tommy," it translated with tact and discretion.

In conclusion, it seems fair to assert that if our drama has not made marked progress during the last twelve months of which the salient events have been recorded, there is no reason to view the future with anxiety. True, compared with some former years, the credit balance has somewhat shrunk, but that may be merely accidental, and the manifestation of such restraint as heralds future advance by leaps and bounds.

The Industrial Farm Village, Duxhurst, Reigate.

THE Industrial Farm Colony at Duxhurst, Reigate, for the reception of Inebriate Women, was founded in 1894 by Lady Henry Somerset.

Before the present Inebriate Acts were in existence, the physical side of drunkenness had been almost entirely overlooked. It was dealt with as a moral evil, and imprisonment or fines were the sole methods by which the drunkard was to be coerced into sobriety. This mode of treatment had, however, long been acknowledged to be a failure. The Farm Colony at Duxhurst was founded with the idea of attempting to deal with the evil from a new point of view; and subsequent legislation is an indication that the attempt was considered successful.

The plan on which this Colony is worked is that of a model village standing among the Surrey hills on a farm of 180 acres. The village consists of home-like cottages grouped round an open quadrangle with a small church adjacent, and, at a short distance, the Superintendent's cottage and the Chaplain's lodge. In each cottage about ten or twelve patients are received, and are presided over by a Cottage Sister. Attached to the village also are a dining hall, kitchens, a recreation hall, laundries, workshops and workrooms, together with a hospital into which every patient is received on first arrival in the Colony.

The patients are engaged in outdoor work in the gardens and on the farm, and are taught weaving, embroidery, basket-making, and domestic employments.

The claim of Duxhurst on public sympathy rests on its being the first home in England for adults, where village life has taken the place of the formal institution, and the first place where outdoor work was given to women—a syst now being adopted very generally. The patie are not restricted by bars or locks, and yet number of those who have absconded since opening of the Village Colony is a negligi quantity.

During the years that the Colony has b working sixty per cent. of the women who h spent one year within its shelter are stanc well. The history of every patient who lea is carefully traced, and each one is correspon with and often visited.

The life on the Farm Colony is for childre well as women. Twenty-seven are received f separate home. Their presence is essentia normal domestic life, and it brings joy brightness as nothing else can. They are o the best and most inspiring object-lesson women can look upon. Many of them are by the National Society for the Prevention Cruelty to Children, and are brought up in Colony. Some of the mothers also who ar the Colony for a longer period under sentence the Inebriate Acts (1879) have been allowe bring their children, and these are cared fo the Children's Home.

A weekly payment is charged for all patie but in most cases this does not cover the expe which has to be supplemented by contribut from outside sources.

At some distance from the Colony, standin beautiful and retired grounds, is a large cou house for the reception of women of wealthier classes.

The Superintendent will at all times be to give any information. Visitors can see place at any time.

THE statistics of wealth usually contained in the annual reports of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue are to some extent incomplete for the year 1909-10 owing to the delay in the passing of the Finance Bill of 1909. The Budget estimate of the amount receivable by the Exchequer from Income Tax in the year 1909-10 was £37,100,000, but the amount paid into the Exchequer was only £13,295,000, with a net receipt for the year of £12,752,098. In the period from April 1 to September 30, 1910, however, the revenue from Property and Income Tax was £30,924,000, as compared with £5,006,000 for the corresponding period of the previous year, but the accounts do not show how much of the receipt in the half year ended September 30 last was on account of the year ended March 31 last. The gross income from all classes of profits brought under the review of the Department in the year 1908-9 (the latest date for which the return has been published) was £1,009,935,000, and the net income on which tax was received was in that year £693,323,000.

Income Exceeding £1,000,000,000.

The gross income had then for the first time exceeded a thousand millions. In 1873-4, when incomes of £100 and upwards were charged, the figures were £549,423,000 gross and £481,602,000 net. The produce for each penny of tax in 1873-4 was £1,854,000 and the population 32½ millions. In 1908-9 the population was 44½ millions, and the produce for each penny of the tax £2,784,000. The figures for quinquennial periods since 1873-4 are as follows:—

Year.	Net Income.	Produce for each Penny.	Population Estimated.
1908-9	£490,425,774	£1,879,073	33,943,000
1903-4	531,129,500	2,016,785	35,449,000
1898-9	541,647,181	2,045,500	36,881,000
1893-4	525,840,000	2,191,000	38,490,000
1887-8	525,211,200	2,180,380	40,380,000
1883-4	615,012,373	2,562,551	42,371,000
1878-9	693,323,082	2,784,063	44,546,000

Since 1895-6 the produce for each penny of the tax has increased in each year. In former years this has occasionally declined. The average annual rates of increase during the thirty years have been (1) of population, 1·1 per cent.; (2) of net income, 1·4 per cent.; (3) the produce for each penny of tax, 1·6 per cent.

It is probable that the net income and the produce for each penny of the tax in 1909-10 may show increase at about the same rate as in past years, but in considering how far returns for Income Tax may be taken as evidence of the increased wealth of the nation it must be borne in mind that the transfer of business to a large extent from firms and individuals to joint stock companies during the last twenty-five or thirty years has been much to the advantage of the Exchequer. Companies for the most part publish their accounts, and shareholders usually desire that profits shall be divided closely. Many companies declare their dividends free of Income Tax, which is thus collected at the source. Companies have also displaced a great number of small traders, who instead of being employers have become employed, and the exact amount of whose salaries is returned by the employer. Also within the last two or three years all employers have been required to state exactly particulars respecting persons in their employment who are receiving income liable to be taxed, and a very large amount of income which formerly escaped taxation has thus been brought into account. This has been especially the case with some classes of skilled labour which is paid for as piecework, and persons whose remuneration is derived chiefly or to a considerable extent from gratuities which amount sometimes to an annual income far beyond the exempted limit are now charged with Income Tax.

Cost of Living.

There is, perhaps, a general belief that the cost of living has increased during the last twenty-five to thirty years, and is much higher than it was fifty or sixty years ago. It is commonly supposed that house rent and rates, especially, have risen, but although this does not seem to admit of doubt in respect of business premises in certain positions, it does not appear to be fully justified by statistics of the Inhabited House Duty, referred to hereafter, that house rent generally is much higher. Rates have certainly increased, but they include some services which formerly were discharged by the householder, and others of great importance, such as lighting, the maintenance of roads, drainage and sanitation generally, which are now more efficiently performed. Education is now to a large extent a charge upon the rates.

Prices of food and fuel which fluctuate chiefly owing to market changes do not seem to have varied widely during recent years, but are perhaps somewhat higher. Beer, wine, spirits and tobacco are affected from time to time by changes in Excise and Customs Duties, but these usually have at the same time an effect upon consumption, and if prices rise the quantity used is less, or a cheaper quality is used. As an item of the cost of living the expenditure on wine and spirits, and perhaps also on beer, has probably decreased. Clothing, generally, is perhaps cheaper, if perhaps also less durable than formerly. Books and newspapers are certainly cheaper. Travel by railway is on most lines cheaper than at any time since railways were established. Stage coach fares and the hire of post chaises and horses hardly varied during the last century, and the service and accommodation were little improved. Railway fares have declined, and the service and accommodation have been so much improved that the third class of to-day is in many cases preferable to the first class of earlier days. It may be claimed, however, that the cost of travel for amusement or recreation is not, strictly speaking, part of the necessary cost of living.

The development of cheaper and more rapid means of communication by the tube railways and tramways can hardly fail to have effect upon house rent and the cost of living. Insurance against almost every kind of risk that can be suggested can now be effected, and premium on insurance forms part of the expenditure of most persons, and is accounted an item in the cost of living. It might not be easy to define exactly what does constitute the cost of living, or to what extent it has increased or decreased from year to year, but it can hardly be doubted that the conditions of life as to health and comfort have generally improved in this country.

Sources of Income.

The total gross income, £1,009,935,926, brought under the review of the Department for the year 1908-09 (the latest available) was made up as follows of profits from

Ownership of Lands	£51,894,826
Occupation of Lands (mainly farmers' profits)	17,386,798
Ownership of Houses	216,664,907
Other Property	1,329,041
British, Indian, Colonial, and Foreign Government Securities	47,470,976
Business concerns, professions and employments	565,601,321
Salaries of Government, Corporation and Company Officials	109,588,057
	£1,009,935,926

As compared with the year 1903-4, when the total gross income brought under review was £902,758,585, the profits from the ownership of lands were £600,000 less in 1908-9 and from the occupation of lands £160,000 less, but the ownership of houses showed an increase in gross income in the five years of £18,700,000. Profits from British, Indian, Colonial and Foreign Government Securities had increased in the five years by £2,500,000, and salaries of Government, Corporation and Company officials were in 1903-4 £86,079,000, and in 1907-8 £109,588,000, with an increase of 23½ millions in the five years, at the rate of more than 5 per cent. per annum. The profits from businesses, concerns, professions and employments were £502,000,000 in 1903-4 and £565,601,000 in 1907-8, with an increase at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum.

Income from abroad, so far as it is identified, was as follows :—

	Indian, Colonial or Foreign Government Securities.	Colonial or Foreign (other than Government) and Railways.	Total.
1886-7	£24,036,418	£20,471,584	£44,508,002

1908-9	32,241,680	56,595,713	88,837,393

The increase of about £3,700,000 in 1908-9 over the preceding year was derived as to £1,900,000 from railways out of the United Kingdom, as to other £1,900,000 from Indian, Colonial and Foreign investments other than Government securities, as to £100,000 from Indian Government securities, and as to £300,000 from Colonial Government securities. There was a decrease of £500,000 in the income from Foreign Government securities.

From 1886-7 to 1904-5 the increase of income from abroad was about £1,160,000 a year, and from 1905 to 1908 about £6,000,000 a year, falli in 1908-9 to £3,700,000, half of which was fr railways out of the United Kingdom and half fr Indian, Colonial and Foreign investments oth than Government securities. During the ni teen years under notice the increase in inco from Indian Government Stocks and guarant railways has been less than £1,250,000, and fr Colonial or Foreign Government securities l than £7,000,000, whilst in the income from Colo and Foreign securities (other than Governme and from railways out of the United Kingd the increase has been £36,000,000, of wh probably nearly half has been due to railways North and South America and elsewhere abro

Development of Rubber Estates.

A decision of considerable interest was ported by the Commissioners of Income Tax 1910 respecting a claim on the part of Vallambrosa Rubber Company, which owns works a rubber estate in the Malay States. the year 1904-05 the Company made a loss an 1905-06 a profit. The Company in making ret of its profits claimed to deduct expendit applicable to the whole estate, but the Dist Commissioners proposed to allow only one-seve on the ground that only one-seventh of the est was producing rubber, and the Company's cl was allowed. The Company's output of rut for 1909 was 272,741 lbs., and the estimated put for 1910 was 395,000 lbs. The dividenc 1909 was 2*s.* 5½*d.* on each 2*s.* share and the p of the 2*s.* share has been 4*os.* each. decision will affect many other companies enga in developing plantations.

The table below gives particulars of the ass ments to Income Tax for 1908-9, so far ascertainable at present, of the profits f businesses and professions.

The gross assessment of income of pu companies was £291,035,167.

The number of assessments of persons v incomes exceeding £50,000 each was in 19 twenty, in 1907-8 fourteen, and in 190 twenty, but the number of assessments of fi with incomes over £50,000 each was ninety in 1906-7, ninety-nine in 1907-8, and seve nine in 1908-9.

The total number of assessments for emplo in the United Kingdom in 1908-9 was 585 as compared with 513,690 in 1907-8, and t total gross income was in 1908-9 £136,656 as compared with £123,413,776 in 1907-8. cluding 471,564 Government, Corporation, Public Company officials, with a gross incom £109,588,057, reduced by abatements and o deductions to £60,611,043.

Income Tax in Foreign Countries.

There is no income tax proper in Russia, Portugal, Hungary, Belgium, France, or the United States of America, although each of these countries, except the last named, exacts a contribution from income arising from shares or debentures of companies, income from Government securities (whether of the country concerned or of countries foreign to it) being usually exempt.

Income tax on a graduated scale ranging up to 20 per cent. is imposed in Spain and Italy; but this high rate is stated to be productive in each of these countries of much evasion of the duty, and respecting this interesting evidence was given before the Select Committee on Income Tax of the House of Commons in 1906. Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Austria, and the various States of the German Empire have graduated income taxes, and of approximately the same type. In each of these countries the exemption point is low compared with the £160 of the United Kingdom, ranging from £3 10*s.* in Bavaria to £55 in Sweden and Norway. The Bavarian limit is exceptionally low, the limit in Saxony being £20, in Wurtemberg and Hesse £25, in Denmark £39, in Prussia and Baden £45, in Austria £52, and in Norway and Sweden £55. On the other hand, the maximum rate is comparatively low, ranging on the largest incomes from 2½ per cent. in Denmark to 3½ per cent. in Baden, 4 per cent. in Prussia and Norway, somewhat under 5 per cent. in Hesse, Austria, and Holland, and 5 per cent. in Wurtemberg, Saxony, and Sweden.

Income tax in Switzerland varies in each canton. It is generally not excessive, although ranging up to 12·8 per cent. (2*s.* 6½*d.* in the £) in the Canton of Tessin, but in the latter case it is understood that lax administration is responsible for the high nominal rate.

In all of these countries in which income tax is levied there is a graduation in the rate of the tax and a differentiation between earned and unearned income.

Proposals for the establishment of an income tax are again before the French Legislature, which has rejected such proposals in the past, but which now appears to be inclined to pass them into law.

Inhabited House Duty.

The latest year for which the statistics relating to Inhabited House Duty are complete is the year 1908–9. In that year the net receipt of the tax in Great Britain (the duty is not levied in Ireland) amounted to £1,939,907, as against a Budget Estimate of £1,900,000. This sum represented the yield of the tax on 1,950,665 premises of an aggregate annual value of £94,006,907.

In connection with this tax, the Inland Revenue Department takes cognizance of the numbers and annual value of all premises in Great Britain, whether chargeable to the duty or not. Premises used solely for trade purposes, hospitals, schools, Royal and Diplomatic residences and houses of a less gross annual value than £20 are exempt. Private dwelling houses of which the gross annual value amounts to £20 or over are charged to the tax at the full rate (3*d.* in the £ up to £40, 6*d.* in the £ from £40 to £60, and 9*d.* on those exceeding £60), and residential shops, hotels and refreshment houses, lodging houses, and farmhouses occupied by tenant farmers or farm servants at two-thirds of the full rate in their respective classes. Premises exempt from duty numbered 6,995,435 and were of an aggregate annual value of £67,077,589, and the private houses exempt from duty numbered 6,281,260, of an annual value of £62,374,521. Of the rather more than 7¾ millions of private dwelling houses in Great Britain somewhat less than 1 in 5 (19·2 per cent.) was of a gross annual value of over £20. The average number of persons in each dwelling house occupied is 5·2.

An Old Tax.

This tax has been imposed in one form or another for over two hundred years. It may be said to have had its origin in the Hearth Tax imposed in 1662; this was a charge of 2*s.* for every hearth or stove in every dwelling house. In this form the tax became exceedingly unpopular and "grievous to the people," and was repealed in 1688. In 1696 a duty of 2*s.* was imposed on all houses, with higher rates for houses having more than a certain number of windows, and continued in this form until 1747, when the window duty became a separate tax. It took its present form in 1778, when the assessment was regulated by the annual value and not by reference to the number of windows. In this form the tax continued until 1834, when it was repealed. It was re-imposed without the window tax and in its present form—except for the differential rate in favour of houses from £20 to £60 in annual value, the reduced rates for which were introduced in 1890—in 1851.

This reduction in rate in respect of smaller houses resulted in an immediate fall in the yield of over £450,000, representing a loss to the Exchequer, after allowing for the normal annual increase in houses, of roughly half-a-million sterling. Not until 1908 did the increase in the number of houses paying duty suffice to make good this loss in the yield of the tax. It is, therefore, not possible to draw from the returns during this period any definite figures of the comparative housing of the population.

A Declining Rate of Increase.

During the last few years, however, the increase in houses shows a tendency to restrict itself to the increase in population. The annual increase in the population is 1·1 per cent., and is almost a constant, but the ratio of increase of inhabited houses, especially those charged to house duty, shows a decline in the percentage of increase, and a similar and somewhat more marked tendency is apparent in the ratio of increase of values.

The tendency to diminution of the rate of increase is least marked in the class which includes trade premises. Business premises are increasing both in numbers and in value at a greater rate than private dwellings.

Licensed premises and other refreshment houses show a slight but steady decline both in numbers and value.

Rent as an Item in Cost of Living.

The Tables relating to private houses show that both the numbers and annual values of large houses—those of a greater annual value than £100 — are slowly decreasing both in number and value. Houses of this class are increasingly difficult to let at a rental commensurate with their capital cost, particularly where it is essential that the house should be properly "kept up." In many instances owners have now to face the alternative of taking a much lower rental for the house as a whole or letting it piecemeal as "flats" or "tenements." In either case the neighbourhood "goes down," but in the latter case much more rapidly than the former. Higher rents as an item in the "increased cost of living" appear to be due to personal rather than material causes; the bath-room, the hot-water service, the dainty fireplaces, the sanitary accommodation, and the interior decoration, which a few years ago were regarded as but luxuries for the few, have already come to be considered as comforts for the many, and are rapidly becoming required as necessities for all, and are being fitted to even the smallest of houses in urban districts—to which the increase of population and housing is almost entirely confined. On the other hand, large palatial establishments are in not a few cases being let at a rental insufficient to provide for more than the bare upkeep of the fabric, to prevent the loss which would be entailed by their being allowed to fall into decay. Numerically, of course, these represent but a very small proportion, and their decline is to some extent accounted for by the growth of flats, the increased habit of frequent travel—which the motor-car has fostered largely—and to some extent also the domestic servant difficulty.

The increase both in numbers and value houses charged to duty is in houses up to £ in annual value, and over 85 per cent. of t increase by houses under the value of £41 p annum. The proportional increase is greatest houses of the annual value from £25 to £ Flats, although showing a fair increase, are n increasing in anything like the same degree th they were a few years ago.

According to the Inland Revenue Report, the are still within the Metropolis twelve farmhous occupied by tenant farmers and charged Inhabited House Duty, the average annual val being £46. The number in this schedule is, course, rapidly diminishing, and will doubtl soon cease to exist. How many persons cou locate the twelve still remaining?

The exceptionally large sum brought in account in 1901–1902 included the great land estate of which the Duke of Westminster, w died in 1899, had been tenant for life. T decline in the capital valuation of realty in t last two years is noteworthy. There have be considerable variations in the capital value timber from £143,000 in 1900–1 and £177,000 1903–4 to £28,133 in 1909–10.
